WOMAN SITTING IN HOME KILLED BY STRAY BULLET

Miss Stephanie Guerdan, 32, Dies Almost Instantly From Wound Below Heart.

UNIDENTIFIED JULY 4 CELEBRANT BLAMED

Police Canvass Neighborhood but Find no Clews as to Who Fired Fatal Shot.

Miss Stephanie Guerdan, 32 years old, a milliner, was killed yesterday afternoon when struck as she sat in the dining room of her home at 1828A Iowa avenue by a stray bullet fired by a careless Fourth of July celebrant.

The bullet, steel-jacketed variety, pierced Miss Guerdan's left arm above the elbow, entered the left chest and ranged downward, lodging just below the heart. Death was almost instantaneous.

Police made a thorough canvass of the neighborhood immediately after the shooting but failed to obtain any clews as to who fired the shot.

Miss Guerdan was seated at a table near a screen door leading to a back porch making a dress when she was shot at 1:20 p. m. A sister, Irma Guerdan, and her father, Frank E. Guerdan, were sitting on the back porch and the woman's stepmother was in the yard in the rear of the house.

Immediately after being shot she ran into the bathroom where Irma, attracted by her screams, "I've been shot," found her bathing her wounds. A physician was summoned, but she was dead when he arrived.

Guerdan said that children in the neighborhood had kept up an almost continuous discharging of fireworks throughout the day and he was unable to state from where the bullet was fired.

Examination showed that the bullet went through the screen door before striking Miss Guerdan. The shot was fired from some point east of the Guerdan flat, on the second floor.

SCOPES DENIES ATTEMPT TO TAKE CASE TO U. S. COURT

Jury for Evolution Trial to Be Chosen From 50 Veniremen in County Court Monday.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 4.—John T. Scopes, defendant in the Tennessee evolution case, has signed no petition for an injunction seeking to remove the trial from state to Federal courts, and he knew nothing of the proposed action until he read of it in a newspaper, he declared here tonight.

"I am leaving the legal aspects of the case entirely to my attorneys, and should they think it best for me to file such a petition I am willing to sign it," Scopes asserted.

A jury for the trial of John T. Scopes on charges of violating the Tennessee law, prohibiting the teaching of evolution in public schools of the state, will be selected Monday at a regularly convened session of County Court, it became known here today. At the session 50 veniremen will be chosen from which the trial jury will be designated.

PUBLISHER LEAVES $9,500,000

Sir Edward Hulton Makes $5000 Gift to Church.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 4.—Sir Edward Hulton, former newspaper proprietor, who died May 23, left an estate of about £2,000,000 ($9,500,000), the probate of his will reveals. A bequest of £5000 is made to the Catholic church of Leatherhead, Surrey, where Sir Edward resided.

Sir Edward Hulton at one time owned the Evening Standard, the Daily Sketch and the Sunday Herald, of London, the Daily Dispatch and the Evening Chronicle, of Manchester, and several other newspapers. He sold them in 1923 to Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothermere.

England Invaded by Mosquitoes.

LONDON, July 4.—Britain is getting not a little alarmed over a plague of mosquitoes, and demands are being made all over the country for concerted action by local authorities against the unwelcome visitors. In some districts on the east coast of Britain it has been found necessary to equip beds with mosquito netting. In other districts residents are already complaining bitterly of the inconvenience which has been caused by the mosquito bites.

PARESIS PATIENTS APPARENTLY CURED BY MALARIA GERMS

Thirty Return to Work After Treatment at Brooklyn Hospital.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Thirty paresis patients at the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, apparently have been cured by infecting them with malaria germs, it was announced today. This method of treatment, developed by Prof. Wagner von Jauregg of Vienna, has been used extensively in this country for two years, but it is doubtful if a higher degree of success ever has been attained with it than the 30 recoveries out of 60 patients at the Long Island College Hospital who were infected with malaria.

The 30 of the 60 patients who made the most progress at the Long Island College Hospital under the malaria germ treatment are now sufficiently well to resume employment. After the paresis patient had malaria germs injected into his veins an incubation period of between seven to 14 days follows. The length of the period does not seem to have any bearing on the condition of the patient or to any other factor that can be ascertained.

The treatment at the Long Island College Hospital is the result of a trip to Austria made by Dr. Henry Morton, professor of genito-urinary and social disease at the hospital, and his study in Vienna with Prof. Wagner von Jauregg.

SHORTAGE OF RAIN IN 11 MIDDLE WESTERN STATES

Each Farm Lacks 161 Million Gallons of Normal Preccipitation According to Report.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Eleven middle Western states are short more than 161,000,000 gallons of rain per farm for the growing season this year, the Blue Valley Creamery Institute estimated yesterday, basing estimates on Weather Bureau reports for the last 83 days. The shortage ranged from 1,190,000 gallons in Wisconsin to 52,400,000 gallons in Nebraska. Other states in which the deficiency was estimated follow:

Illinois, 10,567,000; Indiana, 14,920,000; Iowa, 6,987,000; Michigan, 7,519,000; Minnesota, 7,131,000; Missouri, 2,311,000; North Dakota, 8,844,000; Ohio, 10,284,000; South Dakota, 38,827,000.

700-YEAR-OLD TREE UPROOTED

"Giant Oak" of Visalia, Cal., Had Spread of 150 Feet.

By the Associated Press.

VISALIA, Cal., July 4.—An oak tree having a circumference of 37 feet 4 inches and a spread of 150 feet was blown down in a windstorm which struck near here yesterday. Known as the "Giant Oak" and considered locally as the largest living oak in the world, it was thought to be between 700 and 1000 years old. The storm caused little other damage.

Famous Warship Presented to State of Own Name.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 4.—The historic old battleship Oregon, which lies dismantled in the Williamette River here, was presented yesterday to the State of Oregon by the United States Government to be used as a relic.

The presentation was made by Rear Admiral J. V. Chase, Commandant of the Thirteenth Naval District at Bremerton, Wash. The ship was accepted on behalf of the State by U. S. Senator Robert Nelson Stanfield.

KINGS AND RULERS GREET COOLIDGE ON 53D BIRTHDAY

Felicitations in Thousands by Cable, Telegraph and Mail Pour in Upon President.

DWIGHT DAVIS MAY BE WAR SECRETARY

Jimmie Walker, Chubby Lad of 15, Born July 4, Is Honor Guest of Day at Swampscott.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 4.—President Coolidge celebrated his fifty-third birthday by reading some of the several thousand birthday cards and telegrams which reached him from all parts of the world, paying his first visit to the executive offices in Lynn, and resting.

Cablegrams were received from Kings and ruling heads of virtually all the nations. Other messages bore the names of prominent Americans, among them being one from Judge Elbert H. Gary.

For dinner tonight he invited Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, Secretary and Mrs. Sanders and Capt. and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews to share a birthday cake with him aboard the Mayflower, which is anchored in Marblehead Bay, four miles from White Court. Capt. Andres, his naval aid, commands the yacht.

Ever since he dropped in on the Marine camp without announcement, the President's staff at the executive offices has kept an alert lookout, but Mr. Coolidge arrived early this morning, 15 minutes before Secretary Sanders made his appearance. He sat at the secretary's desk, glanced over the mail, signed some papers and commented approvingly upon the arrangement of the office.

Planned to Be With Father.

President Coolidge had planned to be with Col. Coolidge in Plymouth today, but the latter's illness caused him to made a hurried trip into Vermont early in the week and he abandoned his original intention of passing his birthday at home.

While the President was at the offices comment was declined upon a report that Secretary Weeks, who is convalescing at West Gloucester, has formally submitted his resignation. The President, it was said, always refrains from discussing such reports on the theory that if he adopted the practice he would be confronted constantly with rumors, some of which might prove embarrassing.

It is the understanding here that Secretary Wills will not resume active duties at the War Department, but that his retirement from the Cabinet will not be announced for some time.

It was indicated at the executive offices that there has been no formal exchange of correspondence between the President and Mr. Weeks and, so far as the President's assistants know, the situation has been unchanged since Mr. Coolidge reached Swampscott. Secretary Weeks' resignation is expected before the President returns to Washington.

Dwight Davis May Suceed Weeks.

Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War and now Acting Secretary in Weeks' absence, is regarded as President Coolidge's most probable choice when a vacancy occurs in the War Department. The revival of reports that the Secretary's resignation is imminent resulted, it is understood here, from the recent sale of his house in Washington.

An interesting report is that Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes will retire from the Supreme Court before the court begins its fall session. Justice Holmes is 84 years old. In case Justice Holmes retires, the President, according to the same report, will appoint Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Massachusetts Supreme Court to fill the vacancy.

Jimmie Walker, a chubby-faced boy of 13, read in the papers the other day that President Coolidge would have a birthday on the Fourth of July. He hoarded his pennies and decided to give a birthday present.

Tonight Jimmie pipes away on a brand-new harmonica and munches cake crumbs.

It was Jimmie's birthday also, so he was up early. He got the treasured box of candy he had stowed away carefully last night and the note he had written and started off toward the big white house on the Wall of All-Night Clubhouse in Boston Chinatown Suddenly Falls During Holiday Merrymaking.

FIREMEN SEARCHING RUINS FOR VICTIMS

Many Thought to Be in Wreckage, From Which Twelve Dead Have Been Removed.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 5.—The thirteenth and fourteenth bodies were taken from the ruins of the collapsed Pickwick Club building late tonight. They were those of an unidentified white man and a negro. Several more bodies could be seen under the flooring, it was said.

Seven bodies, six men and one woman, had been taken from the wreckage a short time before. Six of the bodies were in a "pocket" in the ruins near where the front door had stood.

The buildings which housed the club, a Chinatown all-night resort, collapsed during a "night before the Fourth" dancing party early today.

Seventeen persons were taken to hospitals after they had been removed from the wreckage. Some of them were not expected to live. Police and firemen believed many more bodies would be found in the debris, although hope was held out that some of the victims would be alive. Voices, mostly women's, that were heard calling from beneath the wreckage during the early hours became silent later.

Three women and two men were previously taken from the ruins dead, or died a short time later. Five or six oother dead were seen in wreckage, according to rescue workers.

A search for an unknown number of dead was being pressed tonight. Throughout the day scores of firemen, aided by police officers, working with a big steamshovel and automobile trucks, bored their way into the tangled iron. At night they continued their work under a huge battery of searchlights. It was not expected that the full list of dead would be known before Sunday night.

Dead Removed.

The dead removed from the wreckage during the day included: Miss Loretta Keegan, 36 years old, of Cambridge; John J. Scales, 21, a singer in the dance club; Mrs. Edith Jordan of Somerville, a bride of a few months, who died from shock; W. H. Marr, 30, machinist of the United States Coast Guard cutter Mohava, and Pauline B. Luca and Patrolman Halloran.

The Pickwick Club on Beach street, near Washington, occupied the second story of the building, which once was the Dreyfus Hotel, meeting place of the sporting and theatrical fraternity. A Fourth of July program was in progress when shortly after 3 o'clock, without warning, the roof and all five stories went plunging downward in a twisted ruin.

One side wall next to which an excavation for a new building was being made, buckled in the middle and fell in on a part of the ruin. The front sagged forward and leaned at a crazy angle.

In a wild rush for safety many fled out of rear windows and down a fire escape. Others found their way down a flight of stairs close to a standing wall. Still others were hurled clear in the fall and suffered only slight injury.

Like Sound of Firecrackers.

The cracking of snapping timbers and rafters before the crash failed to alarm the dancers. The noise was drowned in part by the dance orchestra. Survivors said that they thought the crackling was the sound of fire crackers being exploded outside.

More than a hundred persons were in the club at the time and many other persons had been turned away just before the crash. Many, however, are believed to have escaped unharmed through windows in the walls that did not fall.

Estimates of the number buried beneath the wreckage varied from 30 to more than 100.

After lying pinned beneath pieces of metal roofing and heavy joists for nearly nine hours, Mrs. Edith Jordan, of Somerville, a suburb, was rescued about noon. She had talked to them and had been given water through a rubber tube. She had scarcely reached the hospital, however and asked to see her husband, who had escaped from the building, when she died.

Firemen had concentrated their

COLORS SPLOTCHED ALL OVER NEWEST SHOES IN PARIS

Silver, Gold, Red and Yellow Popular — Square-Toed Models Also in Style.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—Shoe fashions shown in the Modern Arts Exposition being held in Paris this summer have given marked impetus to the craze for gorgeous colors in footwear. Silver, gold, red, yellow and green are splotched all over the newest shoes seen at the center of fashion.

Seven of the best-dressed women in Paris appeared at the races last week wearing square-toed shoes just because a princess who often is in the society columns ordered a pair of that variety which were shown at the exposition. Actresses also are furthering the fashion by wearing colored kid shoes the exact shade of their gowns. About the only rule laid down is that shoes must be anything except dark colors, which shades are worn nevertheless by all except the few hundred who are supposed to be creating the styles.

YOUTH ELECTROCUTED WHEN IN A BATHTUB

Vibrator Which He Had Been Using Found Beside His Body.

Herbert Halpin, 18 years old, of 5361 Northland avenue, was electrocuted while in a bathtub at his home last night.

At 7:30 o'clock he entered the bathroom. An hour later, when he had not emerged, his brother, Joseph, entered the room and found him inert in the water-filled tub. Firemen were summoned and employed a pulmotor in unsuccessful efforts to revive him.

The electrocution is believed to have resulted from his use of an electric vibrator. The vibrator was found in the tub. Police conjectured insufficient insulation on the vibrator or a short circuit caused the fatal shock.

Halpin was a clerk at the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co., 4140 Forest Park.

12,000 TO 15,000 SUICIDES IN UNITED STATES IN YEAR

Petersburg, Va., Only City Among 80 Registered That Had None.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Petersburg, Va., was the only city among 80 in the United States that did not record a single suicide during 1924, Frederick L. Hoffmann, statistician of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., announced. He estimates that between 12,000 and 15,000 suicides occurred in the country last year.

Dr. Hoffman's calculations gave the country suicide rate of 15.3 per 100,000. Chicago reported a rate of 15.3 and the metropolitan area of New York 15.6.

TAMMANY AGAIN BOOMS AL SMITH FOR PRESIDENCY

Massachusetts Congressman Pledges Bay State's 36 Votes to Him in 1928 Convention.

ELECTION PREDICTED BY GOV. RITCHIE

Demonstration for New York Executive at July 4 Celebration Rivals Those at Last Convention.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Tammany Hall's celebration of Independence day turned into a second "Al Smith-for-President" boom today. Speakers from Gov. Ritchie of Maryland to chiefs of the historic Wigwam predicted that New York's Governor would be the next President of the United States.

Gov. Smith himself presided at the meeting. It was Tammany's 136th celebration of the Fourth of July.

Scenes reminiscent of national conventions were enacted when Congressman John L. Douglas of Boston promised that the Democrats of Massachusetts would again cast their votes for Gov. Smith at the Democratic convention in 1928.

Gov. Ritchie, referring to an occasion when he sat with Gov. Smith at a table in the White House two years ago at a Governor's conference, said:

"Maybe Al Smith will sit at that table again."

All of the speakers upheld Gov. Smith's stand on State rights, less Federal laws and regulations, opposition to Federal regulation of education and noninterference with private and parochial schools. Some of the speakers attacked the Ku Klux Klan and religious intolerance.

Gov. Ritchie's plea for a Federal Government of fewer laws was supported by Congressman Henry B. Steagall of Alabama, who denounced the centralization of power at Washington.

"Democracy demands that we trust the people back home to decide home questions as they will and to fulfill home responsibilities as they will," Gov. Ritchie said in his address.

"I plead for a Federal Government of few laws, of less interference with guaranteed liberties, which respects the balance our fathers struck between governmental power and individual freedom, thus avoiding tyranny on the one hand and anarchy on the other.

"I plead for a Federal Government which does not harass legitimate business or the individual with unnecessary or too frequent audits and supervision, and which does not deaden the initiative or the states by everlastingly wanting to solve their needs through some Federal bureau."

1500 Attend July 4 Celebration Given by Houghton in London.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 4.—Nearly 1500 persons attended the Fourth of July celebration given by the American Ambassador, Alonson B. Houghton, at Crewe House today. The large garden and all of the ground floor reception rooms were thronged throughout the afternoon. Houghton presided tonight at a dinner tendered by an American society.

Ambassador Houghton, in proposing "the day we celebrate," made a reminiscent speech comparing the Fourth of July celebrations of a half century ago with those of the present day, when the American and British peoples are being drawn ever closer together.

Paris Gay With Intertwined Tri-Color and Stars and Stripes.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—America's Independence day was celebrated in traditional fashion in France's capital today with the dedication of the new embassy as the principal feature of the program. Exercises were held in most of the schools and other institutions having American connections or benefiting from American endowments and the city was gay with the intertwined Tri-color and Stars and Stripes.

The annual pilgrimage to Lafayette's tomb in Picpus cemetery was followed by the placing of wreaths on his statute in the Louvre Garden, and on the monuments to the American volunteers who served with the French forces in the World War.

A delegation from the American embassy was accorded the privilege of replenishing the "perpetual

SUSPECTS IDENTIFIED AS SLAYERS OF TWO MEN; POLICE ASSERT

AIDED POLICEMAN, DIES

HARVEY HAMMETT.

Six Youths, Two of Whom Were Paroled From Boonville Reformatory, Arrested After Holdup.

WOUNDED MAN SEEN TAKEN INTO HOUSE

Eight Others Arrested in Place in Investigation Into Killing of Policeman and Salesman.

Police officials believed last night that they had in custody the five robbers who killed Patrolman John H. Grogan and fatally wounded Harvey Hammett, in shooting their way out of the building at 1531 Washington avenue, following a holdup there Friday afternoon.

Hammett, who was 29 years old and lived at 5149 Cologne avenue, died in City Hospital at 7:05 a. m. yesterday.

The identifications obtained, according to the police, include a sixth man, who is said to have been waiting in an automobile for the robbers, but who drove away when the alarm was given which caused Patrolman Grogan to lose his life in trying to stop the escaping robbers.

Of those whom witnesses have identified, two are recent inmates of the Boonville Reformatory, who would be there still but for paroles, issued merely for observance of the rules of discipline of the institution.

Identified by Witnesses.

Those named by the police as having been identified by witnesses are:

Frank Bird, 17, 1915 Morgan street, recently paroled from Boonville after serving 11 months of a 5-year sentence for automobile theft.

Fred James, 18, same address.

Maurice O'Flaherty, 19, of 2704 Howard street, arrested at 3023 Clarence place; has fresh gunshot wound in right shoulder. Released from Boonville after serving 6 months of a 7-year term for robbery.

James Widmer, 19, of 4653 Dahlia avenue, arrested at Clarence place house, to which he took the wounded O'Flaherty.

Leo Sproull, 20, of 2557 Benton street, arrested at same place, aided in taking O'Flaherty there.

William Kahrhoff, 20, 4121 North Twentieth, arrested at Grand boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue Friday night, in Studebaker car which, police believe, was used by robbers in going to scene of crime. He is not believed to have entered the building.

The arrest of O'Flaherty, Widmer and Sproull was made after the police learned that a wounded man had been taken to the Clarence place house, which is the home of Harry Dandridge. O'Flaherty was in bed, wearing a woman's nightgown, and with a fresh dressing on his wounded shoulder. He said he was shot accidentally Thursday but would not name the physician who dressed the wound. Dandridge said that Widmer and Sproull brought O'Flaherty to his home about 9 p. m. Friday.

Eight Others Held.

Four women and four other men were arrested at Dandridge's house, after a quantity of home brew was found there.

The names of the persons who have identified the prisoners have not been made known. The identification of Kahrhoff was made, the police say, by a salesman who was sitting in his automobile in front of the building at the time of the robbery.

A number of others were held for questioning by the police, including James Duncan of 1829 Carr street, in whose automobile the men rode from the vicinity of the crime, and John Scannell, a relative of Duncan, who was in the car. Duncan's story is that he drove the robbers under compulsion, taking them from Sixteenth and Morgan streets to Twenty-third street and Cass avenue, where they scattered. Duncan said one of the men was wounded, and was assisted by two others, but that he understood the wound was in the leg.

The second of the robbers' vic-

HOLIDAY FATALITIES COMPARATIVELY LOW

Nineteen Accidental Deaths Reported in Dozen Midwestern Cities.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4.—The death toll of American firecrackers continues to decline. A dozen Mid-Western cities, which a decade ago reported large death rolls, today counted less than a score of fatalities and less than 200 injured.

Chicago recorded four deaths from powder burns and untimely explosions, and a score of minor injuries. Milwaukee, Eastern Wisconsin, Northern Illinois and Southern Michigan, reported 10 fatalities in the unusually heavy holiday automobile traffic. One man was killed in an automobile accident at Kansas City and drownings occurred at Oshkosh, Wis., and Joplin, Mo.

Twelve Deaths as Result of Celebration in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Twelve persons were killed today as the result of participation either directly or indirectly in Fourth of July celebrations and holiday amusements and 26 were injured. One 14-year-old boy, who had been sent to play on the roof for safety, was killed when a stray bullet, fired by an Independence day celebrator, struck him in the stomach. Another 13-year-old boy died from a self-inflicted wound and a 4-year-old girl died from firecracker wounds.

Five persons were drowned while on holiday outings, while three more were reported as missing after attempting to swim ashore when their canoe upset.

Sixteen of the 26 persons injured were hurt by blank pistols or firecrackers. Three were hurt by stray bullets, one, a woman who was struck in the head while riding in an automobile, may die. Six persons were injured in automobile crashes as thousands of motorists took to the country and nearby beaches.

Three Persons Killed in Auto Accidents in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, July 4.—Three persons were killed and five injured, one probably fatally, in automobile accidents in this vicinity today. The dead are: Mrs. Alice Feete, Baltimore; Graham MacKall, Washington and Robert Curtis, negro, Baltimore.

Three Killed by Lightning While Standing Under Tree.

By the Associated Press.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., July 4.—Three persons were killed by lightning here today and two others were injured when a tree, under which they had taken shelter in a park during a storm, was struck. The tree was badly shattered, but did not fall. The dead are Andrew P. King, 38 years old, and his wife, and Edith Shearer, 7 years old, all of New Kensington. William, 10, and Alice Shearer, 4, the other victims of the bolt, were taken to a hospital.

CROWDS ENJOY HOLIDAY OUTINGS

Moderation of Heat Wave Helps Make Day Enjoyable—No Drownings in City or County.

A 10-year-old boy died at City Hospital yesterday from tetanus, which developed from a fireworks injury incident to Fourth of July, and a 5-year-old boy died of burns early today. One hundred forty-seven persons were treated at the city hospital and city dispensaries for injuries, chiefly powder burns, suffered during the Independence day celebration.

A moderation in the heat wave of the last few days contributed to the comfort and enjoyment of the many thousands of St. Louisans, who took advantage of the two-day holiday in outings. Parks and river resorts were reported to have enjoyed especially large crowds. No automobile fatalities or drownings in St. Louis or St. Louis County had been reported up to a late hour last night.

Pleasure-seekers found entertainment at the baseball parks, country clubs and golf links, an air flying exhibition at Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field. A flag display was noticeable on downtown streets and from homes and automobiles.

Albert Rudokas, 10 years old died at the City Hospital yesterday morning from lockjaw, which developed from a powder burn he suffered when a pistol, with blank cartridge, exploded in his hand, He was taken to the hospital Thursday by his father, Adolph Rudokas, of 3187 Morganford road, who said the accident occurred a few days before. He was given antitetanic serum, as is the hospital practice, but the administration was too late to arrest the disease.

His was the first case to be reported this year as an Independence Day injury, and the first fatality.

Eli Cohen, 5-year-old son of Max Cohen died at the city hospital early today of burns suffered Friday evening when his clothing was ignited while he was lighting firecrackers in the yard in rear of his home. He was burned on the back, chest and arms.

Seven-year-old Charles Thomas of 4336 Olive street, was taken to City Hospital yesterday, suffering from injuries to the face, suffered by a firecracker explosion. Hospital doctors expressed the opinion he probably would lose the sight of his right eye.

Three Others Injured.

Louis Traube, 40, of 3127 Thomas street was treated at city hospital last night for injuries to the left ankle, suffered when he was struck by a spent skyrocket. He reported that he was injured when walking along the sidewalk at Jefferson and Chouteau avenues, with his wife, about 9 p. m.

Barney Merkt, 28, 626 Lynch street, was treated for an injury to the eye, which he reported was sustained when a Roman candle backfired.

Thomas Walters of 3315 North Eleventh street also was treated for an injury to the eye, which he said was sustained when somebody fired a blank cartridge as he was passing a group of celebrators near his home.

Suffering from burns of the face, head and arms, Ferdinand Hartenger of 1421 Salisbury street, was brought to the City Hospital last night, He related that he was injured by a chemical explosive, which an acquaintance had placed under a tin can. He furnished the name of the acquaintance, an older man, whom the police are seeking.

TWO MISSOURIANS DROWNED WHEN SKIFF CAPSIZES

Two Others Rescued by Fifth Member of Boating Party Near Caruthersville.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., July 4.—Stott Ferrell, 28 years old, and L. H. Fulhler, 40, were drowned last night when a skiff in which they were riding with three other men capsized in Wolf's bayou, about 18 miles north of here.

Another occupant of the boat, Raymond Crider, 22, an expert swimmer, after swimming to shore when the boat capsized, dived into the water again and rescued the other two men, Senter Reiney and "Jap" White, neither of whom could swim.

Ferrell was considered a good swimmer, but he is believed to have been seized with cramps. Fulhler, who owned a camp site near where the accident occurred, could not swim. The bodies of the two men were recovered today by Jack King, who dragged the bayou, swollen by backwater from the Mississippi River, all night.

All the men but Fulhler reside here.

PRICELESS TREASURES STOLEN FROM VATICAN

Religious and Historic Relics Taken From St. Peter's—Seven Men Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, July 4.—The treasury of St. Peter's Repository of the Vatican's priceless collection of religious and historical relics and artistic treasures was violated last night when thieves broke into its second treasure room and escaped with a number of irreplaceable objects, estimated variously in value at from 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 lire. The thieves, using gloves, left no fingerprints.

Painters Under Arrest.

Four painters and two laborers who have worked in St. Peters and another laborer, Giovanni Bellini, who slept in a room near the scene of the crime, have been arrested. Bellini denies any knowledge of the crime. He says he slept undisturbed last night. Nearby residents say they saw three prowlers and heard an automobile during the night.

The thieves were manifestly well acquainted with the treasury. They forced the door of a storeroom adjoining the treasury and then entered one of the chambers where objects precious to the church have been gathered. After leisurely ransacking the room and selecting as booty half a dozen objects that could be easily carried away they fled, leaving behind a rope ladder, electric torches and burglar tools.

Golden Mass Service Taken.

The stolen objects include an extremely valuable ring set with sapphires and diamonds which is placed on the statue of St. Peter on the Basilica upon certain occasions, a golden mass service given to St. Peter's by Cardinal Merry del Val, a golden cross presented by King Alfonso of Spain, a golden cross set with emeralds given by the republic of Colombia, a golden cross presented by Cardinal Della Volpe, a silver vessel ornamented with diamonds, which belonged to Pope Pius IX.

The robbers also took a ciborium, or coffer, in which the Host is kept, in the belief it was gold but abandoned it after discovering it was silver.

MISSING TAXI DRIVER'S BODY FOUND UNDER CEMENT SLABS

Three Bullets Killed New Yorker and His Pockets Had Been Rifled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Buried under cement slabs with only one foot visible, the body of Louis Penella, 27 years old, taxicab driver, missing from his home in Hempstead, L. I., since last Wednesday, was found today in a gulley near the Nassau Trap Shooting Club by three friends who gave up their holiday in an effort to solve the mystery of his disappearance.

There were three bullet holes in Penella's head. His pockets had been turned inside out. There was no trace of his cab. New York police reported a machine answering the description of the missing car had been found abandoned in Manhattan last Thursday.

Mrs. Penella, wife of the murdered man, told detectives she was certain her husband had more than $55 with him when he left home hurriedly Wednesday night, explaining he "had a call" from Mitchell Field. It was his custom, she declared, to trust soldiers at the field for taxicab fares until payday, and that most of those at the field had been paid Wednesday.

SANTA BARBARA HAS ANOTHER LIGHT SHOCK

Houses Crumbled by Somewhat Severe Earthquake at Yonago, Japan.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 4.—A slight earthquake was felt here at 11:18 a. m. It was in the form of a sharp jolt, but caused no general excitement.

Nowhere did today's tremor produce the signs of fright apparent after yesterday's shake. Telephone operators, who yesterday fled from the exchange and refused to return until this morning, stuck at their switchboards through today's shock.

Today's tremor was the ninety-sixth which has occurred here since last Monday.

BERLIN, July 4.—Resident and visiting Americans observed Independence day at a largely attended dinner at the Hotel Adlon. The dinner was arranged by the American Chamber of Commerce and the American Ambassador, Jacob Gould Schurman, was guest of honor.

President of Cuba and Cabinet at Fourth of July Luncheon.

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Cuba, July 4.—Wholehearted support of President Gerardo Machado by all Americans resident in Cuba was pledged at the annual Fourth of July luncheon of the American club today by its president, John Bruton.

Gen. Machado and his Cabinet with Gov. Ruiz of Havana province and many Cuban officials were guests at the luncheon. Secretary Jordan, charge d'affaires of the American Embassy in the absence of Ambassador Crowder, and many of the Embassy and Consular staff were also present. The American Legion held a picnic this afternoon for American children.

The Spanish War Veterans assembled at a banquet tonight. Hotels and restaurants staged Fourth of July dances with special entertainers in honor of the day.

Lieut. Guillermo Martull of the Cuban air service, staged a spectacular parachute jump over the edge of the city from a height of about 4000 feet in an effort to break the record of a drop without opening the parachute. He dropped more than a thousand feet, it was said, but official figures will not be available for a day or two.

American Flag Flies Above Swiss Colors at Geneva.

GENEVA, July 4.—Contrary to international custom, the two largest hotels in Geneva today flew the American flag over the Swiss flag, in recognition of the Fourth of July. Three hundred members of the American colony, reinforced by a large party of tourists, engaged in a celebration. Following a tea dance, Hugh Gibson, American Minister at Berne, addressed the Americans. The city was decked with flags.

TWO SMALL BOYS RUN DOWN BY AUTOMOBILES

Both Suffer Head Injuries and Drivers Are Held—Accident in County.

Two small boys were run down by automobiles yesterday, one suffering a fractured skull and the other a probable fractured skull.

Eight-year-old Fred Wisbrock Jr. of 3665 Robert avenue, was run down in Grand drive, at 3 p. m., when he stepped from behind a parked car into the path of an automobile driven by Clyde Daden of 4442 Virginia avenue. At city hospital he was found to have suffered a fractured skull. The driver was arrested.

Robert Macgregor, 11, son of Marion McGregor of 714 Limit avenue, was injured when he and his 13-year-old brother, John, attempted to cross Delmar avenue, between Eastgate and Limit avenue, yesterday. Robert was struck by an automobile driven by Lewis Masten of 1413 Academy avenue, and was taken to Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, where it was said he was suffering from a possible fractured skull. Masten, who was arrested, said he was following a street car, at the point of the accident, and his brakes failed to work.

William Cucker, 19 years old, an electrician, of 4437 Nebraska avenue, was taken to City Hospital yesterday afternoon and pronounced suffering from a compound fracture of the left leg, which probably would necessitate amputation. A motorist, who took him to the hospital from Engle Station, in Jefferson County, reported the youth had been injured when the motor cycle he was driving was struck by a Ford touring car, the driver of which did not stop.

William Morris, 2042 Yale Avenue, Maplewood, semi-conscious and suffering from lacerations of the scalp and face, was taken to the City Hospital, about 10 o'clock, last night after a collision between the Ford automobile he was driving and a southbound Jefferson car at Clark avenue.

Youth, 17, Injured When Repairing Auto on County Road.

Theodore Roth, 17 years old, brother of Constable George Roth and Deputy Sheriff Joseph Roth of St. Louis County, was struck by an automobile at 10 o'clock last night as he was repairing a tire on his machine at the side of Link road, one-half mile north of Olive Street road. His car was facing north, and he was working on the left rear tire. The car which struck him was southbound. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital and was said to have a possible skull fracture.

Theodore Hansen, 51, of Overland, was arrested. He was in the car which struck young Roth, but he said that another man, whose name he did not know, was driving.

Fireman Killed When Walls Fall.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., July 4.—Okey Shaw, a fireman, was killed and three others injured in the collapse of the walls, while fighting a fire at the plant of the Home Laundry today. The laundry was destroyed at an estimated loss of $15,000.

LAW NETS CATCH ONLY MINNOWS, DEBS SAYS

Talks Here on Experiences and Declares That Poor Monopolize the Penitentiaries.

Eugene V. Debs, at Triangle Park yesterday afternoon, spoke to a throng in which his old-time admirers, comrades in bygone battles of Socialism, mingled with those of a new generation in industry and citizenship, which has arisen since he last spoke here, before the World War.

And Debs had so much to tell them that his speech lasted an hour and a half. His three years' stay in a Federal prison, for war-time expressions, was mentioned frequently.

"I learned much in the penitentiary," he declared. "I learned that the penitentiary is an institution that is monopolized by the poor. Our nets of justice are so adjusted that they catch the minnow and let the whale slip through.

Recalls Experiences.

"The man who commits a petty theft may go to prison, but when we learn, as we did last year, that the people's oil has been stolen by millionaires, we know that no one will ever be punished. They had the wisdom to steal on a big scale.

Beginning his speech on a Fourth of July basis, Debs called the roll of signers of the Declaration of Independence. "Traitors," he said they were called by many in their time. He recalled that on the Fourth, 31 years ago, Federal troops were sent to Chicago by President Cleveland, over the protest of Gov. Altgeld of Illinois, to prevent interference with the mails in the railroad strike, led by Debs.

Debs was sent to jail soon after that, he related. "It took three Federal Judges to send me," he said. "And now those three Judges are dead, and Grover Cleveland is dead, and Gen. Miles, who commanded the troops sent to Chicago, is dead, and George M. Pullman, in whose plant the strike began, is dead. And I am still here.

"Is it the survival of the fittest? Well, you better ask Mr. Bryan, who used to be the boy orator of the Platte, and is now the boy orator of the Suwanee, and who knows all about those questions. And knows quite a little about Florida real estate. But don't you tell me I'm 70 years old, even if I was born in '55. I'm twice 35 years old. I'm a Socialist, and Socialism is a fountain of youth."

As if to bear out his assertions, Debs spoke in the vigorous, exhausting style of his earlier years, using his full lung power, although sound amplifiers made this exertion needless. His gleaming smile, which wins the cheerful assent of his audiences to utterances which look extreme in print, and his intense feeling, which never permits him even to simulate a philosophic calm, were as pronounced as they would be in the midst of a campaign. Indeed, every season is campaign time for the organization Socialist, as Debs reminded his hearers.

Difference in Parties.

"The Republicans and Democrats come to you just before election, and at no other time," he said "They tell you how intelligent you are, which means that you are ignorant, and that they want to keep you so. We come to you and tell you that you're ignorant, and that we want you to become intelligent—to read and think for yourselves.

"But when you have a strike, did you ever hear of the Republicans or the Democrats doing anything to help you? No, it is the Socialist party which aids you and backs you."

This latter appeal was directed to the striking garment workers, mostly young persons, who were numerous in the picnic audience.

Coal mining conditions were pictured by Debs in his argument for the Socialistic state. He said that, instead of the high prices and intermittent employment of the private ownership system, Socialism would give the miner the full value of his product, and would give the consumer cheaper coal.

Here for Convention.

Referring again to his two imprisonments, Debs declared his fellow-feeling for all who are imprisoned, as he views it, for political reasons, and he included in the list Sacco and Vanzetti, held on murder charges in Massachusetts, and mentioned also the Ruthenberg and Foster cases, under the syndicalism laws of Michigan. He closed with a money-raising speech which resulted in filling a capacious straw hat with bills.

Debs will attend the Missouri and Southern Illinois Socialist convention, which opens at 10 a. m. today in Triangle Hall, 4100 South Broadway. He will probably speak in the hall or in the park this afternoon. He is staying at the Terminal Hotel. He regards this year as the semicentennial of his active connection with the labor movement, which began before he was 20.

SHOOTS AT BEETLE, KILLS SELF

Annoying Insect in Tourist Camp Costs Man's Life.

GENEVA, Ill., July 4.—Herbert Schroeder, 21 years old, of Oak Park, Ill., shot and killed himself early today in a tourist camp here while attempting to shoot a beetle which annoyed him. Schroeder was on his way to Clinton, Ia. Making the trip with him were Mr and Mrs. Minsca of Maywood, Ill., and Miss Mildred Holterhoff, 20, Oak Park, his fiancee.

Crowd of 8000 Enjoys Stunts at Flying Circus

Airplane Wedding, Parachute Drops, Wing Walking and Aerial Acrobatics on Program.

An airplane wedding, parachute drops, aerial acrobatics, and wing walking featured the flying circus given yesterday at Lambert-St. Louis Field under auspices of the Flying Club of St. Louis.

A crowd of approximately 8000 saw the show in which an effort was made, for the first time in St. Louis, to restore hearing to a deaf youth by dropping him through the air in a nose dive. The attempt bore no fruit apparently although the method is said to have been successful in several instances in other cities.

The boy upon whom the experiment was made was Meyer Sigoloff, 19-year-old son of Sam Sigoloff of 3528A Henrietta avenue. In a plane piloted by Frank T. Dunn young Sigoloff was taken to a height of 6000 feet and brought down to the 2000-feet level in a dizzying tailspin. Loops, barrel rolls, Immelman turns and other stunts were showed before he finally settled on the field.

Young Sigoloff was apparently unimproved in hearing but his parents expressed the hope that beneficial effects might result within a day or two as they have when the experiment has been elsewhere.

An Aerial Wedding.

The exhibition opened with the visit to the field of the TA-3, a Scott Field dirigible, which drifted over the crowd for a quarter of an hour before starting for its home station. A few minutes before the dirigible arrived Lieut. F. M. McKee of Scott Field "dropped in" on the show in a DH-4.

The principals in the aerial wedding were Miss Adele Dulle, 18, of 5722 Terry avenue and Edwin Vohle, 21, of 2500 Clara avenue, who spoke their wedding pledges as they floated over the field in a plane piloted by O. E. Scott. Justice of the Peace Werremeyer opened the ceremony on the ground and then climbed into another plane to speak the final words as his craft hovered beside the one in which the bride and groom were riding.

At the close of the ceremony, one of the planes of the wedding party swooped over the crowd scattering carnations and a moment later the bride threw down her bouquet.

Exhibition by Nungesser.

Manley Merrill did a few wing-walking stunts for the crowd and was still on the upper wing when C. A. Lindberg, his pilot, brought the ship to a hasty landing with the engine missing a bit. Dan Robertson bested Scott in a race around the field and swooped low over the crowd for one of the best flying thrills of the day.

An added attraction was the exhibition of Capt. Charles Nungesser, French ace, in his nimble Hanriot pursuit ship in which he showed a neat repertoire of aerial acrobatics. Capt. Nungesser pledged half his profits of the day to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk Fund.

A few hours before the show early arrivals at the field got an unexpected thrill when a JN6H, piloted by Capt. William M. Robertson of the 110th Observation Squadron, crashed on the east end of the field as he settled for a landing. The ship was a total wreck, but Robertson escaped without a scratch.

beach where the President lived. There a man at the gate told him the President was not in. He came back at noon and a man with a star told him the President could not see anyone. His heart sank. He left the note and the candy and walked slowly home.

Sunshine After Rain.

Jimmie was sitting in the house at 3 o'clock this afternoon when the telephone rang and a man asked for him. The man told him the President had just heard of his visit and wanted to see him. Then a big automobile, with the coat of arms of the President on the door, rolled up. A neatly groomed chauffeur jumped out and opened the door and Jimmie, his heart thumping harder, stepped in. They rolled along through Swampscott to the entrance to Little's Point and up to the front of the White House. The President met him in the hall.

Jimmie knew who it was. They talked, but he remembers only a few snatches of the conversation.

It was just a year ago today that the President's youngest son was taken sick. Three days later he died and those who saw the President today thought they noticed on his face a touch of sadness brought by what the day recalled.

"Have you got a harmonica?" the President asked.

"Yes, but I could stand another," Jimmie blurted.

The President fumbled around and produced a new mouth organ. Where he got it and why he had it with him nobody knows. He handed it to Jimmie and the boy thrilled with delight.

"Did you ever have a birthday before on July 4?" the President continued.

Kept Other Guests Waiting.

"Yes," said Jimmie. "every Fourth of July."

They chatted along while the guests who were to accompany the President to Marblehead, the chauffeurs and the people standing at the entrance to White Court to see him pass waited.

President Coolidge went aboard the Mayflower at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The yacht was anchored off the Corinthian Yacht Club, where it remained this evening. Mr. Coolidge did not desire to cruise. It was his first visit to the vessel since coming north.

Aside from the fact of his birthday, the menu of his dinner was not announced. Mrs. Coolidge's birthday present to the President was not announced, but on the breakfast table this morning was a cluster of red roses she had gathered.

efforts on saving Mrs. Jordan.

Relatives of persons who were away from home last night crowded about the police lines, many of them striving vainly to push through the guards and assist in the rescue work.

Rescue Through Amputation.

One man was taken out alive, only after physicians had amputated two of his fingers in order to free him from his trap. He laughed and smoked a cigarette while they operated.

Search Ruins With Flashlights.

Firemen and doctors came by the scores and until dawn, poked about the ruins with flashlights. Internes from the city hospital crawled beneath the ruins wherever they could give hypodermic injections to survivors in pain, who could not be released.

A priest from St. James church, just around the corner, gave absolution to the victims who were carried out.

Crews of wreckers and riggers arrived soon after day break to aid the firemen in clearing away the debris.

Rubbish that covered the basement of the building was packed in so tight that it was impossible for the rescue workers to use picks or other tools. They were afraid they might strike bodies caught in the debris. A tunnel from the excavation in the lot adjoining was started toward the basement and firemen worked with their hands to clear away the dirt and wreckage.

The bottom of the basement was found to be a sticky clay and one man who was brought out was found lying on his back almost half buried in the mud.

No Warning of Crash.

A man who was on the second floor when the crash came said that there was no warning.

"The place came down with a rush," he said. "I had heard what I thought were fire-crackers popping but that must have been the crashing of timbers. I ran into a corner by the piano and then down a fire escape."

A telephone operator was listening to the dance music over the telephone and described what she said was "a sudden crash."

A fire swept the three top floors some months ago and a weakening of the partitions there was believed to have helped on the collapse.

WOMAN WRITER DEAD

FLORENCE HAYWARD.

FLORENCE HAYWARD, WRITER, DIES AT 60

She Was Well Known Figure in Local Literary and Art Circles.

Miss Florence Hayward, contributor to various magazines and a well-known figure in local literary and art circles, died yesterday at 4:30 p. m. at the Jewish Hospital, after an illness of six weeks. She was 60 years old.

Miss Hayward was born in New Mexico, about the close of the Civil War, and was the daughter of Col. George A. Hayward of the Confederate Army. The family came to St. Louis, and Miss Hayward was educated in Mary Institute. She began writing articles for the Spectator, a local publication of that time. This work, in the 90s, led to a stay of several years in London, as a contributor to magazines, both American and English.

She returned to St. Louis when the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was in preparation. She made an inquiry into an amusement enterprise which had made a proposal to the Exposition directors, and it was on her report that the proposal was rejected by the directors.

President Francis of the Exposition Board offered Miss Hayward a foreign appointment in behalf of the fair. She stipulated that she should be a commissioner, and was made the first woman commissioner of the exposition.

Obtained Jubilee Gifts.

Before leaving St. Louis for London, Miss Hayward told the executive committee of the Exposition that she intended to get Queen Victoria's jubilee presents as an exhibit at the fair. "You are just as likely to get the loan of Westminster Abbey," one of the committee remarked.

But Miss Hayward, as the gogetters of today would say, "sold" King Edward VII the idea of sending his revered mother's jubilee gifts to St. Louis. The idea which she pressed upon the King was that this special personal showing of interest and friendship would help to improve British-American relations, which had been strained by the Venezuela incident of a few years before.

The gifts came in due time, guarded by London "bobbies," and through the 1904 exposition season they were displayed in what is now the library of Wasnington University. They were the most distinctive exhibit of the Fair—a group of priceless jewelry, plate and art objects, the gifts to a beloved Queen from all her own dominions and from other lands. The scriptural description of "the glory and honor of the nations" was recalled by this display, unprecedented in America.

On the same tour on which she obtained the loan of the jubilee gifts, Miss Hayward visited the Pope, and obtained an exhibit from the Vatican, Cardinal Satolli aiding in this undertaking.

When the exhibits were assembled, Miss Hayward was made Commissioner of History, and the jubilee and Vatican exhibits, and loans from the historical treasures of the New Orleans Cabildo were included under her supervision.

Founder of Artists' Guild.

Miss Hayward was one of the founders—and as she used to say, the inventor—of the Artists' Guild. When, nearly 20 years ago, reports were published that women smoked cigarettes at the Guild affairs, Miss Hayward announced that she smoked at the Guild, and at home. "Also," she added, "I use soap when washing my face." Smoking by women was less generally recognized then than it is now.

Honors bestowed on Miss Hayward by foreign bodies of distinction were her election to the French Academy in 1904, and her later election to the Royal Society of Arts and the Meteorological Society of London.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at 5843 Waterman avenue, where Miss Hayward resided in the home of her brother, Harry E. Hayward. Interment will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Besides Harry E. Hayward, another brother and two sisters survive. They are: Louis J. Hayward of 4637 Pershing avenue, Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus of 10 Westmoreland place and Mrs. George Higginbotham of Toronto, Canada.

RAILROAD MASTER MECHANIC, 75 YEARS IN SERVICE, DIES

Richard H. Briggs, "The Grand Old Man of the Frisco," Was 93 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 3.—The railroad world lost its oldest master mechanic today in the death of Richard H. Briggs, 75 years in service. Retired from active service by the Frisco Railroad in 1913, Briggs had made his home here. He was 93 years old.

Briggs' life as a "railroader" was one of color and achievements. Employed by the Schenectady Locomotive Works as a machinist, apprentice, at 16, he later went to the Morgan Works, New York. After several years he came South.

In 1865, Briggs went with the Mobile & Ohio road as machinist, with headquarters at Whistler, Ala. After 18 years' service there he went with the Chesepeake & Ohio Southwestern road, and when he departed from Whistler, he was honored and universally loved. The townsfolk presented Briggs with a silver service.

His name is on the record books of railroading. While with the Mobile and Ohio road he constructed six locomotives, forging and constructing each part in his shops.

"The grand old man of the Frisco," he was called. He was onetime president of the American Railway Master Mechanics' Association.

MAN ADMITTING TWO STORE ROBBERIES HELD FOR OTHERS

Identified at Police Station as Holdup in Two Recent Cases.

A man who says he is Earl Duffy, 22-year-old mechanic, yesterday admitted that he had held up two Kroger store managers and was identified by two more Kroger managers as the man who had held them up. Duffy gave his address as 1417 Francis street.

He admitted, according to the police, that on May 16 he held up Carl J. Seyfarth in a Kroger store at 4256 College avenue and took all the money in the cash register, escaping in a stolen machine with another man whose name he gave. He also admitted robbing the store at 2525 North Prairie avenue in a holdup on the same day.

In addition Edward Sommer, manager of the Kroger store at 4303 Grove street, and Leslie Henry, in charge of the store at Prairie and Cottage avenues, identified Duffy as the man who robbed them in recent holdups.

GOLF AND TENNIS PERMITS TO BE ISSUED TOMORROW

Applicants Must Call in Person and Old Cards Will Be Revoked on July 15.

Golf and tennis permits will be issued by the Park Department, 330 Municipal Courts Building, beginning tomorrow. It will be necessary for each applicant to call in person to obtain a permit. Each person will be required to sign the permit when issued. No permit will be delivered through the mails.

All golf and tennis permits issued previous to tomorrow will be revoked on July 15. Daily golf permits will not be issued until July 16.

A fee of $10 will be charged for a golf permit, good for a year, and an annual tennis permit will cost $1. An individual game of golf on the 18-hole course will cost 50 cents, while the charge for one game on the nine-hole course will be a quarter.

OFFICIAL OF W. C. T. U. DIES

Mrs. Mary Dolley, 54 years old, of Lebanon, Ill., president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of St. Clair County, died Friday night of cancer at St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis. She was a trustee in the Illinois Antisaloon League and was active in several other county organizations.

She is survived by her husband, Prof. J. C. Dolley of McKendree College, and four sons, Paul T., James C. Jr., Robert D. and John S. Dolley.

RETURN TO U. S. OF 'WOLF OF LA SALLE STREET' EXPECTED

Federal Agents on Way After John W. Worthington—Mexico to Waive Legal Proceedings.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 4.—John W. Worthington, "the Wolf of La Salle Street," Chicago, may be returned to the United States from Lower California by tomorrow, it was reported at the Federal Building here.

Although officials were averse to talking, it was reported that four Department of Justice agents from Los Angeles arrived in San Diego and departed for the Potrero mine, about 65 miles below Ensenada, where Worthington is said to have gone after eluding his guard in Ensenada about a week ago.

Worthington, it is reported, had planned to go to San Quentin, across the bay from the Potrero mine, and secure passage on the Mexican States liner Oaxaca, which is due there late today on its way to Mazatlan.

Mexican officials, it is reported here, are willing that Worthington should be extradited to the United States without legal proceedings.

DEFENSE DAY MUSTER BELOW THAT OF 1924

War Department Satisfied With Results in View of Brief Preparation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Reports to the War Department from the nine corps area commanders on today's defense test muster indicated at a late hour tonight that the civilian response to the request for one-day volunteers had been about two thirds of the number reported as enrolled on Sept. 12 last, when the first test was held.

With figures for the muster still lacking from the fourth corps area, headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., the totals reported by the other eight areas were: regular army 81,089, compared with 92,581 last september; national guard, 110,149, compared with 167,633; organized reserves, 56,636, compared with 59,168; one-day volunteer enrollments, 628,090, compared with a figure in excess of one million.

War Department and corps area officials, however, apparently were satisfied with the results in view of the short time of preparation allowed them this year and the added handicap of the double week-end holiday.

At the time of the first test it was estimated that more than 16,000,000 citizens participated as specators or otherwise, in all ceremonies incident to the test. In today's muster patriotic exercises were combined with local Fourth of July celebrations and the instructions sent to corps area commanders directed that they give special attention to these assemblies.

In many communities, as in Washington, there was no military parade of reserves, National Guard or regular army units filled up with one-day volunteers, an element of the first test in almost all parts of the country. Until detailed reports from the corps area are received here, no comparative figure of general civilian participation will be available.

The September test showed that approximately 25 per cent of the localized units, particularly of the organized reserves, lacked any plans whatever. Since then instructions were sent to the reserve officers in immediate command and to regular officers having general supervision to remedy this condition, and it is expected a final checking-up of the muster today will show that practically all units now have tentative plans for local mobilization on which the War Department can base its studies for further development of the new military system.

547,000 Take Part in New York, New Jersey and Delaware.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Approximately 547,000 persons took part in the Defense day test in the Second Corps area, comprising New York, New Jersey and Delaware, in 290 cities and towns, Major-General Charles P. Summerall, in command, announced tonight. This figure, he said, may be increased to a million upon receipt of mail reports from 170 other towns.

The best showing in the area in proportion to size, the General said, was in Central New York State. At Elmira, 11,000 persons took part in preparedness programs; at Hornell, 6000; at Auburn, 11,500.

No defense test was held in Porto Rico, which is attached to the Second Corps area. Lack of time prevented carrying out an effective program, it was said.

1,600,000 Citizens Participate in Tests in Sixth Corps Area.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Six hundred communities in the sixth army corps area participated in defense test ceremonies today in which 1,600,000 citizens had a part, Major-General Harry C. Hale, area commander, reported to the Adjutant-General at Washington.

Throughout the area, 7000 regular army men, 19,000 national guardsmen and 24,000 organized reserves of the land forces participated in the program. In addition a total of 22,700 ceremonial volunteers were reported. Citizens participation was reported at 1,550,000.

West Virginia, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky reported a total of 75,000 one-day reserve enlistments.

Gen. Hale's office, which was the clearing center for all areas west of the Mississippi to the Pacific Coast on recruiting activities of the organized reserves, reported at 7 o'clock Eastern standard time that all units in the territory had been recruited to more than 100 per cent strength with one-day volunteers.

Figures from the San Antonio area follow:

Regular army, 49,640; national guard, 21,000; organized reserves, 84,770; ceremonial volunteers, 100,000, of military age, and 116,500 others; other citizen participants, 217,600; total communities, 111; total persons, 434,100.

Volunteers in Third Corps Are Comparatively Few.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 4.—The Third Army Corps area mustered 31,400 citizens in addition to 25,000 members of military units in observation of Defense day. Official army tabulations tonight showed the following to have participated at 22 places in the third area:

Ceremonial volunteers, 11,200; other citizens, 20,200; regular army 12,000; National Guard, 11,000, and organized reserves, 2000. At training camps 3900 O. M. T. C. students and 1800 R. O. T. C. students participated with regular troops.

The official report showed Pennsylvania to have responded "fairly well," with Maryland and Virginia apathetic.

Senator Robinson Speaks on Defense at Hot Springs, Ark.

By the Associated Press.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., July 4.—United States Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, in a defense day address here today, sounded a warning that "familiarity with world conditions justifies the assertion that we invite insult when we refuse to take precautions against attack by a foreign enemy."

Senator Robinson was a speaker at exercises in observance of National Defense Test day and the formal dedication of the new Little Rock-Hot Springs highway.

"We may certainly command respect from potential enemies by giving all the world to know that we stand ready to defend American rights whenever threatened," Senator Robinson declared. "I have said that we have no assurance and can obtain none against the possible recurrence of war. The aggregate of armed troops now in Europe, exceed by more than a half million, the number under arms at the beginning of the World War in 1914, if you exclude from the computation the forced reduction of the German army. Everywhere is heard the tread of soldiers and the clang of arms. Our duty is without boastfulness or threats to assert and maintain the dignity and honor."

Sham Battle by Guard Companies at St. Joseph, Mo.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 4.—The number of organized reserves reporting here for the Defense day exercises was 100. The number of national guardsmen was 75, and 3000 citizen volunteers reported ready. There was no street parade, but the National Guard companies had a sham battle.

Defense Day Parade of 7000 in New York City.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Booming of cannons from Governor's Island, mingled with the tolling of church and cathedral bells today, ushered in this city's two-fold celebration of Defense day and the Fourth of July.

Army authorities estimated that 1,000,000 persons in the Second Corps area took part in the defense test mobilization of manpower and industrial resources. Maneuvers were carried out as though an actual war emergency existed.

Thousands of the city's population celebrated the Fourth of July with scores of patriotic meetings, parades and church services. Central Park was the scene of the greatest gathering, and Riverside Drive was lined with thousands who watched 7000 members of military organizations and patriotic bodies parade as a part of the Defense day program.

An international aspect was given the ceremonies in Central Park by the attendance of Lieutenant-Commander Hugh Duncan Grant of the British Navy and Capt. A. E. Stewart, commander of the Argentine naval training ship, Sarmiento. During the services the American flag was hoisted above the ship, anchored in the Hudson River, and a salute of 21 shots was fired. Simultaneously the guns on Governor's Island fired the national salute.

Contrasting with the Defense day activities, the Women's Peace Union of the Western Hemisphere held a meeting in Battery Park, at which the members adopted declarations against war and reiterated their pledge "Never to aid in or sanction war, offensive or defensive, international or civil, in any way, whether by making or handling munitions, or subscribing to war loans."

Objections that defense day observations might stimulate militarism and militaristic institutions and that preparedness measures might discourage wholesome measures for the promotion of international peace were passed as without justification.

The lesson of today, he said, was that while all hope for a continuance of peace, there is no assurance against the recurrence of war.

360 Communities Participate in Seventh Corps Area.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., July 4.—Major-General George B. Duncan, commander of the Seventh Corps area, reported to the War Department today 360 communities and 350,000 citizens participated in the defense test. There were also 7500 regular army men and 37,000 one-day reserve enlistments.

"Rear Seat Drivers" Cause Accidents by Talking Too Much

Singing and Requests That Front Seat Driver Look at Scenery Distract Latter.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Education of the automobile passenger as well as the driver is held by the American Automobile Association to be a necessary step toward reduction of motor vehicle accidents.

The inexperience and thoughtlessness of some passengers, who detract the driver's attention by singing, talking and by requesting him to look at scenery along the road are declared responsible for many accidents, and the association urged education of the passenger as a remedy.

A taxicab driver, the association said, if told to be doubly careful, will drive in his usual way, the same request of a passenger car driver will cause him to drive recklessly.

Policeman on Errand for Family When Murdered

Finding of Two Pairs of Children's Shoes Near Where Patrolman Grogan Was Slain by Holdup Men Explains Tragedy to Widow.

Patrolman Grogan and Daughter.

At 4:10 p. m. Friday, Officer John H. Grogan lay shot to death in the lobby of the building at 1531 Washington avenue. A few doors away, at the Roberts, Johnson & Rand branch of the International Shoe Co., 1505 Washington avenue, a package containing two pairs of children's shoes lay on the lobby floor. This fact may not help the police in solving the murder of Grogan, but to the widow it explains the entire tragedy.

"If he hadn't been such a family man, always thinking of his family," Mrs. Grogan said today, "this would have never happened. But he insisted that the children needed some summer shoes. 'I'm going to bring you home some shoes tonight,' he told Delphine and Clementine, the two youngest of our four girls. 'And they'll be fine shoes too,' he said, as he left the house in that sort of happy way of his. And then, on account of this, all this happens because he would never have been there if it wasn't for the shoes. About an hour after I had been told, Clementine—she is only 9, you know—came up and said, 'When will Dad bring my shoes?' And he laying dead in the Morgue for an hour or more.

"But John would have liked to end the way he did. He always said, 'You may be able to say lots of other things against me, but you can's say I'm not a good cop.' He loved his work. But he loved horses and sometimes he would say he wished he was a turfman, but a little while later he would always say, 'No, I started a cop and I want to finish a cop.' And that's what he did."

"And he was a fine big up standing man, too," the widow continued. "He was 5 feet, 11 inches tall, and he weighed 250 pounds. Did you ever know him?" she asked the reporter. "Well, here is a picture of me and him taken on our marriage day, 17 years ago last month. Wasn't he the fine looking young fellow? Yes, and he was a good man, too. He never got tough, the way some policemen do, from mixing with criminals. Never a day passed but which he dropped into St. Mark's Catholic Church, which was on his beat."

Grogan's four children, all girls, hovered around their mother as she told the reporter of their father at their home at 9 Rugby place. Mrs. Grogan is of a familiar Irish type, with dark hair and eyes, and olive skin. She was clad in a blue house dress. The children are, Bernice, 15; Dorothy, 13; Delphine, 10; and Clementine, 9. The funeral will be held from St. Mark's Tuesday morning.

"The younger children hardly know their father is dead," Mrs. Grogan resumed. "They'll realize it though soon, for in an hour they'll take him from the morgue and lay him out here."

The two younger children will never get the shoes, however, for they are being held as evidence in the case of the murder of their father.

SALESMAN, SHOT WHEN POLICEMAN WAS KILLED, DIES

tims, Hammett, was a salesman for a hosiery company, and was the son of a veteran policeman, now deceased, and the brother of a policeman in active service. His brothers, from inquiries made at the scene, believe that, at the instant when he was shot, Hammett was trying to take Patrolman Grogan's revolver, to fire at the men who had shot Grogan.

Grogan's revolver has not been found, and it is now believed that Grogan fired it at least once, and that one of the robbers took it after the wounding of Hammett.

Hammett had gone to the building to see a customer, and was in the first floor hallway, waiting for the elevator, when Grogan, who had heard outside the building that a holdup was going on, rushed in. The robbers, descending in the elevator, opened fire, first on the policeman and then on Hammett.

Robbers Inexperienced.

The robbers, all of youthful appearance, showed apparent inexperience in their selection of a place, and in their lack of accurate information as to the money to be obtained there. The Francis Building, scene of the robbery, is a 10-story loft building, the various floors occupied by manufacturing concerns.

Four of the youths entered the H. S. Collins printing office, on the sixth floor, shortly after 4 o'clock, and demanded the payroll. The fifth stayed in the hallway. The woman cashier and the head of the firm, Collins, told them that the company paid its employes by check.

"You didn't pay by check last time," one of the men said. As to this, Collins said later, the man was misinformed.

The robbers berated and cursed Collins, and one struck him on the head with a revolver. They lined up 12 employes of the company, some of whom had just cashed their pay checks and had the money in their pockets. One of the men took $37 from the open safe.

One employe ran out and took the rear elevator to the street, where he called for help. His outcry summoned Patrolman Grogan, who was off duty at the time and was in an adjoining store.

Policeman and Bystander Shot.

The robbers, seeing that one of the employes had eluded them, rushed out of the office and held up the conductor of the front elevator, who took them to the first floor. There they encountered and shot the policeman and the bystander.

J. S. Barrie, manager of the store from which the policeman had been summoned, followed him to the Francis Building. P. R. Hauschulte, employed in the building, helped him to hold the front door against the robbers, after the shooting in the hallway, but a revolver butt smashed the glass sash, and shots forced the two men to abandon the door.

Hammett's funeral will be at his home at 2 p. m. Tuesday. His widow and infant son, Harvey Jr., survive him. He was an active member of Concordia Turnverein, and had won awards in individual and group athletic contests, here and in other cities.

Patrolman Grogan's funeral will be at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday at his home, 9 Rugby place, followed by services at St. Mark's Catholic Church, Page boulevard and Academy avenue, and by burial in Calvary Cemetery.

MAN ON PICNIC PARTY DROWNED IN CREEK

Friends Recover Body of Richard Moll, 52, and Attempt to Resuscitate Him.

Richard Moll, 52 years old, was drowned in Barnhart Creek, a few miles from Kimmswick, Mo., at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he stepped from the shallow into a hole.

He was one of a party of picnickers, and several of the others immediately went to his rescue, recovering the body shortly after it sank. Efforts to resuscitate him were made for more than two hours, but were unsuccessful, although a physician was called to his aid. Moll, who lived at 2613 Gravois avenue, was married and had three daughters. He was a harness maker.

'MUST KEEP UP SHIPPING WITH SOUTH AMERICA'

Chairman Jones of Senate Commerce Committee Says Benefits to Trade Outweigh Any Cost.

GOOD MARKET FOR AMERICAN GOODS

Cites Need for Banking Facilities, Quicker Communication and Transportation in Latin America.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The three essentials for expansion of American business in South America are banking facilities, quicker communication and transportation facilities, in the judgment of Chairman Jones of the Senate Committee Committee, based on information he obtained in a recent tour of that continent.

The American shipping service between the two continents must be maintained at any cost, the Senator said tonight, in the last of a series of statements reporting his trip.

"I would offer any reasonable inducement to private capital to take over these ships and continue the service," he said, "but these ships should not be turned over to private parties, except upon very certain assurances that they will be replaced as they wear out and the service continued.

Benefits to Trade.

"If private capital will not take them over on this basis then the Government should retain them and replace them when necessary. The benefits to trade and commerce generally will far exceed any loss that may have to be made good from the treasury. This is one phase of our shipping problem that must be dealt with soon. We must take definite action to see to it that the South American service and the Oriental service are continued.

"One of the strongest arguments that our competitors put forth to the South American business man is that our service will be discontinued some time in the not distant future. That, of course, causes the business man to hesitate transferring his business to us. When they are convinced, however, that our service is going to be permanent they will not hesitate to give us their business because of the excellence of our service and ships."

As to banking facilities, Senator Jones said American banks had branches now in all the leading cities; are giving fine service and will keep pace with the growth of trade. He also said the all-America Cable Co. had satisfactory and direct service down the coast, across the Argentine and up to Rio and that it hoped to complete soon connections of the east coast with the United States.

Good Trade Built Up.

The United States already has built up a good trade with South America in automobiles, Senator Jones said, and predicted the growth of a valuable market to care for American agricultural implements.

Pointing out that moving picture machines and films used in South America also come largely from the United States, the Senator continued:

"These pictures may do us a great injury or be of great benefit. A prominent journalist in Buenos Aires told me very seriously that many of the picture films are doing us great harm. Wildwest pictures and those with criminal characters are creating a very deep impression. We are largely judged as a people by the characters in these plays and foreigners cannot help getting the impression that we are a carousing, criminal, drunken and pistol-carrying people. This matter should have the careful consideration of our moving picture magnates."

Went to Jail for New Ideas

—Henry Miller News Picture Service, Inc.

MRS. WINNIFRED MASON HUCK, daughter of the late Congressman William S. Mason and herself a former Congresswoman from Illinois, has during the last month been in jail, worked as a chambermaid, been employed as a maid in a home and toiled as a factory employe. She has eaten prison fare, accepted tips, swept and cooked at the bidding of another woman and searched for a job with only $5 in her pocket. "I recommend experiments such as mine for every individual," she said "If we could all have them we would discover more completely than in any other way the spirit of helpfulness and sympathy that exists in mankind."

FRANCE READY TO SEND DEBT BODY TO U. S.

Request From Paris for Early Negotiations Forwarded to Secretary Mellon.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Steps are in progress to fix a definite date for opening the French war debt negotiations.

The French Government has asked that the American Debt Funding Commission name a day on which the proposed French commission can be received in Washington, and it is likely that a time not far distant will be chosen.

Officials in Washington today forwarded the request to Secretary Mellon, head of the American commission, who recently left the capital to spend his vacation on Long Island.

The Paris Government suggested that an "early date" be named, but did not indicate the French attitude on terms of settlement.

Spur for Jugo-Slavia.

Abandoning its policy of waiting, the American Government has dispatched a Treasury Department communication to Jugo-Slavia in a direct effort to open debt negotiations and suggesting a specific plan of settlement. Details of the plan were not disclosed here, but the communication points to the British debt settlement as a model for the smaller Powers which would be satisfactory to this country.

Dispatch of the note is expected not only to hasten the start of the Jugo-Slavian negotiations, but the establishment plan it offers is expected to open another short cut toward an agreement.

Acceptance Expected.

Although there is no indication here what form the reply from Belgrade will take, it is assumed that it will offer a counter proposition and this would facilitate agreement on a compromise.

Conversations have been held recently concerning the Jugo-Slavian debt, and while their nature has not been disclosed, it is thought by some officials that the Belgrade Government will accept the American proposal with only minor changes.

New Gold Loan Approved by French Ministers.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—The council of ministers today approved the conditions for the new gold basis loan to be issued in exchange for the national defense bonds which fall due this year. The terms will appear in the official journal on Sunday.

An organizing committee headed by Under-Secretary Georges Bonnet is planning a drive along the lines of the liberty loan campaigns in the United States, and a special appeal will be made in the country districts.

The 1925 budget is expected to be finally disposed of by parliament by a week from tomorrow. This will leave Finance Minister Caillaux free to devote his whole energies to promoting the loan and studying means of settling the interallied debts.

The decree authorizing the loan fixes interest at 4 per cent on the basis of pound sterling exchange at 95, with a proportionate increase if the franc averages below that figure during the six month periods preceding the interest dates, which are March 5 and September 5.

The bonds are perpetual and can be redeemed only at par on the basis of sterling exchange at 95. The government's savings of interest on the national defense bonds, for which the new issue alone can be exchanged, will be used to buy in bonds at the market price

Ambassador Herrick to Return to Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Ambassador Herrick at Paris is expected to come to this country in the near future on leave and during his presence here probably will discuss the French debt as a matter of course with Washington officials.

So far as officials here know, however, he will bring no new communication on the subject from the French government.

Festive Reception Prepared at Rural Home of Amundsen Near Oslo; Papers Praise Him.

By the Associated Press.

HORTEN, Norway, July 4.—The Amundsen party, returning from Spitzbergen on board the steamer Alber W. Selmer, landed here at midnight tonight.

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, July 4.—Finishing touches for Capt. Roald Amundsen's home-coming tomorrow were made today. The decorations lining the route from the Quay where the explorers will land to the Royal Palace, where they will be received by King Haakon and the members of the royal family, were finally completed.

The way will be lined by members of the various sports clubs in colorful costumes; there will be innumerable banners, a choir will sing patriotic hymns and children will strew flowers in the path of the national hero.

Amupndsen and those who accompanied him on the flight into the Arctic are now nearing Horten on the Government steamer Albr W. Selmer, which is bringing them from Spitzbergen. At Horten they will disembark, and the plan is for them to fly to Oslo on the plane on which they returned from the Arctic.

The rural home of Capt. Amundsen, near Oslo, is preparing a festive reception. It is decorated with Norwegian and American flags and a huge bonfire will be started when the master of the house comes home.

Laudatory articles of the exploit of Amundsen and his fellow explorers filled the newspapers today and their portraits adorned with the national colors are displayed in countless shop windows.

Lincoln Ellsworth, the American member of the expedition, is receiving much praise. One native bard has dedicated a poem to Ellsworth, eulogizing him as a "sportsman, leaving home and beauty to share our men's privations."

The newspapers also take the occasion to pay tribute to Capt. Oscar Wisting of Amundsen's polar cruiser, Maud, who, with five companions, is spending his fourth year in the polar ice.

HOLLAND'S CABINET RESIGNS

Queen Wilhelmina Asks Minister to Delay Change.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Holland, July 4.—The Dutch Cabinet has resigned as from June 29, two days before the general parliamentary elections, which were held on Wednesday. The Queen has requested the Ministers to carry on temporarily.

An Amsterdam dispatch yesterday, giving unofficial returns from the parliamentary elections, said the majority of the Right parties, supporting the Government, had not been threatened, as they had lost only four or five seats. These parties held a majority of 54 seats in the last Parliament.

Massive Exhibit of Works By Dalmatian Sculptor At City Art Museum

Bust of Woodrow Wilson Gives New Conception of War President — Portrayal of Crucifixion a Powerful Work.

Woodrow Wilson is accorded place among the prophets by Ivan Mestrovic, in the monumental exhibition of sculpture by that modern master at the City Art Museum where it will remain through July and the greater part of August.

In previous American showings of these, almost 100 pieces of marble, bronze, wood and plaster the Woodrow Wilson has not been included and that is a pity for through it, perhaps, the conventional amateur of art, and the Anglo-Saxon mind—trained to esteem illustration above creative power—may find the key to this Dalmatian master's world-imagination.

This is not, then, the Woodrow Wilson who smiled at us from a hundred thousand motion picture screens. There are elements which one at once will recognize. But these are subdued to the greater conception of Woodrow Wilson The man as a prophet, a spirit of flaming devotion and of iron will.

The plaster in which Mestrovic has worked becomes the spirit of Woodrow Wilson. It is war-time America incarnate. The essence of the man, of his nation, and of his triumphant time flame in the sculptor's material.

Here then is the key to Mestrovic—modern and master. His material is subdued by his imagination. It is not illustration. It is embodiment. It is not representation. It is a presentation of the very flame of life.

That is not because Mestrovic cannot illustrate. His portrait bust of Herbert Hoover is little else. Shown for the first time in this exhibit here, it might have been done by any clever graduate of the schools. It is exactly what would appeal to the American taste for efficiency, smugness, comfort and illustration. Some of us may see a fleeting touch of satire in the face. It is far from obvious even so, that comment of Ivan Mestrovic upon the well-fed and satisfied.

Racial Aspiration in Art.

We are not so concerned with the accidents of Michael Angelo's life as with the work he left us. And before the work of Ivan Mestrovic it matters little that he was born in Dalmatia, that he was a shepherd and a wood-carver; that his life was filled with poverty and with dreams. Those things which count are the inspiration he has found in the heroes of the Slavic races, and the refuge which was his during war's black years in a religious aestheticism.

Thus you will find in his work the first celebration of his racial aspirations as inspired by the heroes of that race. But a greater love engulfs the less, and his vision of mankind as the sons of God takes form in the Ecce Homo—the Son of God sent to suffer and redeem the world, with collateral inspirations from the Life of Christ and from the prophets. This, in its turn, achieves perhaps a more mystic symbolism in its celebration of the triumph of love as typified by the angels and celestial music. Such are his later works.

"The composition of my art," writes Mestrovic, "is not of wood or stone; it lies beyond space or time. The Art is song and prayer at the same moment."

Only a seer can so sum up himself.

Or turn from the "Christ in the Temple," a panel carved in wood to look upon "My Mother," which shrouded head is the embodiment of all the mystery of motherhood. There is some measure of the man.

Mastery of line and of plane go without saying. Without them such accomplishment were not. Or without a splendid sense of decoratioon. But outstanding is the mastery of material. Mestrovic has a sixth sense, a feeling which subtly translates the block of wood or stone into the vision of the beauty it contains. Thus, from odds and ends of wood he has liberated pure spirit by utilizing its grain. His "Magdalen at the Cross" emerges from the marble into which it again retreats, finding refuge in the rock of faith.

Modernity Plus Mastership.

Mestrovic's is at once the biggest and most important sculpture show, and one-man show, ever brought to St. Louis. Even the monetary value runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The aesthetic value is incalculable. It brings to St. Louis a first and generous view of modernity and mastership combined.

It will cause discussion immeasureable. There will be those flaming for, and those violently against it. There are those tender nurtured ones who wander only through fields of asphodel when they intrude in art's precincts, and who will be revolted by the wooden "Crucifixion," the revealed agonies of the death on the cross. It is awful. It is horrible. The figure is enaciated by anguish and torture. It is distorted. It is the exquisite of immolation of self. Yet through it blossomed the beauty of the resurrection. And there are those who will stand before this Crucifixion with piety; its stylized agonies but heightening the sacramental emotions of pity and awe which only the greatest art evokes.

$85,000 IS SUBSCRIBED TO 'THE MIRACLE' FUND

Underwriters Tomorrow Will Be Asked to Pay 10 Per Cent of Pledges.

Subscriptions underwriting the production of "The Miracle" in St. Louis during the Christmas season reached $85,000 yesterday. The goal is $100,000.

The $85,000 was subscribed by 154 firms and individuals. A further contribution is expected when executives of the railroads composing the Terminal Railroad Association meet here a week from tomorrow. In the meantime, individuals and firms are asked to subscribe.

A call for 10 per cent of the amount subscribed will reach subscribers tomorrow. The funds so obtained will be used to advertise the attraction in the Mid-West and Southwest.

Charles F. Hatfield of the St. Louis Convention Bureau, who is in conference in New York with Morris Gest, producer of "The Miracle," telegraphed that Gest is thoroughly satisfied with the underwriting progress. Gest sails this week to supervise the presentation of the play in Austria, at Salzburg.

The local committee believes 100,000 to 150,000 visitors will be attracted to St. Louis to witness "The Miracle" during a 30-day run, beginning Christmas eve. Advance orders for tickets already are coming in the mails, and actual delivery will be undertaken Aug. 1.

Cost of producing the play here, with a cast of 700, is estimated at $325,000, of which the local committee guarantees $100,000 and Gest the balance. The guarantors will be repaid out of ticket receipts, and profits, if any, will be given to charities. As a background for the spectacle, the Coliseum will be transformed into a Fifteenth Century Cathedral.

USE CANTHROX Shampoo

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

We have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—Advertisement.

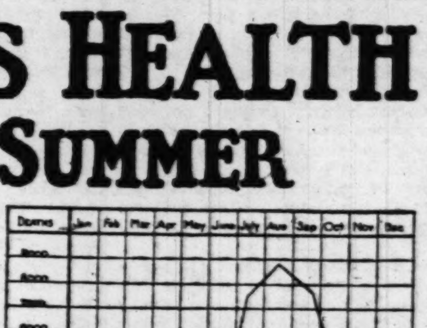
WATCH BABY'S HEALTH CLOSELY IN SUMMER

U. S. Public Health Reports Show Terrific Increase in Infant Mortality From Intestinal Disease During Hot Weather

"Summer is the purgatory of motherhood," according to Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker and Surgeon C. C. Pierce of the United States Public Health Service, in a Supplement to the Public Health Reports.

From 12 to 20 out of every 100 babies born in the United States die during the first year, and the majority of these deaths occur during warm weather.

The principal contributing causes are given as improper feeding and intestinal disorders. Many valuable suggestions are made for proper feeding, sanitation and general care of children in summer.



Reproduced from chart published by U. S. Public Health Service to show appalling increase in the number of infant deaths from intestinal diseases during hot weather period.

The mother should nurse the child for the first year if possible; if not, modified milk is the best substitute. Keep baby cool during hot weather, especially by proper clothing and frequent bathing in tepid water. Give plenty of boiled water. Keep flies away from baby and all utensils used in preparing its food. Never consider any disturbance of baby's bowels as unimportant, or "only summer complaint."

At the first sign of bowel disorder the disturbance should be immediately remedied. In thousands of homes Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is relied on to correct and regulate the bowels. This mild, pleasant laxative, free from injurious drugs, can be given to even the tiniest babies with perfect safety. It can be bought at any drug store.

JARDINE WARNS GRAIN EXCHANGES OF PRICE SHIFTS

Threatens to Go Full Limit of Law Unless They Take Action to Prevent Fluctuations.

'SOMETHING WRONG' IN SUDDEN CHANGES

Advises Farmers to Keep Cash Reserve for Lean Years Instead of Reinvesting All Profits.

By the Associated Press.

MANDAN, N. D., July 4.—The grain exchanges were notified today by Secretary Jardine of the Agriculture Department that unless they voluntarily take action to prevent a repetition of the recent price fluctuations, he will go to the full limit of the law in compelling them to do so.

"During the investigation carried on by the Department of Agriculture to determine the causes of these disastrous price changes," he said in a Fourth of July address here at the Mandan roundup, "I made certain suggestions to representatives of the Chicago Board of Trade and called upon them to consider constructive measures to prevent a similar situation in the future. As I see it, the grain exchanges of this country perform a useful function—at least, we have perfected no better system of marketing. But when the price of wheat fluctuates 12 or 13 cents in a day it indicates to me that there is something wrong.

"There is no agency that can bring about more effectively a correction of this situation than the grain exchanges themselves. They must realize that they have to a large extent lost the confidence of the people and can regain this only by thoroughly putting their house in order. If they fail voluntarily to take appropriate action it is my purpose to exercise to the fullest extent such power as the existing law gives me to require them to do so."

Advises Cash Reserve.

The Secretary's warning was delivered in the course of an exhaustive discussion of the agricultural problems of the country, for whose solution he suggested these policies:

Better farm business methods, including so far as possible the adjustment of production to the prospective needs of the consumer.

Greater reliance by individual farmers and farm organizations upon the information service and advice of the Department of Agriculture.

The maintenance of a liquid cash and staple reserve by farmers to tide them over bad crop years, as against reinvestment of all available profits in more land.

Crop diversification, both as a protection against losses from the failure of a single crop, and for its effect on the fertility of the land.

Greater attention to the production of vegetables, eggs, butter and similar products at home to reduce "out of pocket" costs of the farm.

More diligence in securing the best possible results from the land already under cultivation, to offset any tendency toward over expansion in the opening up of new agricultural areas.

Urges Grading of Products.

Further standardization and grading of farm products to insure the best market price and simplify marketing.

A more adequate application of the co-operative marketing policy, tending toward increased efficiency in the associations already in existence rather than the formation of new associations.

No recommendations for legislation were contained in the Secretary's speech, which was directed rather to the methods by which the farmer can help himself better his condition through intelligent application of the accepted principles of sound business.

"I believe that we will more readily find solutions for the problems of agriculture," he said, "if there are greater co-operation and mutual understanding between farmers and business men. The problems of the farmer are many and the business man will not have a sympathetic understanding of them unless he studies those problems.

Farmer a Balance Wheel.

"The farm is a business; but it is more—it is a home. We are interested in better financial returns for the farmer only as that means better living. We want men and women to stay on the farm, not merely because they have been able to make a living there, but because they have been profoundly satisfied with a farm life. We must have good rural schools, good rural churches, good roads, wholesome recreation and pleasure if farm life is to prove attractive in the highest degree.

"My efforts will be directed to help bring about an efficient, stable and profitable agriculture which will provide a standard of living which is in accord with American ideals. To this end I solicit your whole-hearted co-operation. A firmly established, enlightened and prosperous landown-

A firmly established, enlightened and prosperous landowning population is not only a great national asset, but it is the safest balance wheel in our civilization."

More than 200 cowboys, bedecked in varicolored shirts, high-heeled boots and "five-gallon" hats, were on hand here when Jardine arrived to deliver his address at the roundup.

Confetti streamed over the streets during the final day of the roundup. The Secretary rested or conferred with prominent farmers and business men prior to his address.

SEVEN PERSONS KILLED IN APARTMENT FIRE

Victims Trapped on Third Floor or Saranac Lake, N. Y. Building—11 Rescued..

By the Associated Press.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., July 4. Seven persons are dead and one was seriously injured as the result of a fire in a three-story apartment house here this morning.

The dead: :

George Martin, 65 years old, of Chateaugay.

George Duckett, 21, of Saranac Lake, and his infant daughter.

Peter Dwyer, 35, of Saranac Lake.

Kenneth Monikey, 11, of Saranac Lake.

Robert McGowan, 16, of Burlington, Vt.

Joseph McGowan, 21, of Burlington, a brother of Robert.

Mrs. George Duckett is in a critical condition at the General Hospital. She sustained serious burns and was injured by jumping from a third-story window.

Mrs. Duckett, evidently thinking that she was holding her child, dropped a pillow into the arms of the firemen below. Then she jumped.

Mrs. Sarah Monakey also is in the hospital, but her injuries are thought not to be serious. Several persons suffered minor injuries in escaping from the house.

All the victims were on the third floor of the building where the fire started. Eleven persons on the first and second floors were rescued.

The cause of the fire is undetermined. Starting at 4 a. m., it had gained such headway when firemen arrived from their station only two doors away, that they were unable to rescue any of the persons on the upper floors.

The position of the bodies indicated that most of the victims had died in their sleep. Martin got as far as the window and was hanging over the edge, but firemen were unable to rescue him owing to the intense heat.

FIVE-DAY FLIGHT TO COAST

Army Aviators to Leave Michigan for San Francisco July 15.

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., July 4.—Five fliers of the first army pursuit group, headed by Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, Commandant, will leave Selfridge Field July 15 for flight by easy stages to San Francisco. The itinerary calls for stops at Chicago, Iowa City, Omaha, North Platte, Neb.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Salt Lake City, Elko, Reno and San Francisco. Five days will be required for the trip.

Returning, it is planned to jump from Cheyenne to Chicago at night.

Heat Prestrates Man in Forest Park.

Charles G. Weber, 51 years old, of the St. Francis Hotel, suffered from heat prostration yesterday afternoon while sitting on a bench in Forest Park. He was found on the ground, to where he had fallen, by two passersby, who took him to the City Hospital.

FUNDAMENTALISTS TO FORM A NEW MISSIONARY BOARD

Decision Made at Meeting Called After Modernists Defeat Them Twice in Baptist Convention.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, July 4.—Defeated twice on the convention floor by the majority vote of Modernist delegates, fundamentalists attending the Northern Baptist convention held a session in the Presbyterian church here last night to discuss the question:

"Shall the Baptist denomination become the religious department of the Standard Oil Company?"

Reference to the Standard Oil Co. contained in the call for the meeting was not made the subject of extended discussion during the session. General opposition to the modernist views of Rev. Harry E. Fosdick, pastor of a New York church, attended by members of the Rockefeller family, brought the reference to the Standard Oil Company.

The meeting, which was sponsored by the national organization of the Baptist Union, resolved to take steps toward organizing a new missionary society based upon fundamentalist principles. The organization meeting of the proposed society will be held in Chicago next October and Fundamentalists from all parts of the United States and Canada will be invited.

Mob a Church Session.

A dramatic touch was added to the meeting when the pastor of the Presbyterian church in which it was held, Dr. Mark A. Matthews, delivered an impromptu address in which he lauded the efforts of the fundamentalists, saying:

"Your fight is my fight. Your nickname is Baptist. My nickname is Presbyterian, but our surname is membership in the body of Christ. The battle is on, and will not end until Christ comes again."

The fundamentalists in a statement made clear that the division in missionary endeavors proposed "must not be interpreted as a first step toward separation from the Baptist denomination."

The Rev. J. Frank Norris, editor of the Searchlight, Fort Worth, Tex., said the fundamentalists would attempt to drive the modernist element from the main body of the church.

The Rev. T. T. Shields of Toronto, Canada, hinted at the possibility of a split in the church. He said: "We are charged with being a separatist movement. That is not the intention. What happens remains to be seen."

"Amoeba to Professors."

Dr. Norris touched upon the evolution theory when reference was made to his coming trip to Dayton, Tenn., where he will assist in the prosecution of John T. Scopes.

"The scientists say now that everything came from the amoeba," Dr. Norris said, "and that it would take a man 250,000 years to count a pile of them the size of a pinhead. After billions and trillions and quadrillions of years some of them put on scales and some of them developed fins and some of them feathers and some of them feet and tail and then went swinging in the branches of the trees.

"And some of the little ones got cheated out of the trees and went and hid in the caves and lost their hair and got bald headed. And then they put on clothes and became professors at the University of Chicago.

"Delegates at the Northern Baptist convention came from the Amoeba, but I came from the Garden of Eden."

At the session of the convention last night, Washington was picked as the 1926 convention city.

Compromise Resolution.

The convention this afternoon adopted a compromise resolution, drafted at a meeting of fundamentalists and modernists. It declared that the beliefs of the Baptist church were fixed by the Bible, but omitted mention of the Park Avenue Baptist church, New York City, (the Rockefeller church).

F. W. Freeman of Denver, who had led a fight to have the Park Avenue Church declared out of harmony with the Baptist denomination, announced:

"We will introduce an amendment to the by-laws specifying that a Baptist church necessarily is one that believes the New Testament fundamentals and baptism by immersion."

Dr. Fosdick made as a condition of accepting the Park Avenue pastorate the omission of immersion as a requirement for membership.

After the compromise resolution was adopted Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, whom Dr. Fosdick succeeded at Park Avenue, was elected to the ministers and missionaries benefit board.

Petitions for Mrs. La Follette.

MADISON, Wis., July 4.—A committee of Wisconsin Club women, headed by Mrs. H. W. Chynoweth, Madison, has sent out letters to women leaders throughout the state soliciting signatures for a petition urging Mrs. Robert M. La Follette to become a senatorial candidate to fill the unexpired term of her husband.

Bones of Human Sacrifice Found in Punic Urn

Vessel Containing Bracelets and Rings Was Excavated From Rock Bed — Epitaph in Ink Disappeared When Exposed to Air.

By COUNT BYRON DE PROROK.
Copyright 1925 by New York Times Co.

PARIS, July 4.—The French Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres, after hearing a report by the Abbe J. B. Chabot, vice president of the institute, on excavations by the Franco-American expedition this spring at the Sanctuary of Tanit, Carthage, unanimously adopted a resolution thanking the expedition for the work accomplished, and expressing hope that funds will be raised to enable complete exploration of the ruins.

M. Chabot, who is an authority on the Punic language, and who personally supervised the excavations, told the academy the season had been spent most successfully, and "brought to light more than 300 steles (inscribed slabs), which are precious documents for the study of the Carthaginian civilization and religion." He emphasized the need for continuing excavations on an extensive scale, pointing out that only the eastern edge of the sanctuary had been uncovered, and everything indicated it extended north, south and west under adjoining private properties.

"It would be of capital interest," he said, "to explore this land in a search for the central part of the sanctuary and the temple itself or what remains of it.

"It is urgently necessary," he added, "to obtain these properties without delay, otherwise they will soon be built over, making excavations impossible."

He estimated the cost of completing the work at $20,000.

A Carthagenian Museum.

Chabot began by paying a tribute to Prof. Francis W. Kelsey of the University of Michigan, head of the expedition; Edward Stoevel of Princeton, in charge of the engineering work, and Count Prorok. He pointed out that all objects found are being preserved in a villa contiguous to the ruins, which had been purchased and placed at the disposition of the expedition as a museum through the generosity of W. F. Kenny of New York. He added that "this villa and the sanctuary itself, due to the manner in which it was excavated and preserved, form a veritable Carthaginian museum, unique of its kind."

Turning to discoveries, Chabot caused an unusual stir of interest among the Academicians, who seem to hold it a point of honor to look bored, by producing a basket containing samples of each of three general types of urns into which the 1,100 found in the sanctuary are divided. Aged members stopped chatting among themselves as he brought out the urn of the most ancient period, found in a bed of rock, in which bracelets, rings and bones of infants sacrificed to ancient gods were clearly visible.

The members of the Academy stood up, craning their necks when from under a sack Chabot, revealed a later type of urn and they crowded around him when taking out a third urn, he said:

"I don't know what is in this. It has never been opened. We shall open it here, now."

Ink Disappeared When Exposed.

He then spread the contents of bones and earth on the table before him. It is a rare occasion when any specific objects are examined by the Academy during a public session.

Two preliminary discoveries made in the field were specially stressed by Chabot. One was that the excavations showed there were only two Punic levels to the sanctuary and not four, as previously had been maintained. The other was that the mysterious steles hitherto found without inscriptions might now be explained, for one was uncovered this season with an epitaph written in ink which disappeared completely after a few hours' exposure to the air and sun, leaving the stone bare. M. Chabot believes this has been the fate of others previously considered uninscribed.

The important results of the excavations, Chabot declared, could not yet be revealed, for more time was required to decipher the inscriptions and analyze the bones and other contents of the urns and classify the urns, steles and other objects. He announced he will publish in September a scientific and detailed report of the excavation at the sanctuary.

CONGRESSMAN ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF INTOXICATION

Langley Testified He Became Dizzy After Taking Medicine Because of Exhaustion.

PIKEVILLE, Ky., July 4.—Congressman John W. Langley, republican of Kentucky was acquitted of a charge of drunkenness when it was held in county court here yesterday that he was not walking unsteadily because of an alcoholic condition, but because of the influence of medicine he had taken at a physician's advice to produce the effect of dizziness.

Langley was arrested a few weeks ago on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. W. C. Henritze, who charged he staggered to her apartment door.

Langley testified that he had become exhausted, due to his weakened physical condition, and had stopped in the apartment of a friend who occupied rooms next to Mrs. Henritze. While there he said he took medicine and also a cold bath and was so unfamiliar with the hallways, that when he left the bathroom, he wandered dizzily into the doorway of Mrs. Henritze's apartment. He denied drinking that day.

Dr. A. G. Osborne, the representative's physician said he had advised Langley not to go on the streets after taking the medicine.

Langley was fined $10, and served a four hour jail sentence for contempt of court when he had his first hearing on the charge.

EASTMAN SCHOOL FOR DANCE AND DRAMATIC ACTION

It Will Be First Institution of Its Kind Combining Training in All Its Forms.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 4.—Announcement of the establishment of the Eastman School of the Dance and Dramatic Action, said to be the first of its kind in the country, combining training in all forms of the dance with dramatic action to music, was made here today. The school is the latest development of the activities sponsored by the Eastman School of Music and the Eastman Theater, the $13,000,000 gift of George Eastman to the community. It will open in September with Rouben Namoulian, for two years dramatic director of the operatic department, as director.

The Eastman Theater ballet will be merged with the new school where training will be of much wider scope with both professional and non-professional classes. Members of the operatic department of the Eastman School of Music will receive training in dramatic art and dramatic action to music as well as instruction in the dance.

Motion pictures will be utilized in teaching the courses, students being filmed in their classes and the pictures thrown on the screen to illustrate defects in technique. Practical work will be given on the Eastman Theater stage.

FIRES STARTED AFTER LIQUOR IS SEIZED

Troops in Nova Scotia Strike Zone Have Difficulty in Coping With Disorder.

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, N. S., July 4.—Plentifully supplied with liquor, seized in a raid on a customs house, vandals again have started depredations in the Cape Breton district, where 12,000 United Mine Workers are on strike against the British Empire Steel Co.

Incendiarism, looting and assaults, which were stopped for a time with the arrival of 500 or more provincial and Dominion troops and the organization of special union police, are again causing concern.

Within the last 24 hours three of the company's buildings have been burned. A large structure owned by the Sydney Ice Co., and an empty building along Glace Bay were destroyed. At New Aberdeen a small warehouse was destroyed.

A band of crudely masked men entered the residence of the Collector of Customs and forced him to unlock the customs house. They carried away 43 kegs of rum recently seized. Nova Scotia is one of the three Canadian maritime provinces that has retained the war time dry law.

Union officials have said that the plentiful supply of liquor was in part responsible for the disorders.

A Belgian and his wife were assaulted at Glace Bay and a house of strike antagonists was stoned and windows smashed. Troopers and police are handicapped in preventing disorders by the fact that the company's property is scattered over 30 square miles. Dense forests afford ideal shelter for vandals who swoop down, burn and loot, and then take to cover.

The strike started nearly four months ago, when the company refused a wage increase and abolished credit at company stores.

PROPERTY LOSS IN SANTA BARBARA QUAKE $6,230,000

Estimate, That of Board of California Engineers, Does Not Include Damage to Private Residences

By the Associated Press.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 4.—The total damage to public and business buildings in Santa Barbara by Monday's earthquake, estimated by a board of California engineers who reported today after a detailed examination, is $6,230,000. The estimate does not include damage to private residences.

The engineers, who are headed by Prof. C. E. Marx of the Stanford University engineering school, estimated damage to business buildings and semipublic institutions at $5,000,000; to schools at $700,000, and to county buildings at $230,000. Their report shows that they inspected 411 buildings. Of these the number totally destroyed or to be demolished is 74, including 14 classed as "shacks," requiring further inspection before being demolished 11; unsafe until repaired, 72; safe "as is," 64; in need of repairs but safe for immediate use, 82; damaged and to be opened for use when repaired, 102; safe for use when chimneys are inspected, 6.

Old Franciscan Mission.

The old Franciscan Mission, Santa Barbara's most widely known building, is classed by the engineers as "safe when repairs are made."

The buildings included in the "safe as is" classification are the City Hall and the Christian Church. Total losses include the Pythian building, whose tall clock tower and chimes were familiar to all visitors here; Elks building, Faulding Hotel, church and school of the Parish of Our Lady of Sorrows; Chamber of Commerce building; First Methodist Chrch, chapel and sacristy of the St. Francis Hospital.

Those damaged so seriously that further inspection is recommended with the possibility of being included in the list of total losses are the Masonic Temple, almost completed at a cost of $250,000, the Arlington Hotel, San Marcos building, St. Anthony's College (a training school for candidates for the order of Franciscans), Carillo Hotel, First National Bank building Trinity Episcopal Church and California Hotel. The church buildings included in this class are comparatively new and costlf structures.

Buildings Needing Repairs.

Those considered by the engineers to be safe but in need of repairs include the eight-story Granada Theater building, the State Teachers' College, the Cottage Hospital, St. Vincent's Orphanage, completed only a few months ago at a cost of $500,000; El Mirasol Hotel and the new building of the University Club.

The buildings classed as safe when repairs are made include the postoffice, the one steel frame building in Santa Barbara, the Potter Theater, the Old Mission, the Samarkand Hotel, Central Trust and Savings Bank, the Edison company's large bathhouse, recreation center, St. Francis Hospital, County National Bank building, and the Southern Pacific station.

The schools regarded as safe but needing repairs include the new half-million dollar high school.

Giant Tree Named for Jardine.

By the Associated Press.

LOGAN, Utah, July 4.—In honor of Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine, a giant juniper tree, recently discovered in Logan Conyon near here and declared to be the oldest and largest one of its kind in the world, has been named "Juniper Jardine." The tree has a circumference of about 28 feet and is claimed by local residents to be the oldest living thing, with the possible exception of the redwood trees in California.

Canada Has 652,000 Autos.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, July 4.—Automobiles in Canada have passed the 600,000 mark for the first time in history, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics announces. Motor vehicles registered in Canada Jan. 1 numbered 652,121, compared with 593,323 on Jan. 1, 1924. Ontario was the leading automobile owner among the provinces, with 308,693 cars to its credit. The prairie provinces of Mantioba, Saskatchewan and Alberta combined accounted for 166,234 automobiles.

IOWAN HELD FOR DEATH OF FATHER OF GIRL HE WOOED

Widow Charges He Gave Victim Poison After Latter Opposed Marriage to Daughter.

By the Associated Press.

HARLAN, Ia., July 4.—E. A. Humphrey of Sidney, Ia., was arrested late yesterday on a charge of murder in connection with the death, last week, of Fred Butts from poisoning, and is held in the county jail here pending arraignment, which probably will be Monday.

Humphrey is the foster son of Dr. E. B. Humphrey, a veterinarian of Sydney and was first connected with the investigation through a statement by Mrs. Butts that he had had a disagreement with Butts regarding his courtship of their daughter, Ruth, because his parentage was unknown. He was a guest at the Butts home at the time of the death.

Butts died a short time after taking a dose of what he believed to be Rochelle salts. A chemical analysis of the victim's stomach showed death was due to poison which had been substituted for the medicine either by accident or design.

The Coroner's jury investigating the death returned a sealed verdict and the arrest of Humphrey is presumably a result of the jury's findings.

STATUS OF MARKETING COMPANY UNCERTAIN

Gray Silver, However, Says Options Can Be Taken Up to July 28.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The status of the $26,000,000 Grain Marketing Co., a leasing merger of five large Middle-Western grain companies, sponsored by the American Farm Bureau for co-operative marketing of farmers' wheat, is being discussed as a result of the $36,000,000 failure of Dean, Onativia & Co., stock and grain brokers of New York, Chicago and Washington.

Gray Silver, president of the Grain Marketing Co., said in Chicago there was no connection between the failure and his company. A $4,000,000 payment to the merging companies, due July 28, he said, would be made.

A prepared statement regarding the failure by William F. Unger, counsel for the brokers, says: "It is said that it will be necessary to unscramble the Grain Marketing Co. and its subsidiaries."

The marketing company was organized July 28, 1924, under the Illinois co-operative marketing act, through a combination of the Rosenbaum Grain Corporation and four other grain concerns. Emanuel F. Rosenbaum, president of the Rosenbaum Corporation of Chicago, is a partner in Dean, Onativia & Co.

More Collateral Demanded.

Unger said Dean, Onativia and Co., was plunged into bankruptcy when three Chicago banks demanded additional collateral on loans to the brokerage concern, which was carrying 45,000 shares of Rosenbaum Corporaotion stock at $50 a share. This stock had been turned over to the brokerage firm in exchange for the Rosenbaum partnership.

Unger said that he understood that under the Illinois law, 51 per cent of the stock in the marketing company should have been sold by July 1. But sales to farmers were disappointing. The Chicago banks decided that the Rosenbaum stock was worth only $5 a share.

George E. Marcy, head of the Armour Grain Co. one of the firms merged into the marketing company, said there was no obligation to sell 51 per cent of the stock by July 1.

Largest Wall Street Failure.

The failure is the largest in point of liabilities in the history of Wall Street. Estimates of assets range from $30,000,000 to $35,000,000. The firm received $20,000,000 in loans from New York banks and $7,000,000 from Chicago institutions, all but $5,000,000 of which was secured by collateral other than Rosenbaum corporation stock.

Irving L. Ernst, counsel for the New York receiver, said that the creditors would be paid 100 cents on the dollar.

Gray Silver Confident Options Can Be Taken Up.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4.—The Chicago Herald and Examiner today said Emanuel F. Rosenbaum, "indicated unofficially" that the Grain Marketing Co. would be unable to meet the $4,000,000 in options on the properties of the companies which went under the management of the marketing company last year.

On the other hand, Gray Silver, president of the company, and George Marcy, head of the Armour Grain Co., one of those under option to the Grain Marketing Co., said the options would be taken up on July 28 and the company proceed with active operations.

Rosenbaum, a resident partner in Dean, Onativia & Co., was quoted by the Herald and Examiner as saying that "anyone with an ounce of brains can see that to engineer a financial deal of that magnitude under prevailing conditions and in the short period of time intervening would be virtually impossible."

The Grain Marketing Co. had no connection with Dean, Onativia & Co., its officers said yesterday.

GERMANY BALKS AT CLAUSE IN FRENCH CUSTOMS TREATY

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—The German delegates who are here attempting to negotiate a Franco-German commercial treaty today rejected, in effect, the French proposals for certain customs duties. M. Chaumet, French minister of commerce, said Thursday these duties represented France's last word and that Germany must accept or reject the list as it stood.

However, M. Chaumet is unwilling tonight to accept the German refusal as a break of the negotiations. He will confer Monday with Dr. Trendelenburg, head of the German delegation, and attempt to arrange an ultimate resumption of the conversations instead of allowing the German rejection to stand as a definite rupture.

In refusing the French tariff proposals, the Germans said it is impossible to reach an agreement before the summer adjournments of the French and German parliaments and suggested the commercial negotiations be postponed. France had asked that her wines be given the same customs duties as those from Italy and Spain, but Germany declined this proposal.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Tourist travel to national park reservations this year promises to exceed all previous records. An increase of over 60 per cent has been reported from some parks.

LIRA AND FRANC ARE EXCHANGE FEATURES

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The Evening Post in weekly copyrighted foreign exchange market review today says:

"Adjustment of the financial and political affairs of the Continental debtor nations, including further discussion of war debts arrangements during the week, left the market for exchanges on France, Italy and Belgium without substantial demand even at violent declines. French exchange, which ruled early in the week around 4.55, declined to 4.43½, a new low level for the year, but after that level was reached on Wednesday Government support caused a violent advance to 4.67, when a supply was again met. Italian exchange dropped from 3.57 to 3.33½, the lowest price ever touched for lira checks, and yesterday, when Government support appeared, these documents rallied to 3.54. Belgium moved in harmony with French, selling down to 4.44.

"In sharp contrast with these movements Scandinavian exchanges were in urgent demand, Sweden, naturally moving within a narrow range, being above parity. Norwegian crowns, though, which closed a week ago at 17 cents, rose to 18.43, and crown checks on Denmark advanced to 20.75 compared with the year. Exchange on Holland showed a heavy tone for a time, falling nine points to 39.98, but it recovered most of its loss. Sterling was steadily held, demand ranging from $4.86 to $4.85½ all through the week. Japanese exchange was strong, with an advance of ⅝ to 40.87. Chinese exchanges reflected an improved condition at the Chinese ports and receded from the nominal high levels quoted a week ago. South American exchanges were irregular, Brazil being weak and falling 50 points to 10.60, while Argentine rose 30 points to 11.65.

"Fluctuations moved over a wide range in wild trading in foreign exchanges on Friday. Heavy selling developed in francs and lire after rates had been advanced sharply to new high levels for the recovery. On the renewed pressure both the franc and the lira dropped back heavily. Scandinavian exchanges were also unsettled, recessions taking place in rates on Denmark and Norway. The remainder of the European list was relatively firm, sterling ruling steady.

Following is a list of quotations in the foreign exchange market Friday:

England—Sterling D $4.85⅝, C $4.86⅛; 60-day bills on banks $4.81⅝.

COTTON DOMINATED BY CROP FORECAST

NEW YORK, July 4.—The big factor of the week in the cotton market was the Government's crop report of Thursday. This proved a decided surprise to local traders whose ideas of the probable end June yield indication had been formulated by reports of private authorities. The latter had pointed, on the average to an acreage of slightly under 45,000,000, and end-June condition of around 73.8 and an indicated crop of 13,508,000 bales. The Government report placing the acreage under cultivation at 46,448,000, the condition at 75.9 and the indicated yield at 14,339,000 bales, therefore was decidedly better than anticipated. October contracts which had sold up to 24.14 on Thursday morning broke to 22.93 before the close of the day and yesterday sold off to 22.81, making a decline of 133 points under the selling inspired by the revival of the larger crop ideas. The volume of business tapered off below the 23 cent level for October, however, and selling was probably held in check by the uncertainty of weather conditions in Texas over the two-day adjournment. The surprise in the Government report seemed to be chiefly in connection with the acreage. Few private estimators had placed the probable area above 45,500,000 and the Government's figures led to a revision of all crop views based on the condition.

Early week reports from the goods trade showed an improvement in business with buyers a little more confident, owing to unfavorable crop reports. The demand was checked by the increased crop figures, however, and sellers in the cotton market here seemed to expect a resumption of the hand to mouth policy in the goods while buyers on the decline thought prices low enough pending a break in the Texas drought.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Prospects of a big crop of spring wheat both in the United States and Canada carried wheat prices rapidly downgrade the past week. Largely as a result, the wheat market shows net losses ranging from 9¼c to 11¼c a bushel, compared with a week ago. Meanwhile, corn is 1⅝c to 5⅝c down and oats 1¼c to 2⅛c off, but provisions 15c to 47c up.

Notwithstanding that the spring wheat crop, domestic and Canadian as well, has yet to pass through its critical period, the outstanding fact has been persistent absence of important damage so far from black rust or any other menace. Only about 10 days are left in which a disaster by black rust in the United States is at all likely. Emphasizing this as a weight on values was general recognition that a large crop of spring wheat would mean an exportable surplus for the United States. Such a probable surplus was apparently confronting not only a big yield in Canada, but also a much increased production throughout Europe.

Enlarging receipts of winter wheat, on the other hand, have met with unusual dearth of export demand. Furthermore, a specially untoward development in connection with winter wheat was a decided fall in cash prices at St. Louis, just when the main movement of wheat from Illinois farms was getting well under way. According also to most unofficial estimates which were current, the total expected wheat yield in the United States this season, winter wheat and spring together, is 6,000,000 bushels in excess of the Government June 1 forecast.

A heavy brokerage failure here was another unsettling circumstance as the week came to an end.

Trade estimates that the new corn crop will be the largest on record, 700,000,000 bushels more than last year's total, did a good deal to pull down values of corn and oats.

Advancing quotations on hogs hoisted the provision market.

WHEAT PRICES STRONGER ON WINNIPEG MARKET

By the Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—Opening grain prices at Winnipeg: Wheat—July, $1.55⅝; October, $1.30¼@1.31¼; December, $1.27⅝. Rye—July, none; October, 94c. Barley—July, 85c; October, 75c. Oats—July, 52⅝c; October, 47⅝c. Flax seed—July, $2.12½; October, $2.14.

Closing: Wheat—July, $1.55⅝; October, $1.32¼; December, $1.29¼. Rye—July, 92⅝c; October, 93¼c; December, none. Barley—July, 83⅝c; October, 75¼c. Oats—July, 53c; October, 47⅝c. Flax seed—July, 2.13; October, 2.15.

Closing prices Friday were: July wheat, $1.54⅝; October wheat, $1.30⅝; December wheat, $1.27.

A wheat yield of 350,000,000 bushels for Canada this year was estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in a crop report issued yesterday. The acreage this year is approximately the same as last, the report showed. A yield of 350,000,000 bushels would be 10,000,000 above the average of the past five years.

NEW HIGH RECORDS SCORED BY HALF DOZEN SECURITIES ON ST. LOUIS EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 4.—International Shoe common, which on one day recorded an upturn of 23 points and ultimately recorded a top price of 180, was an outstanding feature on the local market during the past week. The strength of the stock resulted from announcement of plan to call in the 178,000 shares of 8 per cent preferred and issue new not to exceed 100,000 shares of 6 per cent stock. The authorized issue will be 250,000 shares, the same as that to be retained. Missouri Portland again led in activity and scored new high of 71, which was equivalent to 284 for the old $100 stock. Other new high marks were Hamilton-Brown 50, Bruce common 50, Scruggs common 116 and Globe-Democrat preferred 107. The volume of business in aggregate was greater than that of previous week.

Total sales of stocks on the Exchange during the five-day week amounted to 6701 shares, compared with 5488 shares the previous week. Bond sales were $3000 against $8000 a week ago.

Following is a complete list of securities traded in on the Exchange during the past week, sales, highest, lowest, closing prices and net changes being given

BRITISH REVENUES FOR THE FIRST QUARTER DISAPPOINT

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, July 4.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"Anxiety over the present crisis in the cial editor of the London Morning post, in uation obscures all other developments in Great Britain.

"All other troublesome affairs in the industrial world are of minor consideration and are due to a combination of circumstances. These include increased unemployment German competition, your high tariff schedules and your own labor follies. These are all bringing the industrial situation here to a crisis which ultimately will call for unusual remedies.

"The remedies may take the form of subsidies or a protective tariff, although the latter course, of course, is possible only after another general election.

"Although it is generally admitted that much of the industrial depression is due to shortcomings of labor and labor organizations, nevertheless, conditions in some industries, such as coal, iron and steel, have now reached the point where ordinary remedies are insufficient. They would also be too slow if unemployment is to be relieved—and if unemployment is not relieved at an early date the political and social consequences may be unpleasant, to say the least.

"Moreover, it must not be forgotten that demoralization of individuals resulting from prolonged unemployment is a charge against society which must be met in some fashion.

"The Government is coming in for a share of criticism, too, for it is felt that they have not yet played a sufficient part in economizing national expenditures. Estimates of expenditures for the current fiscal year show an increase for the first time since the war, and revenues in the first quarter were discouraging.

"Results in the first three months, however, were disappointing, and fail to give promise of improvement in the remainder of the year. The fact that also the increase in expenditures for the first three months exceeded estimates for the year is disliked. Churchill promised to set up a committee to investigate expenditures, but it is considered that a strong Chancellor should be able to dispense with such a committee and enforce economies.

"Naturally these figures contrast sharply with your astounding prosperity, while the European situation generally is handicapped by the unsatisfactory condition of French and Italian currencies.

"Both countries, it is felt here, would do well to fund their external obligations to the United States at once, although it is admitted the Italian position is peculiarly difficult, her ability to pay in goods and services being naturally affected by prohibition in America, thus restricting shipments of her wines to your country, and by your restriction on emigration from Italy.

"Your position on these policies, of course, is not challenged, but nevertheless business men must take into account these conditions when endeavoring to catalogue Italy's means for meeting her external obligations.

"London considers that America and Great Britain, having a common ground for maintenance of the sanctitty of contracts as affecting East external debts, should also take a strong lead in the sense and business-like administration of the principle—that is, impose only such terms as will enable the debtor countries both to meet their obligations and recover their prosperity.

"The monetary outlook for the next few days remains uncertain, but as soon as the £30,000,000 borrowed from the Bank of England has been returned a steady tone will again likely prevail.

"Income tax payments will again affect the situation. Nevertheless there is no disposition to anticipate a rise in the bank rate. There will probably be a lull in new capital issues until the autumn, in which event the market will likely remain steady with a tendency to recover through the summer.

"A further improvement in your prosperity is anticipated here, for it is felt that further remissions in your taxation should mean the release of wealth to fructify in the hands of private individuals."

*Holiday Saturday.
†Holidays Friday and Saturday.

Influenced by light receipts and an urgent demand, hog prices continued their sharp advance at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week, the closing top of $14.55 per cwt. being within a fraction of the year's high mark. Fat lambs and the bulk of cattle, on the other hand, suffered sharp declines under a liberal offering. Sheep and horses and mules remained steady. Combined receipts of stock for the week which was one day short by virtue of the holiday Saturday, figured slightly under 100,000 head, or about the number that arrived the previous week. Cattle and calves alone at 34,144 head were the largest of the year.

Medium and common beef steers, including Westerns, beef cows and the medium grades of light steers and heifers, the offering of which comprised the major portion of the week's run, depreciated 50c to 75c, with spots ruling off as much as [illegible]. Canner and cutter cows broke 25c to [illegible], mostly 50c, and veal calves dropped [illegible]. Bulls and stocker and feeder cattle remained steady. A few choice steers and light steers and heifers on sale received a much better reception than the [illegible] classes, prices gaining 25c to 50c. New tops for the year were established by the sale of steers at $12.00 and $12.[illegible] per cwt. A load at the former figure came from Tennessee and the price was the highest for cattle from that State since [illegible]. A car of Nebraska steers and heifers mixed also brought $12.00. The bulk of all native beef steers made $8.00 to $11.[illegible] and Oklahoma grassers, of which there were right at 200 cars, ranged from $4.[illegible] to $9.50, the latter being the highest figure paid for Oklahoma cattle in several years. Several consignments of light steers and heifers were good enough to score in the $10.00 to $11.00 columns. Plainer kinds sold in a wide range. Beef cows [illegible] at $5.00 to $8.00, with the low end of $4.00 and choice quoted up to $7.75. Cutter cows closed at $3.00 to $3.75 and canners at $2.25 to $2.75. Bologna bulls cashed in a range of $4.00 to $[illegible], weighty beef animals made $5.00 to $[illegible] and canner and cutter offerings [illegible] in the $3.00 column. A moderate business was transacted in stocker and feeder cattle. Steers varied in price from $4.00 to $7.60, cows were quotable at $3.00 to $4.00, heifers at $3.25 to $5.50 and [illegible] at $3.50 to $5.00. The best veal calves centered largely around $10.00 and $10.[illegible]. Southern canner yearlings closed 25c lower at $3.50 to $3.60.

Receipts Decrease.

Hog receipts during the past week were sharply decreased in volume, both here and at other markets, and prices [illegible] soaring to the highest point reached in several months, Friday's peak being [illegible] below the record for the current year. Slight weaknesses were manifested during a few of the sessions, but the market at no time showed any material decline, being on the upward trend practically the entire week. Monday's top was $13.[illegible], against $14.55 Friday. On Saturday, June 27, the top was $13.80. Advances were evenly distributed on the hogs averaging from 160 lbs. and over, these weights mostly 70c to 75c higher than last week's close. Bulk of these weights Friday sold at $14.40 to $14.[illegible] with the plain kinds lower, according to quality. The spread in price was narrow throughout the week, with [illegible] shipping weights when of good quality selling right up with the weighty [illegible]. STOCK LIST AVERAGE TO NEW PEAK

Bearish News Without Permanent Effect — Italian and French Exchange Rates Set New Low Records During Week.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"Surging forward at times, the stock market this week again surprised the best prophets by advancing to the highest average levels on record. Usually when news comes out that is unfavorable, or in which an unfavorable interpretation can be read, the bears are able to depress prices. Particularly is this so in a market which has sustained a long and sharp advance. Earthquakes from Montana to California, and advance in the call money rate to the highest level since 1923 and declines in certain European exchanges to the poorest levels in their history, all in the week just ended, did not, however, discourage those who are in the stock market. Their only response was to push stocks to still higher levels. Again this week record prices were paid for seats on the leading exchanges. Very clearly the market is in strong hands. Professionals and the public are refusing to pyramid their holdings on shoestring margins but loans have reached a large figure.

Steel Situation.

"Perhaps such strength in the circumstances would not be possible except for the inherently sound position of business. Those who hold socks are encouraged by the fresh signs of recovery in the steel industry once the summer lull has passed. Already it is next to certainty that operations this year will not get down to 60 per cent, and they may not drop much below the present level, around 70 per cent. Last year they fell to about 40 per cent. Business insolvencies are making a smaller toll in liability losses than at any time in five years. Automobile manufacturers now expect that July may run better than June. Consumption of goods in most lines continues good. Commodity prices remain firm. Last but not least, money remains cheap. From the standpoint of those who buy stocks a more favorable combination of circumstances seldom occurs. That business should be good and money easy at the same time greatly increases the temptation to hold securities.

Trade Reviews Encouraging.

"The composure with which the financial community received the announcement of the failure of the Stock Exchange house of Dean, Onativia & Co. was regarded among traders as an index of the underlying strength of the market.

"Reason for the continued strength in securities prices was found in the more encouraging views held by trade authorities in the weekly summaries of commercial conditions. Special importance was attached to the more even balance between production and consumption of goods. Readjustments have established a sound basis for progress in many industrial lines. A distinct turn for the better in the drygoods markets was noted. This being accomplished as a result of the unusually hot weather. A strong tone in hide markets continued while demand is holding up well in the steel trade.

Decline in Lira.

"French francs declined to a new low for the year and Italian lira to a new low for all time on speculative selling stimulated. In the decline little or no indication appeared of Government support and the heaviest selling originated on the other side of the water. These exchanges strengthened Thursday, however, as a certain amount of official support was given to the market. That France seeks to issue another large note issue is disturbing to those who recognize the evils of inflation, but what has disturbed the situation more is the failure of that country to balance its budget. Evidence is growing that the budget will be balanced, however, and plans are being made for a further discussion that may lead to a settlement of the French and Italian debts to this country.

Cotton Report Surprise.

"Not in a long while has the news carried anything so surprising, and at the same time so interesting to the market, as what came out Thursday on the condition of the cotton crop. The Government's estimate of the condition on June 25 indicates a yield of 14,339,000 bales. So large a crop of cotton has been gathered only twice in the history of the country, once in 1911-12 when 16,[illegible] bales were taken in, and again in 1914-15, when the total reached a record high of 15,906,000. Last year's production was 13,618,000 bales. Up to Thursday the trade and the country had expected that the condition would indicate a yield near the figure for a year ago. That it would indicate the third largest crop on record nobody expected. Consequently cotton prices broke sharply once trading was resumed after the recess allowed during which to study the report. About a cent a pound was lost from the previous price for the commodity.

Future of Crop.

"The report is by no means final, but has significance as the first official estimate for the year. It showed an acreage considerably in excess of that planted a year ago, in explanation of which experts say that many states have substituted cotton for other crops and that the acreage has been swelled by the cultivation of new land and land that was idle last year. Gossip around the cotton pit after the report was to the effect that a further recession might have occurred except for the dry conditions that have prevailed in Texas during the last week and not taken into account by the Government's report. Then, too, the time is early for any very accurate estimate of damage likely through infestation of the boll weevil. Some people feared that the prospects for a good crop might check the recent improvement in textile activities, but the stock market yesterday, curiously enough, seemed to pay little attention to the new estimate.

PROSPERITY IS HERE—NO MAN OR WOMAN WHEN SICK CAN TAKE ADVANTAGE OF OPPORTUNITIES THAT COME WITH PROSPEROUS TIMES

Mr. Brooks, a man 69 years old, came to me with a bad case of Internal, Protruding Piles, of 15 years' standing. I cured him sound and well.

Any person, who is afflicted with rectal troubles, should come without delay. The longer an afflicted person goes without a cure, the more critical their condition becomes. Rectal troubles never get well by the use of salves, lotions, suppositories, etc. They must be treated by a specialist, who knows from experience what to do, and how to do it.

My terms are reasonable, being adjusted to suit the patient. All I want to know is that after I effect a cure, I will get the fee we agree upon. If the patient wishes, they can deposit the amount we agree upon in the First National Bank, in St. Louis, payable to me after they are cured, and they will be the judge, or they can pay by the week or month.

DR. C. MATTHEW COE

St. Louis, Mo., June 22, 1925.

Dr. C. Matthew Coe, 501 Pine St.
My Dear Dr. Coe—

I am a man 69 years old and had been afflicted with internal and protruding Piles for 15 years. Your prompt and efficient cure seems all the more remarkable to me because of my age and the number of years I had been afflicted. And also because I had been operated on by a very reputable surgeon but had failed to obtain a cure.

I cannot say too much for the good you did for me, nor do I miss an opportunity to tell anyone else I know who is afflicted, that your office is the place to get rid of the misery caused by any form of rectal trouble.

Yours respectfully,

Oliver Brooks

AMERICAN PLAN TO QUIET CHINA IS DISCUSSED

Japanese Foreign Office Holds Time Not Ripe for Abolishing Extra-Territoriality.

FRENCH AND BRITISH MINISTERS CONFER

Two Treaties Drawn Up at Washington Conference Are Favorably Reported in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

TOKYO, July 4.—The United States Government's desire for consideration of the question of extra-territorial rights in China has been widely commented upon by the Japanese press.

A spokesman for the Tokyo foreign office today endorsed the view of his Government, already announced, that although Japan is ready for the abolition of extra-territorial rights in China at the earliest possible time, and is prepared to facilitate Chinese efforts toward this end, it considers all such attempts at present premature in view of the disturbed conditions in the country.

The Japanese foreign office has no official knowledge of the proposal the United States intends to make regarding China, but does not believe the Washington Government is likely to approach the Powers immediately with plans for abrogation of the special privileges held by foreigners in China.

French and British Ministers Discuss U. S. Position.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—The American Government's idea of calling a conference to consider the Chinese problem is said to have been talked over between M. Briand, the Foreign Minister, and Lord Crew, the British Ambassador, during the latter's visit to the Foreign Office.

The two treaties relating to China which were drawn up during the Washington Conference were recommended today for ratification by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies. Foreign Minister Briand requested this action be taken.

The first of the treaties relating to policies to be followed by Foreign powers in safeguarding the rights and interests of China and in stabilizing conditions in the country.

The second provides for revision of Chinese customs duties in order to bring about increased revenue for the Chinese Government.

Three Japanese Rescued From Mob in Shanghai.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, July 4.—Mobs attacked three Japanese here last night. The victims were rescued by Chinese police.

Reports received in Shanghai state Japanese and British stores were looted yesterday at Swatow Kwangtung province.

Oil Company's Offices Ransacked by Chinese Soldiers.

By the Associated Press.

CHENOKING, Czechvan, China, July 4.—The Asiatic Petroleum Co.'s property here was entered today by 800 hoodlum Chinese soldiers, who destroyed the offices and ransacked the living quarters of the staff.

The mob scattered only when the British gunboat Teal arrived.

So-called Chinese Boy Scouts led another mob which stoned workmen on the wharf of a British company here. The attackers were scattered by British marines, who charged with bayonets. One Chinese was injured. Local Chinese officials are inactive regarding the disturbances.

Chinese Cotton Exchange at Shanghai Reopens.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, July 4.—The Chinese Cotton Exchange here, which it was announced yesterday would be indefinitely closed because of disturbed conditions, reopened this morning.

PHAFF FREED OF PIRACY

French Authorities Dismiss Case Based on Raid on Vessel.

By the Associated Press.

BREST, France, July 4.—All the charges have been dismissed against Max Jerome Phaff, an American, now on bail, who was arrested in 1924, charged with piracy raid on the steamer Mulhouse.

The vessel's owners lost their suit for insurance on the Mulhouse's cargo, and the crew has filed a suit for damages against the owners.

Phaff was arrested in Paris in September, 1924, and taken to Brest for trial on the piracy charge, the penalty for which is death by hanging. Phaff is an American citizen, born in Germany. He refused to plead to the charge. This case started a hunt for rum raiders in New York and other American cities and involved the names of numerous persons alleged to be identified with the smuggling of liquor.

After a preliminary examination, Phaff was released in 5000 francs bail. He arrived in New York from Europe last November.

LAUNCH LOADED WITH 6000 QUARTS OF LIQUOR CAPTURED

Eight Men Arrested in Texas While Transferring Cargo to Truck at Mouth of River.

By the Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Tex., July 4.—A sea-going gasoline launch, with 6000 quarts of imported liquor and eight men were captured early today by deputy sheriffs at the mouth of Neches river near here. The men were loading the liquor on a truck, which also was taken. The capture is believed to reveal running operations on a large scale between Sabine ports and rum row in the Gulf of Mexico.

Among the eight men were two who gave their names as J. H. Sprong of New Orleans and O. Y. Bruce of Gretna, La.

WRINKLES, LINES OR CROWS-FEET

Lemon Juice Tightens Skin

Squeeze the juice of two lemons in a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents, shake well and you have the very mildest anti-wrinkle lotion to tighten relaxed skin, erase fine lines and eradicate crows feet.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion into the skin at night. By morning most of the tell-tale wrinkles, tired lines and crows-feet are smoothed out, giving a more youthful contour to cheeks, chin, throat. It leaves the skin velvety soft, clear and fresh.

Beauty experts use this astringent lotion for enlarged pores, also to bleach and whiten sallow, tanned skin.

Mix this harmless lotion yourself since it acts best immediately after prepared.

BROWNS BEAT TIGERS, 12-10, AFTER LOSING 7-1

American Flag Sets Track Record in Winning Dwyer Stakes

DANGEROUS, SECOND, IS FAR BEHIND

Man o' War Colt Negotiates Mile and Five-Sixteenths in 2:10 3-5—Adds $8900 to Winnings.

By G. F. T. Ryall.
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Nothing could have been more fitting than American Flag should come breezing down in front on the Fourth of July. Just as he did in the Belmont Stakes a few weeks ago Man o' War's son, won the Dwyer Stakes before a crowd of close to [illegible]000 at Aqueduct today.

Galloping six lengths ahead of his field, he beat Gifford A. Cochran's Dangerous, while Silver Fox, held up till this afternoon, American Flag's closest rival, was third eight lengths back.

Carrying top weight of 126 pounds, American Flag ran the mile and five-sixteenths in 2:10 3-5 setting a new track record for the distance. Not even the victory of Ladkin over Epinard in the second International Special last fall evoked such a demonstration from the crowd.

Silver Fox Makes Bid.

To the surprise of the crowd, American Flag if anything, broke on top and Johnson shot him right to the front, though Silver Fox, Swope and Marconi headed him to the first turn. Silver Fox continued to make the running through the back stretch, but at the six furlong pole he gave place to Marconi, while Johnson was content to wait with American Flag in fourth place. As they rounded the back stretch turn he moved up slightly, while Dangerous closed up under the clever ride of Sande.

Half way round, L. Fator on Silver Fox made his bid trying to steal that little ground that sometimes means victory. But Johnson just let the big chestnut colt step around the turn and as they hit the stretch he went to the front.

Silver Fox fought with him for half a furlong then dropped back staggering to give place to Dangerous. The race was over then and there for the big chestnut just breezed the rest of the way. Des[illegible] closed fast at the end to be fourth with Swope, which quit at six furlongs, next then Marconi and last of all Reminder.

American Flag, which is now the leading money winner horse of the season, added $8900 to his winnings in the Dwyer.

Flight of Time Victor.

Flight of Time, scratched in the American Stakes a week ago, galloped off with the Tremont Stakes for 2-year-olds at six furlongs, beating Sarmaticus by five lengths, with Mars as far back and Navigator fourth.

Flight of Time, which won on his first appearance under colors unimpressively, went to the front at the break, while Sarmaticus and Canter, one of this spring's [illegible] in Maryland, chased him with

Hornsby Suffers Ankle Sprain and Will Be Out Few Days

CHICAGO, July 4. BESIDES losing two games to the Cubs here today, the Cardinals lost the services of their manager, Rogers Hornsby, for a time at least, when he sprained his right ankle trying to beat out an infield grounder in the first inning of the afternoon contest.

He had to retire from the contest and though he was hobbling around after the game, his ankle was sore and it was considered likely that he would be unable to return to duty for a few days.

Hornsby insisted that he would not be out for any length

Champion Villa Loses Decision To McLarnin

19-Year-Old Coast Boxer Wins in Ten Rounds—Title Does Not Change Hands.

By the Associated Press.

OAKLAND, Cal., July 4.—Jimmy McLarnin, 19-year-old flyweight of Vancouver, B. C., and California, provided a real ring upset here today when he trounced Pancho Villa, flyweight champion in workmanlike fashion and was given a 10-round decision.

Villa was prevented from making his best showing because of the extraction of a badly ulcerated tooth less than 24 hours before the fight. At that, the little Filipino stepped at breakneck speed throughout, putting up his usual cautious battle and taking everything that McLarnin could give him, without backing up. The champion showed frequent flashes of speed despite his loss of stamina.

McLarnin, while he failed to show a punch, had a world of confidence and was willing to slug toe to toe with the champion every time Villa offered that sort of battle. It appeared to be fairly even for the first six rounds, but McLarnin slowly forged ahead thereafter making the champion miss frequently and getting in many hard knocks himself where they hurt the most.

The decision was a popular one.

The flyweight title did not change hands as McLarnin did not make the weight.

Henry Wallach, New York lightweight, won an easy decision in four rounds over Patsy Flanagan of St. Louis.

Dave Au, San Francisco Chinese bantamweight, was given a decision over Lou Richards, Oakland.

TILDEN BEATS CHAPIN IN STRAIGHT SETS TO WIN NEW YORK FINAL

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The whirlwind metropolitan tennis campaign of William T. Tilden II brought the national champion his third tournament triumph in as many weeks today, when he easily defeated Alfred H. Chapin Sr. of Springfield, Mass., in the final round of the Nassau Country Club's invitation singles, 6—0, 6—4, 6—0.

By his victory, Tilden attained the distinction of passing through three successive net competitions without losing a set. The Metropolitan and Eastern New York State singles titles had fallen almost as readily as the Nassau honors to the magic racquet of the champion.

MISS HOUSTON IV SETS WORLD'S RECORD IN HYDROPLANE RACE

By the Associated Press.

WHITEHALL, Mich., July 4.—Miss Houston IV of Houston, Tex., set a new world's record for class 510 hydroplanes here today when she covered the 10-mile course in the eighteenth annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Powerboat Association in 13 minuts 8 1-5 seconds.

SIX-RUN INNING BRINGS VICTORY IN AFTERNOON, VANGILDER HURLS WELL

Jacobson and Williams Pole Home Runs—Danforth Batted Hard in Second Contest—Giard Hurls Three Innings in Morning.

By Dent McSkimming.

Only the weight of a great batting punch enabled the Browns to gain an even break in their pair of holiday games with the Detroit Tigers yesterday. They hammered out a 12 to 10 victory in the afternoon game after losing the morning contest, 7 to 1.

A Detroit fan, viewing the games, probably would have decided that the Tigers should have taken the afternoon game. Wells, Doyle, Stoner and Rip Collins pitched miserable ball. Or, as the Brownie fan would have it, Sisler's men mauled the ball so fiercely that they could not be stopped by any sort of pitching.

Neither morning nor afternoon game was a brilliant example of how the national pastime should be played. There were errors on both sides.

Danforth Batted Hard.

Dave Danforth and Elam Vangilder pitched for the Browns in the afternoon game and although Dave permitted 10 hits and 8 runs in the six innings that he worked, he was credited with the victory. Vangilder did a good job of relief work.

A six-run rally in the sixth inning won for the Sisler men. Gene Robertson instigated the attack on Pitcher Doyle when he singled to right, Bennett, batting for Danforth, coaxed a walk and Manager Cobb waived Doyle out of the box. Lil Stoner, who relieved Doyle, proved a poor choice. He walked two batters and was found for two hits, but before the third out was made, the Browns had taken the lead at 10 to 8.

Vangilder finished the game and was very effective. He reached dizzy pitching heights in the ninth inning, when, with the tying run on base, he fanned Haney for the final out.

Kenny Williams' home run in the eighth inning gave the Browns their eleventh run. Marty McManus hit over Cobb's head for three bases and scored on Hargrave's single, making an even dozen runs for the home team.

Cobb Causes Uproar.

Ty Cobb, out of the lineup because of an injury, was not out of the game. He created more uproar and had more influence on the proceedings than if he were the pitcher and batter combined. Finally, restless under the restraint of the rules which keep idle players in the dugout, the Peach forced himself into the game as a pinch batter in the seventh inning in the afternoon. He obtained two hits in two times at bat.

A very persistent rooter, occupying a box over the Detroit dugout, heckled the Tiger players, Cobb in particular, in the early stage of the game. Cobb, the baiter of umpires and opposing players, could not stand the rooter's gestures and piercing voice and he stopped the game for five minutes, trying to have the annoyer removed. He succeeded in having a police officer remonstrate with the fan but the rooting continued unabated.

Giard Deserved Better Fate.

Principally because of the sloppy fielding of his mates, Joe Giard lasted only 2 and 2-3 innings in the morning game, retiring in favor of Milton Gaston.

"Dutch" Leonard, of course, had much to do with the rout of the Brownies. He allowed only 5 hits. The proof of his pitching excellence was the fact that the Detroit fielders had virtually no hard chances during the entire course of the game. Leonard pitched a crafty game of ball, forcing such good hitters as Sisler, Williams and McManus to hit bad pitches. "Dutch" gave Sisler's sluggers only a small piece of the ball at any time and Lamotte's triple in the first inning was the only man-sized wallop of the game.

Gene Robertson, Marty McManus and Joe Evans were all guilty of lax defensive methods although Robertson alone was charged with

PITCHERS FAIL AND CARDS DROP TWO GAMES 7-6 AND 9-1

Haines and Sherdel Batted Hard; Morning Game Goes 12 Innings

Kaufmann Holds Hornsby's Men in Afternoon and Poles Two Homers—Team Still Ahead of Cincinnati.

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Rogers Hornsby and his Cardinals will not remember this Fourth of July with any pride or joy. The Chicago Cubs gave them a double-barreled trouncing and knocked them two games below the .500 mark, an objective which they had gained yesterday for the first time since April 24.

In the morning an error by Hornsby, himself, prevented the Cardinals from winning in 10 innings, and the Cubs showed their appreciation of this break by capturing the verdict, 7 to 6, in 12 innings. In the afternoon the Cubs lambasted Bill Sherdel and won, 9 to 1.

Three Hits Off Kaufmann.

Tony Kaufmann, right-hander, was master of the Cardinals in the afternoon game. He was a no-hit pitcher for eight of the nine innings, the Cardinals getting their three hits and one run by bunching two doubles, a single and a sacrifice fly in the sixth frame.

No Cardinals reached base in any other innings, except in the first, when Shinners walked, and in the third, when Sherdel drew a pass.

The Cardinals' first hit came in the sixth after Kaufmann had retired nine batters in a row. It was a scratch hit at that. Blades sent a short fly to right and Heathcote started after it a bit late. He reached it, but could not hold it, and while he was turning a somersault before relieving the ball, Blades stretched it into a double. Shinners followed with a single to left, putting Blades on third and Hayzor scored on Cooney's sacrifice fly to Heathcote. Bottomley doubled to right, putting Shinners on third, but Kaufmann put on the brakes and retired Flack on a foul to Jahn. Kaufmann then retired the Cardinals in order in the seventh, eight and ninth.

Pitcher Poles Two Homers.

Kaufmann alone accounted for enough runs to defeat the Cardinals. In the fifth inning he hit over the left-field fence for a home run and in the sixth, on his next trip to the plate, he hit another home run to left.

Bill Sherdel held the Cubs to one hit in the first three innings, but went to pieces in the fourth. Adams opened the inning with a single to left and Heathcote hopped to Bottomley. Bottomley then made a nice stop of a grounder off Freigau's bat, but spoiled the good stop by making a wild throw to second, trying to force Adams. The ball went into center field and Adams reached third and Freigau second. Brooks pasted a single to center, scoring Adams and Freigau, and then, after being caught in a run-up between first and second, Brooks eluded Toporcer and slid safely into second.

Jahn scored Brooks with a single to left and Hartnett's double scored Jahn with the fourth run of the inning.

Kaufmann's first homer was the Cubs' fifth run and in the sixth they sent their total to nine. Jahn opened with a double to right and advanced on Hartnett's infield out. Grimm lined into the right-field seats for a homer, scoring behind Jahn, and after Maranville singled, Kaufmann hit his second circuit wallop.

Mails Hurls in Form.

The one bright spot in the day of disasters was the excellent pitching of Walter Mails, who relieved Sherdel after Maranville's single in the sixth. Kaufmann's second homer was off Mails, but that was the only safety off the Duster in two and two-thirds innings. He struck out Freigau and Brooks in the seventh and Hartnett and Kaufmann in the eighth.

It is likely, in view of Mails' good showing, that he will be given a chance to start a game soon. On his last start, against Boston in St. Louis, he was clouted after pitching five good innings.

Pittsburg's double victory over Cincinnati enabled the Cardinals to remain in the first division, but the same two victories increased the margin between the men of Hornsby and first place.

The Cardinals departed tonight for Cincinnati where they play one game tomorrow. Then they go East, opening a series in Boston with a double header Tuesday afternoon.

Error Ends Morning Game.

An error by Hornsby lost the morning game.

Lester Bell put the Cardinals ahead in the tenth inning, hitting over the left-field fence for a home run.

In the Chicago half of the inning Hornsby started by making a spectacular stop of Griffith's grounder behind second. Mike Gonzales smashed a double against the right-field fence and Pittenger, running for the Cuban, scoring the tying run when Hornsby missed a grounder off Grimm's bat.

The Cubs put over the winning run in the twelfth on a single by Grigsby, a sacrifice by Hartnett and Maranville's single to center.

The Cardinals took the lead with two runs in the first inning, Shinners and Hornsby hitting home runs, the four-base blow of Rog increasing his 1925 total to 22. In the second, they filled the bases with nobody out, but Haines forced a man at the plate and Blades hit into a double play.

The Cubs pounded Haines for four hits and three runs in the second and Brooks' double, a sacrifice and an infield out produced another in the third. Gonzales made the total five in the fifth by hitting over the right-field fence for a home run.

Hornsby's men tied the score in the sixth on a single by Shinner, doubles by Bottomley and Toporcer and a single by Bell.

Haines improved toward the finish, but he was hit unusually hard, the Cubs piling up 17 safeties.

Vick Kean was knocked out of the box in the sixth and the only run off Cooper, who replaced him, was produced when Bell hit his homer.

Shinners, Toporcer and Bell did the heavy work for the Cards, Shinners getting a home run, a double and a single, Toporcer two singles and a double and Bell a home run, a double and two singles.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Leave Hope Behind.

ALL in vain was Harry Wills' conquest of the "King of the Cabarets," Charley Weinert. The big negro slapped over the fourth-rater from Buda pest in championship style.

But it doesn't spell a championship for Wills. In fact, from where we sit it appears that Wills is doomed to drift into middle age before any rival of merit risks a battle with him.

When time fights on the side of the champion we may look for a battle; but probably not even then will one materialize.

The fact is, all the recent utterances of Dempsey, plus the palpable evasions of the champion and his manager for the past three years, lead to the conclusion that Dempsey has not and never had any real intention of giving the negro a chance, at least not until all other "big-gate" prospects have been milked and canned.

WILLS is too big and powerful, it would seem, for Dempsey to be sure of doing his stuff.

We do not doubt that Dempsey has the better heart and the better punch. Nor is there any doubt that if he could land on Wills it would be the end of the Black Peril.

But those who have seen the ease with which the 213-pound black handled such powerful men as Firpo believe that Wills would lock Dempsey's arms and render him helpless for 15 rounds, unless the referee broke up his plan of campaign.

Dempsey evidently has considered the matter and decided that the task of conceding 23 pounds weight to a man more experienced, infinitely more powerful and nearly as hard a hitter as himself, is one to be saved for the very last.

And, forget it not—Dempsey is no longer the Dempsey of Toledo. Nor will he ever again play the swordfish to the whale.

At least, not with Wills as the whale.

When Dempsey-Wills matches are talked about or reported, just remember this little statement of Dempsey made in London: "I expect to fight at least three more fights before I retire. The first will be with Gene Tunney, but not before July, 1926."

The others he did not name. Our guess is Wills will be the last.

Tunney Not There, Yet.

GENE TUNNEY is a better man than Tom Gibbons. Therefore he ought to beat Dempsey. He himself says so. He argues that Gibbons stayed 15 rounds with Dempsey but could not stay the limit with Tunney himself.

It's a good argument. The form holds good in many cases. It held good for Tunney when he pointed out some weeks ago that he had stopped Carpentier where Gibbons had failed; and that, ergo, he should beat Gibbons. He did.

Tunney declares that Dempsey is easy to hit and DOESN'T KNOW HOW TO BOX.

He grants Jask one asset—a tremendous punch.

So Tunney thinks he will chop up the renowned champion and gain the title next July.

Can't Trade Blows With Jack.

TUNNEY has improved, but not enough to beat a deteriorated Dempsey. Jack is still young. Doubtless his punch is deadly as of yore. Against Tunney he will land it.

Against any man who will box in the open, he will land it. The only way to stop Dempsey is to tie up the source of his power—his arms—as did Gibbons and as Wills would do.

Our best advice to Tunney is to remain strictly away from both Wills and Dempsey.

Both are poison to all but the wisest of foes. And Tunney hasn't graduated yet.

The Passing Years.

ADD to the testimony in favor of the athletic longevity the performances of three major league hurlers, two of whom were cast off by their teams and the third all but given up as "through" about four years ago.

The men are all pitchers and all are with the Washington American League club, referred to jokingly as the "Old Men's Home," but today leading the American League race.

The men are Walter Johnson, Stanley Coveleskie and Walter Ruether. Their combined record for this year is 39 victories and eight defeats, apportioned as follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Johnson	12	4	.750
Coveleskie	10	1	.909
Ruether	9	3	.750

JOHNSON is 38 years old. Four years ago they sent him to Bonesetter Reese and that usually means that a pitcher has reached the end of his string. For two years he drifted along. Now he is better than ever.

Coveleskie was discarded to Washington by Cleveland for a couple of "eggs." And here he is again, going better than ever, at the age of 34. Tris Speaker's head is being called for by the mob, because he let this hurler go.

Ruether, discarded by Brooklyn is pitching equally well as Johnson and is one of the best in the game today. He is only 32 years old. According to Johnson's experience, Ruether has six more years of major league usefulness.

Pirates Increase Lead, Winning Two From Reds

Scores Are 7—5 and 7—1—Wright's Homer and Carey's Steal of Home Features.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, July 4.—Pittsburg won both morning and afternoon games from the Reds, here today, the scores being 7 to 5 and 7 to 1. This double victory, while the Giants lost two, put the Bucs out in front by better than two full games.

Biemiller, a Red recruit was wild, six passes and seven hits, giving Yde a lead which the Reds could not overcome, despite errors in the morning.

Carey had 3 stolen bases, one of them a pilfer of home.

In the second game Meadows held the Reds in check, after the Pirates had taken a lead at the expense of Rixey. Glen Wright, Pirate short stop, hit a home run with two on bases in the third to put the Bucs in front, a position they never yielded.

The Pirates and Reds have played nine games in a little more than a week, the Pittsburg contingent taking seven.

Rixey was a victim three times and Luque twice, but Pete Donohue got two victories.

Senators Split With Red Sox

Ehmke Downs Champions, 7-4—Ogden Victor in Night-cap by 5-1 Score.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, July 4.—Boston and the world champion Senators divided their holiday double-header this afternoon.

Behind Ehmke in the opener, the Sox went over, 7 to 4, the Hose getting to Gregg in the third and to Russell in the fourth for three runs in each case.

The second game was a corker, but Ogden eventually edged Wingfield out and the vistors won, 5 to 1, Wingfield weakening in the seventh. In this game the Sox made four double plays and Joe Harris of the champs hit a homer over the left field wall, his third homer in as many playing days here.

Tunney Kayoes Herman in Second

Right to Jaw Ends Bout After Minute and Half of Fighting in Session.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., July 4.—Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion, knocked out Italian Jack Herman in the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night. The fight ended after a minute and a half of boxing in the session. A right to the jaw sent Herman down for the full count.

Tunney weighed 186 pounds and his opponent 188.

INDIANS RALLY AND GAIN EVEN BREAK WITH WHITE SOX

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., July 4.—Cleveland split even with Chicago in the Independence day double-header, Cleveland winning the afternoon game, 5 to 4, after losing the morning encounter, 14 to 5.

The Tribe staged a ninth-inning rally good for three runs to win the second game. In that inning singles by Burns, Spurgeon, Jamieson, Summa and McNulty sent over the needed scores.

Speaker gave the Indians their first run in the opening inning with a home run over the right field wall.

The game was a pitchers' struggle between the veteran Urban Faber and Walter Miller. Honors went to the Sox veteran until the ninth inning, when he faltered and lost.

Pennock Victor, 1-0, in 15-Inning Duel With Groves—Shocker Pounded in Second Contest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Before the biggest crowd of the year, over the 52,000 mark, the Yankees and Athletics broke even here today.

The first game was a pitchers' battle between Groves and Pennock, the Yankee southpaw winning in fifteen innings by a score of 1 to 0.

The Athletic's hit Shocker hard in the second battle, while Harriss was steady after a bad first inning and the Mackmen evened the count on the day, 8 to 5. Poole's batting won the second game.

The first game was the best pitching display of the year. Pennock retired the Athletics in 11 of the 15 innings in order, allowing only four hits and did not give a base on balls. Only two Athletics reached third base. Only 47 men went to bat against him in the 15 frames.

Groves was hit harder, but showed great pluck in the pinches and it was not until the fifteenth that a single by Veach, a sacrifice and a single by O'Neill sent in the run that won.

MUNN WINS TWO MAT BOUTS IN ONE DAY

By the Associated Press.

OKMULGEE, Ok., July 4.—Wayne "Big" Munn won straight falls from George Nelson of Chicago here this afternoon in 6 and 2 minutes. He used the crotch hold.

Munn came to Okmulgee from Dewey, where he disposed of Pat McGill in 15 and 10 minutes of wrestling this morning.

Joe "Toots" Mondt, Colorado cowboy, won his handicap match in two straight falls from Jack Roller, of Tulsa and hurt Andy MacDougal, of Winnipeg, Can., so badly in the first fall that he had to forfeit the second.

Mondt was to throw both men twice each in 2 hours. He won the handicap in 42 minutes.

Mondt challenged the winner of the Munn-Nelson match.

Defeats Pat McGill.

DEWEY, Ok., July 4.—Wayne "Big" Munn of Nebraska, heavyweight wrestling champion, won his mat match here today with Pat McGill, Omaha heavyweight wrestler, by taking two straight falls. The match was short and the big man got his first fall in minutes. Ten more minutes McGill's shoulders were again on the mat and the match ended.

Both falls were obtained by use of the crotch and half-nelson, Munn's favorite hold. Munn McGill to the floor when he got his fall and the Omaha man was for nearly two minutes.

AYLOR SETS WORLD'S RECORD IN A. A. U. MEET

cholz Equals Mark In 220-Yard Dash; Other Standards Fall

Houser, Hollywood A. C. Star, Establishes New Figures in Winning Two Weight Titles in Senior Events.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4. — One world's record was established, another equaled and seven new National A. A. U. standards were set in the senior competition of the national championship track and field meet here this afternoon. The New York A. C. team, with a total of 51 1-2 points, captured the championship.

Morgan Taylor, the former Grinnell star, now representing Illinois A. C. was the man to set a new world's mark. It came in the 440-yard hurdles, which the former collegian negotiated in 53 4-5 seconds.

The world standard equalled was by Jackson Scholz, the former St. Louis sprinter, running in the colors of the New York A. C. Scholz's time for the distance was 20 4-5 seconds.

Houser Sets Two Marks.

Bud Houser, the Hollywood A. C. star, set two of the new A. A. U. records. He won the shotput with a toss of 51 feet 1 inch, while his winning distance in the discus was 156 feet 6 inches. Houser was the only athlete competing in the games to land two titles.

Other figures established were by Cecil Cook in the 440 yard run in 49 1-5 seconds; George Guthrie, Ohio State star, 120 yard hurdles in 14 3-5 seconds; Homer Martin, I. A. C. the hop, step and jump, 47 feet 11 1-4 inches: DeHart Hubbard, the negro athlete from Michigan U. the broad jump 25 feet 4¾ inches and H. Bonura of Stanislaus College the javelin with 213 feet 10½ inches.

Hussey Wins Century.

Something of an upset came in the 100-yard dash final, when Frank Hussey, the young New York flier, defeated Scholz, Hubbard and other stars in landing first place.

The point winners in the team competition were as follows: New York A. C. 51½; Illinois A. C., 31; Olympic Club, San Francisco, 20; Hollywood A. C., 17; Los Angeles A. C., 14; Boston A. A., 10½; Ohio State, 9; Michigan, 7; Kansas City A. C., 6; St. Stanislaus College, 5; Salem Crescent A. C., New York, 5; Harlem Evening High School, New York, 5; University of Iowa, 5; Finnish-American Club, New York, 4; Newark A. C., 3; K. C. Social Center, New York, 3; nfield Catholic Club, N. J., 3; Meadowbrook Club, Philadelphia, 2; Detroit Y. M. C. A., 2; California Tech., 2; Enterprise Country Club, Philadelphia, 2; Pennsylvania Railroad A. A., 2; Chicago A. A., 1.

Matt McGrath, the gray-haired man, who has been pitching heavy irons around for a generation, proved himself still capable of beating the youngsters. He won both the hammer and the 56-pound weight.

The relay championships and all-around individual title (decathlon) will be decided tomorrow, the final day of the A. A. U. competition.

More than 10,000 attended today's games.

MRS. LANHAM WINS FOUR MATCHES FROM MALE OPPONENTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., July 4.—Mrs. C. A. Lanham of the Curlee team of the St. Louis Municipal Horseshoe League, won four out of five matches from men players from here and Pana this afternoon. Mrs. Lanham also won a special two-game match from the only player to defeat her.

She defeated M. Armstrong, 50 to 38; H. Hankins, 50 to 14; J. Hays, 50 to 13, and H. Vonachen, 50 to 15. She lost to H. V. Vanderpool, champion of Pana, 50 to 28. In her five games, Mrs. Lanham collected a ringer average of .362.

Her five men opponents were able to score but 130 points out of a possible 250.

In a special match following her defeat by Vanderpool, Mrs. Lanham obtained revenge by winning two straight games, 50 to 46 and 50 to 14.

JOHNNY WEISMULLER: Breaking World's 150 Meter Record Here

RICKEY AND HEDGES IN POPLAR BLUFF

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. July 4.—Branch Rickey and Robert L. Hedges accompanied by their wives, arrived here yesterday on vacation.

Rickey, who is vice president of the Cardinals, insisted he was not on a scouting trip, but that he wanted to see some of the Southeast Missouri Leaguers play. They will remain until Sunday.

Weismuller Outdoes Nurmi

Swimmer Defeated Only Once

Chicago Athlete, Who Has a Clothing Shop, Says He Expects to Keep on Breaking Records Because He Has Such a Wonderful Coach in Bachrach.

By Dent McSkimming.

IN all the annals of sport there probably is no figure who stands out among his contemporaries as does Johnny Weissmuller among swimmers. Unless it be the Finn, Paavo Nurmi, there is no athlete who has so completely dominated his field and conquered all opponents and smashed so many world records as this young Chicagoan who, in spite of medals, honors and homage, continues to enter his work with the enthusiasm of an unsophisticated boy.

Weissmuller, who entertained St. Louisans at the opening of the Coliseum pool last week, holds every world record on the books for distances ranging from 50 to 500 yards, either for the regulation 75-foot pool or for the 60-foot pool and either for distance in yards or in meters.

This unique fellow has LOST ONLY ONE RACE in his five years of competition.

He is just one month past 21 years of age and he believes he will continue to smash records for several more years. His coach, William Bachrach of the Illinois Athletic Club, asserts with some degree of certainty that "Johnny will smash a record any time he feels 85 per cent 'right.'".

Most sports followers know what Bachrach means by "by 85 per cent right."

"He doesn't even need tough competition to break a record," Bachrach says. "He needs only to be fit and full of pep and to have a pool of water. I can see it coming, sometimes, when the lad appears more than usually eager to get going."

A Swimmer for Fun.

AS for Johnny himself, swimming is to him not a profession, but just fun.

"I like to go out and beat fellows in a race, especially the big, husky swimmers who think they can beat me," chuckled Weissmuller when he was asked whether he still got real enjoyment out of his competitive swimming.

"I am going to keep on trying to break records until some fellow comes along who can beat me and then I'll take my place among the 'has-beens,'" he added.

"It's my opinion, though, that the sprint records are not going to fall as quickly as the longer distances. I feel sure that I am going to take a little time off the record for the 100 yards out at Seattle in the national championships." (These races will be held July 29-30-31 and Aug. 1.)

Johnny Weissmuller is not given to making speeches about himself. If an interviewer seeks information about the athlete's early training, his habits, aims in life and opinions regarding his chosen avocation, he must draw the facts out by repeated questioning.

"Yes, I suppose I'll continue with my men's clothing business when I finish my swimmnig days," he answered to a query. "I have a one-third interest in a shop in Chicago and the profits from the business are enough to allow me to travel and give exhibitions.

100,000 Miles in 3 Years.

HOW far have we traveled in the last three years, Stubby?" This question was addressed to "Stubby" Kruger, an accomplished swimmer and companion of Weissmuller.

"Well, counting the Olympic games last year and the trip around Europe after the games, and the jaunt out to the Pacific Coast after we returned, and back and forth around the country, I guess we have gone 100,000 miles in the last three years," replied Kruger.

All arrangements for Weismuller's travel and all negotiations covering the payment of expenses are cared for by Coach Bachrach.

"Johnny is doing all this for the love of the sport which is to him a great deal of fun," said Bachrach. "He enters into no negotiations with anyone and he is not permitted to handle any money paid by any club or pool to obtain his services for an exhibition. Weismuller has his expenses paid and no more."

It will perhaps interest those who believe Weissmuller a "born champion" to know that he, himself attributes his success to his coach, Bachrach.

"I was just lucky enough to get into the right club and under the proper coach at the right time," answered the champion when he was asked to analyze his success as a swimmer.

"I swam no more than any other kid when I was under 15. I used to get into the pool at North Avenue Y. M. C. A. in Chicago but it was only when I went down to the Illinois A. C. that I began to develop. A friend named "Hooks" Miller swam with me at the Y pool and he asked me to come down to the I. A. C. pool to meet Coach Bachrach. I went with him and I've been with Bachrach ever since that day."

A Natural Swimmer.

IT was his suppleness, his eagerness to win and his natural aptitude that attracted me to him that first day," said Bachrach, when asked how he happened to select Weissmuller as a coming champion.

"The boy was plastic. He admitted that he knew little or nothing about swimming style. He grasped quickly everything I told him. He was a willing pupil and a willing worker and he had a most astounding eagerness to become a champion."

Under Bachrach's tutelage, Weissmuller swam a quarter mile every day of the week, with a short sprint at the finish.

"Except on Sundays," added Johnny. "Then, instead of the quarter mile at the I. A. C. pool, I would run up to the beach and swim five miles in the lake, just for the fun of. Bill thought I was resting over Sunday."

"That's what developed my shoulders and arms," he added. "When I went to Bachrach I was a long, skinny kid. It was the every day work at a quarter mile that put the muscle on.'

Johnny exhibited a well-muscled arm, and a pair of broad shoulders covered with muscles of the long, supple type.

His hands are not unusually large, although it is genrally supposed that a great swimmer has large hands and feet. He wears a No. 11 glove and his shoe is a No. 9. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 175 pounds, so that his hands and feet are quite in proportion.

"Ollie Horn has a much biger foot than mine," Johnny protested when he was asked the size of his shoe.

"I haven't got big feet and I haven't got a bad heart. That was pure 'bunk' they printed about me having a weak heart a couple of years ago. I had a case of the grippe after swimming five races in one day, just to win five prizes, and my stomach was in had shape and the doctor said my heart wasn't hitting right. Believe me, if my heart wasn't sound I'd know it and wouldn't be able to do the work in the water that I do. So forget about me having a bad heart. I'm going to try to lower that 100-yard record at Seattle."

Weissmuller's World Record.

Time for the 75-foot pool recognized as the international standard. He also holds all records for the same distances for 60-foot pools, which are not used in competition except in the United States.

50 yards	23 4-5 seconds
100 yards	52 1-5 seconds
150 yards	1 m. 26 2-5 seconds
200 yards	2 min. 3 4-5 seconds
200 meters	2 m. 15 3-5 seconds
220 yards	2 m. 13 3-5 seconds
300 yards	3 m. 16 seconds
300 meters	3 m. 25 seconds
400 meters	4 m. 57 seconds
440 yards	4 m. 57 seconds
500 yards	5 m. 45 3-5 seconds

WEISMULLER'S ONLY DEFEAT IN 5 YEARS ATTRIBUTED TO FLUKE

WEISSMULLER'S only defeat in five years of competition was at the hands of the Hawaiian, Warren Kealoha, in the national championships at Honolulu several years ago. Coach Bachrach has always maintained that Kealoha beat the starter's gun. The time, 23 3-5 seconds, for the 50 yards, has never been equaled before or since.

Weissmuller, stung by the reverse, defeated Kealoha in the 100 yards an hour later and swam so fast that at the 50-yard mark he was clocked in 23 1-5 seconds, the fastest time ever made for the distance.

"Johnny was really angry that day because he felt that Kealoha had beaten the gun, and the only thing he could do was run away from him in the 100," explained Coach Bachrach.

La Coste Captures All-England Net Title Winning Over Borotra

Young Frenchman Conquers Former Title Holder in Four Sets—Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Ryan Capture Women's Doubles Honors.

WIMBLEDON, July 4.—Rene La Coste, 20-year-old French player, tonight holds the all-England lawn tennis singles championship. He wrested the title from his countryman, Jean Borotra, in clean-cut fashion today in a match witnessed by the King and 14,000 persons. The score was 6—3, 6—3, 4—6, 8—6.

La Coste played a steady, strategic game, devoid of sensationalism, against an opponent who repeatedly performed the almost impossible in brilliant strokes at the net, but whose lack of precision in long rallies and faulty service finally spelled his own defeat.

Mlle. Langlen, who yesterday won the women's singles in brief style, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, formerly of California, won the women's doubles, defeating Mrs. A. V. Bridge and Mrs. C. G. McIlquaham of England, 6—2, 6—2.

Borotra Double Faults.

Borotra played poorly in the beginning of the match, double faulting 11 times in the first two sets and consistently driving outside or back of the base line. Even his work at the net lacked its usual fire and his volleying was less well placed than heretofore in the tournament.

La Coste, upon the other hand, was cool and playing in his best form. He outgeneraled Borotra, keeping him at the base line with long lobs that frequently dusted the chalk from the line, and then watched his chance for a well-placed kill in the rally.

Borotra was not back in form until the third set, when he took the offensive and won the first three games without a break. The score was 5—2 in Borotra's favor in this set before the younger player could get started. La Coste took two more games, but Borotra took the final deuce game with a beautiful placement from the net.

He continued on the offensive in the final set, running the score to 4-1, but his stroking again became erratic under the steady fire of his opponent, and La Coste with a super-human effort, evened the score at 4-4. They were again evened at 6-6, but La Coste took the next two games winning the set. In the last three games both men rose to their greatest heights. La Coste was more steady and confident, however, and had the winning stroke when a crisis demanded it.

The games score was as follows:

La Coste:
First set.....443 244 044
Second set...446 444 424
Third set....210 742 344 3
Fourth set...432 524 444 .224—74
Borotra:
First set.....225 410 422
Second set...168 101 042
Third set....444 514 522 5.
Fourth set...154 742 202 .442—52

Borotra served seventeen double faults in the four sets; La Coste had one.

Americans Play Tomorrow.

Baron von Kehrling, of Hungary, won the "All-England plate," a consolation prize for by those defeated in the first two rounds of the tournament. He defeated R. George, of France, 6-3; 6-4.

The doubles and mixed doubles title will be decided on Monday when Ray Casey and John Hennessey, the American pair, will meet Borotra and La Coste, and Baron De Morpurgo, of Italy, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, formerly of California, will meet Borotra and Mlle. Lenglen.

BROWNS DIVIDE DOUBLE-HEADER WITH DETROIT

an error. The Brownie team appeared to lack [illegible] and vigor. Detroit gave no evidence of a wild desire to win but Leonard was pitching air tight ball and the Tigers' task was therefore the easier.

Williams ran back 15 feet and leaped into the air for a remarkable catch of Leonard's line drive in the sixth inning. The catch was so unexpected that Bassler had advanced from first to second and was doubled, Williams to McManus to Sisler.

McManus made a wonderful stop of Manush's fast grounder, far to his left, in the first inning.

Cobb was on the side lines. He has an injured leg. The team was going so well that Tyrus appeared in no hurry to return.

There were 5000 in the stands at the morning game.

Harry Hallmann got four hits in the first game but he was out of the batting box every time he hit the ball. He backs up on the catcher even further than Kenny Williams. Chalk marks mean nothing in Harry's young life and Umpire Billy Evans didn't seem to care much, either.

A crowd of about 13,000 viewed the afternoon game.

The final contest of the series will be played today with Bush pitching for the Browns and Whitehill for Detroit.

Mogridge Has Arm In Plaster Cast; Bush Also Ailing

TWO of the king pins of the Brownie pitching staff are ailing.

George Mogridge has his left elbow in a plaster cast. He is suffering from "synovitis," or a collection of fluid about the elbow joint, resulting from inflammation of the membrane. The direct cause was the strain of pitching last Monday when he beat the White Sox.

Joe Bush has a similar ailment in his left ankle. He hurt the ankle at the spring training camp but ordinary treatment has failed to relieve the trouble. Bush may be able to take his regular turn in the box but experiences great pain every time he twists the ankle.

St. Louis Net Stars Win in Intercity Tilt

Defeat Kansas City Team, 6 Matches to 1—Josties Loses to Hubbell.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 4.—Of the seven matches played between Kansas City and St. Louis tennis teams here today, the Mound City crew won all except one. Fred Josties, veteran doubles player, fell a victim before Johnny Hubbell, former Missouri University star, 6—2, 6—4. The remainder resulted in more or less one-sided triumphs for the visitors, although the tennis displayed was interesting.

Despite the fact he lost to Brian C. Norton, 6—2, 6—2, Carl Meyers, Kansas City champion, put enough speed behind his ground strokes to keep the former internationalist at the top of his stride.

This was the feature match and are one which elicited the most applause. Norton's unbelievable gets, variety of strokes and his agility on the court completely bewildered Meyers.

Brown Defeats Bagby.

Wray Brown downed an old rival in Phil Bagby, 8—6, 6—1. East point in this tussle was played to shreds. Chop strokes were so consistently employed by each a top drive was out of place. The first set was bitterly contested and for a time it seemed Bagby might out steady his opponent. His chop, however, lacked the control of Brown's and late in the going he was passed at the net for two fine pointers which determined the game and set.

Charles Barnes added another victory to his team's credit by trouncing Gerald Smith, one of the younger stars, 6—2, 6—3. Smith and Bagby teamed in the doubles against Norton and Brown and for one set kept them fairly busy. The score tottered back and forth until it reached four-all, when Brown and Norton spurted to run out. The second was more easily won, the score being 6—1.

Josties and Barnes fought furiously to triumph over Meyers and Hubbell, 6—3, 9—7, the score going back and forth with the regularity of a pendulum in the second set. The third doubles match was won by Werner and Hodge over George Glaskin and Muir Rogers, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

Tomorrow the remainder of the series will be played on the Rockhill courts and Monday morning will begin the Missouri State play. Most of the St. Louis contingent will remain here.

LATONIA, July 4.—It was an equine "ladies" day at Latonia this afternoon, where packed enclosure witnessed the running of the Independence Handicap and the classic Latonia Oaks. A mare, Princess Doreen, romped to victory in the Independence stake and Rothermel turned up victor in the annual test for 3-year-old fillies.

With Princess Doreen at her best, the Independence at one and three-sixteenths miles was nothing like a contest at any stage. The shrewd rider, Harry Stutts, pulled her into the lead soon after the break, and, keeping her hard at work for a half mile, had her so far in advance of her field at the end of the first three-quarters of a mile that she found it possible to take matters easily for the balance of the journey.

She enjoyed an advantage of three lengths at the finish over Progress.

Time Close to Record.

Considering the condition of the track, which hovered between good and slow, her performance of 1:57 3-5, which missed the track record by one and four-fifths seconds, was marvelous. She shouldered top weight of 115 pounds.

Progress, which showed himself to be a fair sort of horse by finishing third in the Latonia Derby, gave another good exhibition in taking the place. Jockey Lee Canfield had him a good distance rearward for the first half mile, but he moved forward thereafter and, finishing gamely, raced into second place four lengths in front of King Gorin II.

King Nadi, the favorite, enjoyed second place for almost a mile before he wilted away and retired out of the real running.

Hopeless, Nassau, Graeme, Bona Vera, Guest of Honor also participated.

The light-footed and stout-hearted Rothermel carried the white, black and red of J. N. Camden to victory in the Oaks, in which the contestants had to negotiate the trying route of one and one-quarter miles. Auburn, R. S. Clark's daughter of Wrack, finished second, with E. R. Bradley's Buckwheat Cake in third place. The winner ran the route in 2:06, carried 121 pounds and was well ridden by Donald Mergler.

Mergler rode a waiting race on the victor, permitting Buckwheat Cake, Martha Martin and Little Visitor to lead her around to the final five furlongs, during which he increased her speed and rushed into the lead soon after swinging into the home stretch.

Buckwheat Cake went along smoothly in first place, for a mile, but began tiring thereafter and was staggering as she hopped by the winning post in the third position. Deeming, Little Visitor and Martha Martin, the other starters, finishd behind the placed ones in the order of mention.

SINGLE G., 15 YEARS OLD, GAINS VICTORY IN FREE-FOR-ALL PACE

CLEVELAND, O., July 4.—Making two of his famous whirlwind finishes, after having finished fifth in the first heat, where he lost a tire, the 15-year-old Single G, world's greatest pacer, defeated the fastest field of side-wheelers at North Randall in the Free-For-All pace, one of today's features of the Grand Circuit card.

The Shaw, for 2:06 trotters, the other headliner, went to Favonian.

Single G, racing in fourth position, was knocked out of contention in the first heat when Sparkle tried to pass him at the stretch turn. In the collision, a tire was torn off Single G's sulky. The heat went to Margaret Dillon in 2:02 1-5.

He had little trouble going to the front when his driver, Allen, was ready in the next two heats, coming from fourth position on both occasions in the stretch and pacing the last quarter in 29 4-5 seconds. The time for the second heat was 2:00 4-5, the last half being paced in :59 3-5 and the third in 2:05 2-5. Single G has lost only three races at this track since his first start here in 1915.

Robins Twice Defeat Giants

Hubbell Victor in Morning by 10-2 Count—Vance Wins in Afternoon, 5-3.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, July 4.—Brooklyn handed the Giants two setbacks today, 10 to 2 and 5 to 3.

Hubbell held the New York club to seven hits in the morning game and received fine support, four double plays in the first four innings stopping the Giants at critical times.

Vance pitched the afternoon victory, fanning eight batters.

23 HOME RUNS HIT IN MAJOR CONTESTS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4. — Home runs boomed an echo to the explosion of firecrackers in major league baseball parks today as the heavy hitters added 23 more four-base blows to the season's harvest in holiday double bills throughout both circuits.

Fifteen round trip hits were collected in National League tilts, compared with eight in the American League.

Chicago was Fourth of July home run headquarters, with a total of seven accumulated in two games between the Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals. They included the twenty-second of Rogers Hornsby, who leads both leagues.

Navigator, Lingard and Mars strung out. Flight of Time had raced Sarmaticus into submission by the time they straightened out in the stretch and was only breezing, while Coltilleti was whipping Sarmaticus. Although the winner was receiving 10 pounds from both Sarmaticus and Navigator, he gave them more than a 20-pound beating.

The time for the six furlongs was 1:13 and the fractions 0:23 2-5; 0:46 3-5; 1:13. It was the first time that two-years-olds had been asked to go that distance, this year. The race was worth $7500 to the winner.

Gunny Sack Is Winner.

Gunny Sack, from the Flamingo Stable, beat a big field of two-year-olds in the opening event, at five furlongs, coming from behind and racing Lux into submission. Tea Ball and Characosta closed fast to take the shorter end of the purse in the order named.

Although Houyhnhnm won the Steeple Chase by less than a length in a driving finish with Fredden Rock, Silver Threads and Fennessey, who rode him, furnished more of the thrills. Silver Threads ducked sharply at the sixth jump unseating Fennessey and shooting him up on the horse's neck. Almost by a miracle the boy managed to keep his balance and slide back into the saddle.

Joseph Smith, Soldan High Washington University freshman final round of the junior singles tournament at oFrest Park. Smi to win from Sigoloff, who is his The match is scheduled for 3 p. five sets.

The junior doubles event will be decided this morning starting at 10 a. m. Smith and Sigoloff will oppose Clark Smith and Richard Diethich the Ferris Tennis Club entrants in the final round. A close contest is expected when the teams meet. Smith and Sigoloff are the defending champions.

William Bascom will play Alfred Rothchild for the Boys' tennis championship of the St. Louis District. This contest will take place at 3 p. m. The boys' doubles final will follow the singles. Vandover and Rothchild will meet the team of Zeuchel and Abbey for the championship.

Joe Smith Reaches Final.

Joseph Smith advanced to the final of the junior singles by winning from James Murphy yesterday afternoon. The champion took the opening set easily. He faces a difficult task, however, in the second set but finally won it.

Murphy ran up a lead of 5 to 2 in the second set. He played Smith's backhand continually during the first seven games. Smith found himself in the eighth game while Murphy became unsteady. The champion then won three straight games for a deuce set. Each player won a game and then Smith took two straight for the second set and match. The score was 6-2, 8-6.

Another upset, the second of the tournament, took place when Charles Sigoloff defeated Robert Norton, the O'Fallon Park player. This was a semifinal round contest and gave Sigoloff the right to oppose Joe Smith in the junior final this afternoon. Norton's overconfidence and Sigoloff's accuracy were the two factors in the Northsider's defeat.

Bascom Plays Brilliantly.

William Bascom continued his brilliant playing and defeated Harry Zeuschel, 6—2, 6—2, in one of the boys' singles semifinal matches. The severe drives of Bascom proved too much for Zeuschel yesterday.

Alfred Rothchild, who has been one of the most interesting players in the tournament, also reached the final round of the boys' singles yesterday. He defeated Sidney Wyman, 6—2, 6—3, in the semifinals. Rothchild continually played the ball to Wyman's backhand, which was weak.

In one of the early matches of the boys' singles Rothchild defeated H. Steideman, almost twice his size. Rothchild is just 13 years of age and weighs only 86 pounds. He has excellent judgment for his age and should give Bascom plenty of competition in the boys' final this afternoon.

Joseph Smith, Soldan High champion, and Charles Sigoloff, Washington University freshman star, will meet this afternoon in the final round of the junior singles event in the St. Louis district tennis tournament at oFrest Park. Smith, the present titleholder, is favored to win from Sigoloff, who is his doubles partner in the tournament. The match is scheduled for 3 p. m. and will be the best three out of five sets.

The junior doubles event will be decided this morning starting at 10 a. m. Smith and Sigoloff will oppose Clark Smith and Richard Diethich the Ferris Tennis Club entrants in the final round. A close contest is expected when the teams meet. Smith and Sigoloff are the defending champions.

William Bascom will play Alfred Rothchild for the Boys' tennis championship of the St. Louis District. Ths contest will take place at 3 p. m. The boys' doubles final will follow the singles. Vandover and Rothchild will meet the team of Zeuchel and Abbey for the championship.

Joe Smith Reaches Final.

Joseph Smith advanced to the final of the junior singles by winning from James Murphy yesterday afternoon. The champion took the opening set easily. He faces a difficult task, however, in the second set but finally won it.

Murphy ran up a lead of 5 to 2 in the second set. He played Smith's backhand continually during the first seven games. Smith found himself in the eighth game while Murphy became unsteady. The champion then won three straight games for a deuce set. Each player won a game and then Smith took two straight for the second set and match. The score was 6-2, 8-6.

Another upset, the second of the tournament, took place when Charles Sigoloff defeated Robert Norton, the O'Fallon Park player. This was a semifinal round contest and gave Sigoloff the right to oppose Joe Smith in the junior final this afternoon. Norton's overconfidence and Sigoloff's accuracy were the two factors in the Northsider's defeat.

Bascom Plays Brilliantly.

William Bascom continued his brilliant playing and defeated Harry Zeuschel, 6—2, 6—2, in one of the boys' singles semifinal matches. The severe drives of Bascom proved too much for Zeuschel yesterday.

Alfred Rothchild, who has been one of the most interesting players in the tournament, also reached the final round of the boys' singles yesterday. He defeated Sidney Wyman, 6—2, 6—3, in the semifinals. Rothchild continually played the ball to Wyman's backhand, which was weak.

In one of the early matches of the boys' singles Rothchild defeated H. Steideman, almost twice his size. Rothchild is just 13 years of age and weighs only 86 pounds. He has excellent judgment for his age and should give Bascom plenty of competition in the boys' final this afternoon.

Hornsby and Bottomley Estimated at $350,000

HORNSBY and Bottomley, whose combined value today is estimated at $350,000.

The Cardinals' present infield totals up to nearly $400,000.

Scout Charley Barrett and Branch Rickey Give St. Louis Nationals a $400,000 Infield for $3000—The Cardinal "Farm" System.

By Dent McSkimming.

Rogers Hornsby, Jim Bottomley, George Toporcer and Lester Bell, constituting the present infield of the Cardinal Club, have an estimated sale value of close to $400,000. The entire infield cost the Cardinal owners just $3000.

This represents an astounding rise in values and on its face indicates that the business of building major league baseball clubs brings bigger returns than creating cities out of Florida swamps. However, the most interesting feature of the comparison of cost and sale value of Cardinal players is the fact that a system has been evolved whereby a major league club can obtain players of first-class ability for NOTHING.

In the category of present-day stars who cost the Cardinal owners not one cent are Jim Bottomley, now recognized as one of the greatest first basemen in baseball; Ray Blades, a first-class outfielder who is batting .366; Heine Mueller, a star fielder and a great hitter, and Arthur Reinhart, a southpaw pitcher who promises to win wide recognition.

As every baseball fan knows, Rogers Hornsby, at this day the highest-priced player in the national game, was obtained by the Cardinals in 1915 for $500.

Bottomley, Toporcer, Mueller, Blades and Reinhart were literally discovered by Cardinal scouts long before any other major league agents heard of the rough gems. Thus the Cardinal club was able to sign the youngsters before the cost price had been boosted by the bidding of rival owners.

What Some Stars Cost.

Following is a list showing the original purchase cost of some of the stars of the Cardinal club:

Player.	Cost.
Rogers Hornsby	$ 500 00
Jim Bottomley	......
George Toporcer	......
Lester Bell	2500 00
Heine Mueller	......
Ray Blades	......
Arthur Reinhart	......
Flint Rhem	3000 00
Bill Sherdel	1000 00
Allan Sothoron	......
Johnny Stuart	......
Ernie Vick	......
Total	$7000 00

In the course of his years of service as manager and president of the Cardinal club, Branch Rickey attached strings to many of the young men who are now regular players or prospective stars.

The Cardinal scouting personnel consists almost exclusively of Rickey and Charley Barrett, a scout of 18 years' active experience. In many instances, Barrett actually made the original discovery of unusual talent in the youngsters. In others, Rickey or Barrett was tipped off by a friend.

Most of Rickey's "finds" are college lads. Barrett has been kept busy for years pushing aside the tall grass in a diligent hunt for baseball talent. He spends most of his time in leagues of lower classification. The result is that he is forced to search more diligently than scouts of other ball clubs but in the end, when he finds the lad he wants, he signs him at a price which seems ridiculously low—when the fellow develops into a major league star.

"Anybody can follow a Class AA team around the circuit and name the star players," said Barrett recently in discussing the system he employs in culling the thousands of "bushers."

"The trick is to get out in the 'peanut' leagues and recognize the future stars."

Last year Barrett was "in the sticks" from April 15 to Oct. 23 and did not see a single major league game.

"However, when I find a player who looks good to me, I am authorized by my club to make a deal for him immediately. Most major league scouts are forced to go through considerable red tape in wiring details of price to their home office. That gives the minor league club a chance to wire other big league owners about as follows:

"'Cincinnati scout here to buy Joe Wallop. Are you interested?'

"Two or three of the clubs will send agents to the spot and immediately the group will start bidding for the player. Up goes his price.

"Dealing with them 'in the rough' giving the player and the minor league owner a square deal and being able to negotiate a purchase immediately have served to enable me to pick up many wonderful prospects at small cost to my club."

Analyzing a Player.

Barrett was asked how he proceeded in his analysis of a prospective star.

"First, watch his arm. If he can't throw I feel that he can do us no good. If he has a good arm, I watch him further.

"Next, he must have good batting form.

"Third, he must be fast. In the case of a pitcher or catcher, slowness of foot is not a fatal weakness, but in other positions a man must be fast to be successful.

"Fourth, I study his actions when he is called upon to use baseball judgment. He should be 'smart,' although I'll grant that not all major leaguers are quite that.

"Fifth, his habits must be good. They don't want boozers in baseball any more."

But, granting that Barrett and Rickey discover prospective stars, the lads usually are not ready for the major leagues and will not be ready for two or three years, perhaps four.

The Cardinal System.

The question of how to maintain ownership of the player during the period of necessary training in the minor leagues and the question of how to keep him coming up from semiprofessional or college circles to Sportsman's Park is one which caused considerable difficulty until the president of the club, Sam Breadon, and Rickey, perfected their system of "farms."

The St. Louis National League club now has a financial interest in the Quincy Club of the Three-I League (Class B); the Fort Smith Club of the Western Association (Class C); Houston of the Texas League (Class A), and Syracuse of the International League (Class AA).

Although the rules of organized baseball prohibit a major league club from "farming" a player under option more than two years, it is possible under the Cardinal system to sell a player to one of the clubs above mentioned with perfect security. The interested minor league club will refuse to sell its stars to any team without the consent of the Cardinals.

Thus, Pitcher Arthur Reinhart was the property of the Cardinals as long ago as 1920 and he has just "arrived." He cost the club practically nothing, either in purchase or in training.

Cardinals Never Turned Down Player Because of Price

THE fact that many of our greatest players cost us practically nothing is a tribute to the sagacity of Branch Rickey and to the judgment of Charley Barrett," said Owner Sam Breadon of the Cardinals.

"We are not a poverty-stricken ball club. We have never refused to buy a player because the price was too high. Strangely, the players who cost us most did not always develop into great stars. We stand willing to pay good prices, but, naturally, we are eager to get the very best young players at reasonable prices."

Londos May Get Go With Stecher

Victory Over Judson, Friday, Carries With It Promise of Title Bout.

If Promoter Tom Packs carries out his intention to match the winner of Friday's mat bout with Joe Stecher, the champion will be seen here in a finish contest against the great heavyweight, Jim Londos.

Londos defeated Frank Judson, after the former Harvard instructor had won a fall and then suffered an injury, in the second bout.

No date for Stecher's appearance here has been announced, but Londos will probably be his opponent. They have met several times and Londos' best effort resulted in a draw in a limited match.

Judson, Friday night, won the first fall from Londos in 39 minutes 16 seconds, with a toe hold and a half nelson. In the second fall Londos used a series of arm locks to bring Judson down. Judson fell so hard that he wrenched his knee and it surprised the crowd when he returned for the third fall. He was in no condition to stand punishment, however, and succumbed for the deciding fall in 27 seconds, after Londos had brought pressure to bear on the injured leg.

In another bout the giant Hannes Steinke easily disposed of Nick Gotch in 9 minutes.

Oreste Vadalli and Renato Gardini, two Italian wrestlers, mauled each other for 14 minutes when Referee George Tragos disqualified Vadalfi for using illegal tactics.

GOLF by J. Roy Stockton

Western Amateur Next.

ST. LOUISANS have won the State and transmississippi championships and now they have their eyes on the Western amateur crown, which ranks next in importance to the national title in amateur circles. Jimmy Manion and Eddie Held had great chances to win the honor last year at Hinsdale, Chicago, but a rainstorm washed away a big lead and beat Eddie Held, and Manion, after sensational play in the early rounds, fell before Albert Seckel in the semifinal. Harrison Johnston, who won the title, eliminated Held after Eddie had him three or four down with five to play.

Held, present State champion, and Manion, district titleholder, will lead the St. Louis contingent in the Western Amateur this year, which will be played at Lochmoor Club, Detroit, July 13 to 18. Donald Anderson will journey to Detroit early, to practice over the course for a week before the title play starts. Lawson and Frank Watts, Walter Murray, Elliot Whitbread and Bill Medart also will compete. The bigger the field the better. Some of the boys who have slight chance to reach the final may have a good day and put out a big star, thus making the road easier for the other St. Louisans.

Wolff May Compete.

CLARENCE WOLFF, who won the Transmississippi championship at Omaha, will try to take in the Western, but he fears that business will interfere. When he took a week for practice and prepared properly for the transmississippi he showed what he could do, when in form. If he decides to go he will add greatly to the strength of the St. Louis forces.

Junior Tourney in July.

THE annual tournament for junior golfers in the St. Louis district will be held at Bellerive late in July, Secretary Wolff of the District Association announced.

The St. Louis Country Club is preparing for the national women's championship, which will be held in St. Louis Sept. 28 to Oct. 3.

• • •

St. Louis may be the scene of the 1926 transmississippi championship. Clarence Wolff while in Omaha, invited the association to award the tourney to the St. Louis District and indications were that the action would be favorable. Dick Bockenkamp broke into the limelight the last time the tourney was held here, playing Nelson Whitney a 42-hole match in the final, at the St. Louis Country Club. The same year Dick reached the final in the Western Amateur at Sunset, only to fall before the tricks of Harry Legg at the Sunset Hill Country Club.

Develop a Champion.

ST. LOUIS professionals will do well to make medal play tournaments a regular feature of the season. Such competition as was held at Glen Echo Monday will develop the pros here to a point where they may gain national recognition. Earl Howell, assistant pro at Forest Park, led the boys in the first tourney, shooting 147 for the 36 holes.

The road to a big championship is a long and arduous one. Ask Bill Mehlhorn. Bill has been shooting at a national crown for several years. After leaving North Hills he concentrated on his game. He practiced long and patiently. In practice rounds he was cracking course records and in the qualifying field for the National Open he showed the way to the Western contingent. But in the tournament he failed again. The field is fast in the National Open and Sarazens and MacFarlanes are always bobbing up from nowhere to confound those who have been toiling and practicing.

Good Bet Against Field.

JIMMY MANION and Eddie Held always draw top prices in pools on golf tournaments around the district and their performance shows form is right. In 1924 Held won the district and Manion the transmississippi. This year Manion took the district and Held the State. It's a rare year when Jim and Eddie don't pack home some title silverware.

NEW YORK AND DETROIT FIREMEN TO PLAY BALL

NEW YORK, July 4.—The baseball teams of the New York and Detroit Fire Departments will meet at the Yankee Stadium on July 8 for the benefit of the New York Firemen's Honor Emergency Fund, which takes care of the needs of firemen and their families in cases of sickness, accident and injury and sometimes death.

The Detroit smoke eaters will bring with them the Mayor of Detroit, John W. Smith; Corporation Counsel Charles P. O'Neil, Fire Commissioner Charles E. Clippert, Fire Chief Timothy E. Callahan and other officials of the Detroit Firemen's Fund Association.

John Levi on Injured List.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Manager Rankin Johnson of Harrisburg has announced the release of Pitcher Clyde Plank. He is a nephew of Eddie Plank, old time star of the Athletics. The purchase of Tom Carrigan from Waterbury crowded him off the roster. Manager Johnson has been out of the game with an injured finger, suffered during practice. John Levi, the Indian, has also been on the side lines with a strained tendon.

IMPORTANT GAMES SCHEDULED IN MUNY LEAGUE TODAY

Leadership At Stake in Three Races

Y. M. H. A. Club, With Record of 19 Straight Victories, Likely to Increase Its String.

The Mercantile League will take the spotlight in this afternoon's Municipal League games with a contest between the two headliners, the Donnelly Stars and the runner-up Southwest club. The struggle will take place at Fairgrounds No. 2, starting at 3 o'clock.

The Donnellys have been pacing the league since early in the season with Southwest one full game behind, each team keeping its average up by winning consistently. Today will decide whether the Donnelly's forge farther away or Southwest enters into a tie for first place. The Donnellys, on past performance, are favored to win. Their last meeting on May 14 resulted in a 19 to 3 victory for the Donnellys who have an impressive array of hitters.

Meletios Meet Kuhs.

Another interesting game at Fairgrounds will be on Grounds No. 3 where the Meletios and Kuhs meet in an important Independent League fray. The Kuhs have a scant one game lead and the Polish Falcons have been dogging their footsteps for the last few weeks. The Meletios are former league leaders and dangerous and stand a good chance of winning from the Kuhs. The Falcons play the Motorbus drivers and nothing short of a complete upset of form can make them lose. A Falcon victory and a Kuhs defeat will mean a double tie for first place which has changed hands more times in the Independent than in any other municipal league.

Kain and DeSmet, tied for first in the second half of the Knights of Columbus League split season will play at Sherman Park. DeSmet won the pennant for the first half of the season.

Y. M. H. A. Team Unbeaten.

The Empire League in its twelfth week still finds the Y. M. H. A. nine leading with a perfect percentage. Today the leaders take on the Glencos, a second division team and should run their string to 11 victories. Two years ago the "Y" team went through the season with a record of no victories and 19 defeats, some by margins of 25 runs. Good handling of the club by manager Friedman and an influx of talent has raised the Y. M. H. A. to its position today.

Their only rivals this season have been the Typos who finally broke under the strain and dropped to third place last week when the "Y" handed them a double lacing.

A MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

"The American home is the foundation of our national and individual well-being," says President Coolidge. "Its steady improvement is at the same time a test of our civilization and ideals. We need attractive, worthy, permanent homes that lighten the burden of housekeeping. We need homes in which home life can reach its highest level, and in which can be reared children and upright citizens."

Among all the thrift plans, home ownership stands out as one of the most important. It forces one to save a definite amount of money regularly which goes in payment for the home. Renting often means moving from place to place, and there is nothing to show for the money spent for rent. The lack of the responsibilities and obligations which a home entails, tends to cause shiftlessness and carelessness—poverty.

To attain for yourself and your family life's highest level—to insure your own future against the humiliation of dependence—consult the opportunities to buy homes of every type and price listed in the Real Estate Section of today's

LIFE OF JOHN L. SULLIVAN— By R. F. DIBBLE —He Is Employed by Anti-Saloon League

Finds Prince of Wales "Good, All-Around Man, Sport of the Right Sort"

Ignored by Queen Victoria He Meets Many Famous Persons and Has an Audience With the Pope.

Sullivan's experiences as a lecturer, after his life as an actor were told in the preceding chapter by Mr. Dibble.

CHAPTER TEN.

JOHN was out of a job—why, after such a successful beginning, had he failed? He began to reflect even harder, until, in a flash of inspiration, he saw the light. He had failed—nay, more, he had deserved to fail—because he had allowed himself to become a mere entertainer, instead of a reformer. Yes, that must be it. The scales had dropped from his eyes, and he now understood what duty demanded. So, after a brief period of rest, he entered the employ of the Anti-Saloon League, and once more sallied forth to wage platform battles against his own arch-enemy. In the treble character of a reformed pugilist, a reformed drunkard, and a muscular Christian—an irresistible combination—he traversed the nation from shore to shore, recounting the gaudy sins of his youth as a warning to the younger generation.

The burden of his addresses was this: "I was a boozer for twenty-five years, and John Barleycorn it was who knocked me out as a fighter. The only way you can beat old John is to climb out of the ring." His peculiarly personal rendition of "Ten Nights in a Barroom" brought forth sobs of sympathetic anguish from tens of thousands; his somewhat inaccurate array of lurid facts and startling statistics that showed the terrible strength of the hydra-headed monster, alcohol, drew resounding cheers from the same multitudes; but it was his story—his own story—that roused the greatest enthusiasm. That story, variously called "From Fistic Supremacy to Alcoholic Degeneracy," and "How John Lawrence Sullivan Knocked Out John Barleycorn in One Glorious Round," became the chief topic of conversation among temperance circles. However, it was believed that neither of these captions sufficiently emphasized his complete conversion; so another title was invented which neatly summarized both his fall and his rise: "From Glory, to Gutter, to God." Everybody rejoiced at his pat illustrations, his homely felicities, his ingeniously ungrammatical diatribes and even in his frequent lapses from recognized good taste—he was just a great big diamond in the rough, and besides, he was so easy to understand. Ladies Aid societies, local Literary clubs, organized drives for money in various churches, and many less notorious organizations, strained every nerve to persuade John to tell them his harrowing tale. And John himself was rejoiced beyond words: his lost youth had returned; the sweet howls of the mob once more filled his capacious ears; he was still the champion of champions.

Occasionally, he would discuss other matters besides temperance. He would refer with complete disgust to the "tango, rag-chewing pugilists" of the time; and during the early years of the war, he would remark, "Col. Roosevelt is the only man in America the Kaiser is afraid of." He was very sorry, he affirmed, that he was unable to go overseas "to help the Kaiser get whipped good and plenty and for all time." But he often spoke for the cause of Liberty Loan drives, and once, while advising his hearers to save their pennies and buy War Savings Stamps, he explained why it was that he did not try to enlist. "I'm willing to leave that sort of bunk to Jess Willard and William J. Bryan," he expounded. "It don't fool nobody, this telegraphing to the President, and it ain't quite my idea of the right thing, this trying to get into the limelight by kidding the President. I'm too old to fight and I know it. But I can do my bit, and I'll help the President by urging young men to enlist. Now that we're in it, we must hit early and hit hard. Carry the fight to them—that's my idea."

General Miles Refuses To Speak With Sullivan

Only twice did he experience any trouble in his labors for righteousness. One evening, while he sat in a box at a burlesque show—alas! John still retained some of the vices of his early days—one of the comedians tried to poke fun at him because of his Anti-Saloon League activities. Pointing a finger directly at Sullivan, the actor shouted, "There's John L. Sullivan, retired champion and Anti-Saloon whooper-up, who's suffering from the effects of a severe operation which cut out the booze." John rose at once and hurled this conundrum at his tormentor, "What's the difference between a bad actor and a fish?" The comedian, taken aback by Sullivan's unexpected challenge, shook his head in negative dismay. "Well," chuckled John, "there ain't any difference, not if the actor's in vaudeville and the fish is a lobster."

His second encounter was far more serious. Gen. Nelson A. Miles refused to address a temperance convention at Atlantic City when he heard that Sullivan was to be one of the speakers. For an instant the unrepentant John L. of old lived again, and burst out in this inflammatory utterance: "The only difference between him and me—except that he was a ribbon clerk and I was a fighter once—is that I've read the Declaration of Independence, which it seems he ain't. There's four words that stick out all over that famous document: all men are equal." He continued his attack by sending the chairman of the convention a telegram in which he called Miles "an arrogant, prejudiced, self-centered, strutting old peacock." The final lines of the message read thus: "I have never been jealous of any fighter. Why should Miles be jealous of me? Yours for temperance, John L. Sullivan."

Sullivan was never bashful or ill at ease in the presence of royalty. He first met the Prince of Wales, by official request, in London during December, 1887; and the Prince, bored by long years of court rigidities, greeted Sullivan with most enthusiastic informality. "He shook his flapper and wished me well," was John's epitome of the meeting. "He struck me as a man of the right sort, and we [illegible]ed each other for two hours." Other witnesses of this great affair, however, fortunately gave a more [illegible] account of the conversation. "I'm proud to meet you," was John's opening remark. "If you ever come to Boston be sure to look me up; I'll see that you're [illegible]ight." When His Highness expressed his deep gratitude for this hospitable offer, the talk turned naturally to boxing. Sullivan asked the Prince whether he "put up his dukes much nowadays." "No, I don't spar at all now," replied the royal host, "but my second son, George, the middy, is a regular slugger."

After much chitchat of this sort, a ring was improvised and Sullivan boxed a few friendly but vigorous rounds with a British fighter hitherto unknown to fame. "Of course, officially, I disapprove of prize fights entirely," the Prince remarked, as he loudly applauded the two opponets. When the match was over, he asked Sullivan to accept a "little token of his affection." This was a most unusual request, for all ordinary boxers were paid a stipulated price if they pleased the royal spectator; but Sullivan had approached him as an equal—nay, as a benefactor. The Prince therefore made his request very humbly; for the book of court etiquette contained no instructions concerning the proper behavior for such occasions, and he was not at all certain that his guest might not be deeply offended. But John, after making some show of reluctance, and even of vexation, finally decided, as he later explained, to accept the gift "rather than hurt the Prince's feelings." As the scion of royalty departed, Sullivan commented, "Any one can see he's a gentleman," and then added as an afterthought, "I'm a friend of his." He was also reported to have said that the Prince was "the kind of man you'd like to introduce to your family."

When the news leaked out that the future King had established a new precedent in a country that prided itself upon following precedent, it was felt that the Poet Laureate should employ his divine gift in order to sing the praise of this extraordinary meeting. But he was busy with more somber preoccupations, and an unknown bard accordingly rose to the occasion with these lines:

Pershance some day the Prince will
King
Become, when value much Enhanced to that same hand shall cling
Which Sullivan did touch.
The loyal throngs, as on they pass,
Shall step with more elan
To kiss the hand which got the squeeze
Of John L. Sullivan.

Ignored by the Queen.

Queen Victoria, however, did not see fit to honor Sullivan as she had already his illustrious countryman, P. T. Barnum. Perhaps her experience with the showman had taught her caution; at any rate, though John affirmed that he saw her several times, peeking at him from a window at Windsor, and that he waved a friendly hand toward her, she did not return the greeting but merely "made comments which I did not hear." This treatment galled John a little, but he consoled himself by reflecting that Prince Edward "considering all he's had to fight against in the way of family, is a good, allround man." And, after the Prince had become King, Sullivan still regarded him in a most friendly light, even when the Irish question became very acute. Indeed, he actually defended the King against the charge of maltreating the Irish. "My present opinion of the King," he remarked in 1908, "is that, if he had his way, he'd give Ireland freedom, for he's a pretty good chap. But he has to keep his job by doing what he's told. If he tried to get gay with things, he wouldn't last as long in the King business as a ham sandwich at a Jew picnic. No. I don't know his son, George. He ain't done much yet and I don't care about meeting folks that ain't made some show in the world. Let him go get a reputation, and then I might let him chat a chat with me some day, if I ain't too busy. They tell me he's a likely young man, but not so much of a sport as his Pa was."

When Sullivan had returned to America, after hobnobbing with the Prince in 1887, Roscoe Conkling gave him a dinner in honor of his European conquests. The famous Senator, overflowing with good humor, and a classical vocabulary, thus rendered homage to the star of the evening: "Our guest has subdued the haughtiest Kings and champions of two continents; carrying unsullied our beloved banner, the star-spangled, triumphant through every conflict. * * * Unspoiled by his glittering glory, scattering with impartial hand the spoils he has won from the conquered, he returns to us, modestly accepting us plain citizens as equals and friends." Sullivan was struck dumb—overwhelmed by Conkling's oratorical flood. Next day, after he had recovered from his paralyzed astonishment, he said, "Wouldn't that shake you? I'd a missed most of it, if a gent present hadn't wrote it down in shorthand so's I could read it afterward." In John's autobiography there appears this praise of the Senator: "In regard to Mr. Conkling, I am proud to say that he was a warm and constant adherent of mine, attending every exhibition that he could where I appeared, and always dropping in to have a chat when he came near my headquarters in New York."

While an actor, Sullivan, of course, met many stage notables. In 1891 he first met Lillian Russell at a Chicago theater, in which they were both appearing on a variety bill; and, as a gifted reporter wrote, their introduction was "like a meeting of the gods on high Olympus." As they approached each gazed in rapt admiration at the other. For the first time in his life John felt ill at ease; for the first — and last—time in her life, Lillian was confused. "I threw up the sponge," John admitted next day. "I couldn't knock her out in four rounds." Sullivan awkwardly removed his silk hat and stood nervously twirling it, waiting for Lillian to make the first advance; and Lillian, no longer blushing, coolly sidled up and said, "Let me grasp the hand of the great John L., won't you? Please do; that's a good boy"—and John did. Then, slyly reminding him that it was St. Patrick's day, she inquired why he wore no green ribbon. It was too true; he had utterly forgotten it and was filled with dismay—what might not happen to him when he left the theater? After stuttering out his thanks for her kindness in pointing out his awful plight, he managed to say, "Oh, what'll I do? They'd murder me over in the Nineteenth Ward if I showed up without a sprig of green in my buttonhole." Then Lillian, who understood that he was appealing for aid, at once became a good Samaritan. "I'll put this piece of green in your lapel," she reassured him. "Stand straight; I won't hurt you; so; don't get frightened; you're too big to cry. There we are! Now, Mr. John L., you wear my colors when you go in and fight." And Sullivan himself is authority for the fact that he did wear her colors for some time after meeting her.

His Audience With the Pope One of the Events of His Life

On one of his European trips, he had been granted an audience with Pope Leo. During the rest of his life, John never tired of telling his friends, over and over again, what had happened at this marvelous encounter. "The dear old man! He didn't do any preaching at me because of my business. He seemed very glad to see me; he's a kindly soul who understands that all of us can't be perfect like him."

In 1907, Sullivan called on Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore. "I'm glad to meet you," said the Cardinal. "You're a gentleman I've heard a lot about." Then, moved beyond his wont, he exclaimed in a tone of admiring awe, "What broad shoulders you have!" John then asked his reverence what he thought about the art of prize fighting, and was highly pleased to receive the welcome information that "the art of self-defense is a very manly and healthful exercise." On parting, both men exchanged mutual compliments. "Well, goodby, and God bless you," smiled the Cardinal. "Same to you," replied John.

But, above all other friendships, Sullivan preferred his presidential acquaintances. By 1912, he was able to say, with pardonable egotism, "I've shook hands with every President since Garfield was on the job. No President I ever saw had anything on me, and I didn't let any of 'em throw any harpoons into me. We met as American citizens, and they couldn't show me that they ever done anything more for the country than I had done."

More than any of the others, he admired his beau ideal, Roosevelt. "He's the greatest President that ever flopped himself into the White House chair," John frequently asseverated. He was ready at any time to defend the Rough Rider against the assault of his enemies. Once, while riding on a train, Sullivan happened to hear a man making some extremely uncomplimentary remarks about his hero. He quickly went up to the fellow and said, in his most menacing tone, "You look like a respectable geeser, but I'll bet you're a crook of some kind!" Then, as John afterward narrated, the low tale-bearer 'passed some high-sign oratory that didn't please me a little bit, and I got at him with some man's language till he ducked off the train."

Never Forgave Taft.

Sullivan never forgave Taft for his break with Roosevelt. Toward the end of Taft's administration, John was immensely pleased because the President was so evidently going to his political ruin. "Taft was going on good as long as he obeyed the rules handed him by the champion who held the presidential belt before him," chuckled John, "but when he started out on his own hook he begun to get in wrong. It looks as if he was running into a knockout." At this time Sullivan's personal resemblance to Taft impressed some of his friends as so striking that they often complimented him; but he was utterly disgusted at the comparison. When an acquaintance slapped him on the back and vociferated, "John, how much you look like Taft!" he would growl in reply, "Look like Taft! Hell, you mean Taft looks like me!"

WILLIE HOPPE TO PLAY EXHIBITIONS ALL SUMMER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 4.—In order to keep in condition during the summer months, Willie Hoppe has announced that he will meet all comers at three-cushion billiards at the Hoppe Academy. His first opponent will be Harry Schuler, and for the next 30 days the former world's 18.2 balkline champion will meet the best amateurs and semi-professionals. Hoppe has been active all season, his most recent conquest at three cushions being at the exuense of Erich Hagenlacher, the German balkline champion.

Hoppe is anxious to annex the world's three-cushion championship. As Bob Cannefax, the present title holder, has been barred by the league for one year, and in the event league play is not resumed next season, special title matches doubtless will be played, and in case that system prevails, Hoppe is certain to challenge.

One day I went down to see 'em tear down old Madison Square Garden, the most famous building in New York. It had stood up under every kind of performance in the world. Prize Fights, Dog Shows, Rodeos, Murders, and French Costume Balls, but when that Democratic Convention finally struck it, I said to myself then, "This thing can't stand much longer." You know there is nothing in the World as hard on a building as oratory. In fact there is nothing as hard on a human to listen to as oratory, and especially Political Oratory. You take good oratory. I have seen a well built building stand up under it, but not when it is battered at continually for six months, day and night. If I owned a building I would insure it against any kind of a Political Convention, because they are not Conventions, they are Civil Wars.

Well, Sir, when they took up the floors of that famous old Building they found tons of "BULL" DURHAM TOBACCO that had been wasted there by nervous hands during the balloting. Chicago's First Bouts Under New Law Next Year

Referendum Expected to Be Held in April, 1926—Ten Rounds and Decision.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Illinois has joined with 22 other states in legalizing professional boxing, but the cauliflower ear industry will not be permitted to thrive in Chicago until after next April, if then, because of a referendum clause in the bill which provides that a city to come under the provisions of the boxing law must vote for it.

The measure, permitting 10 rounds to a decision, was allowed to become a law today by Gov. Len Small, with his signature. The measure, passed both by the Senate and the House, provides that any city desiring boxing must hold an election at which a majority must vote in the affirmative. If a majority vote is against it, the State Athletic Commission cannot issue licenses for boxing matches in that city.

Referendum Necessary.

Chicago boxing enthusiasts plan to have a referendum as soon as possible, but it is believed, the earliest available date for such an election will be primary day next April. The proposition could be voted upon, however, before that time, if the City Council called a special election.

Followers of the sport figure that the boxing referendum will carry in Chicago by a vote of 10 to 1. The game always has thrived here and today Chicagoans desiring to see their favorites in action are obliged to travel from 40 to 100 miles, either to Aurora, East Chicago or Milwaukee, for an evening's entertainment of glove swinging. Except for a brief spell two years ago, when the sport was conducted as a result of injunctions restraining police interference, boxing has been dormant for 25 years, since the memorable fake between Joe Gans and Terry McGovern.

Carter Harrison, at that time Mayor, clamped down the lid after the expose.

Golfers Play Over First Fee Course in St. Louis County

Links at Creve Coeur Club Not Yet in Pink of Condition and Winter Rules Prevail on Fairways — Terrain Compares Favorably With Muny Links.

A fair-size crowd of golfers drove out to the Creve Coeur Golf Club on Olive Street Road yesterday and went around the first fee golf course in the vicinity of St. Louis. It was opening day on the County links and the promoters of the project feel assured that their venture will be successful. About 75 players had started up to noon and more came in the afternoon.

"We will get the overflow from the municipal courses for some time to come, but after that we expect the city courses to take our overflow," said Harry B. Smead of Chicago, who with John Hartnett, editor of the St. Louis County Watchman-Advocate, is undertaking the experiment. "It will take quite a while for our fairways to run into first-class shape, but the condition of the greens is very encouraging. We use the same type of grass on the Big Oaks course in Chicago and an average of 450 players go over them each day without deterioration."

Course on Rolling Terrain.

The new links is located on typical St. Louis County terrain. It is a rolling type of land with easily sloping valleys that merge into one another and is about five miles east of the Missouri River. The playing is never monotonous and some parts of the grounds have real natural beauty.

This is especially true of the greens on the seventh and fourteenth holes which, in addition to having the best putting on the links, are surrounded by huge oaks and elms which keep the greens in perpetual shade. A wide hazard lies between the greens and the approaching golfer and a timid shot is well penalized. Both greens recall the beautiful ninth green on the municipal 18-hole links which rivals any in the district.

Two dog-leg holes, source of terror to the dub with an incurable slice, are met with on the second nine, but they are not if the terrifying type. They are the fifteenth and sixteenth. Another bad one for the erratic shooter is the fifth, whose narrow fairway is flanked on both sides by double rows of fruit trees and plenty of rough. There is only one hole which is totally level, the rest being hilly. The flat one is the seventeenth.

Winter Rules Prevail.

Winter rules are in order throughout as the fairways are sparse and inclined to be a bit stubbly. This defect will take many months to eliminate. The sand traps all around the course are still in the process of construction and one may be lifted out of them.

Altogether the course is about as hard to play as the Municipal course, though the occasional golfer is never terrorized by steep declivities and broad lakes. There is no water hole but many hazards of the ditch type which are spanned by pleasing rustic bridges.

Club accommodations will be completed by Wednesday. They will include 140 large lockers which may be rented for 25 cents a day, or a portion of one for 10 cents. The fee is $1 on week days and $2 on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. This entitles the golfer to play as many rounds as he likes and first-class dining arrangements are provided in the clubhouse, a large frame structure which used to be a residence. A porch, 20 feet wide, is to be built around the house and screened in for the benefit of the diners.

What It Costs.

One may play golf at the Creve Coeur club in two ways. He may pay his daily fee and rent checking space for his luggage by the day. Thus a day of golf, outside of balls and meals, would cost him his fee, plus 10 cents checking space. Or a locker may be rented for $5 a year. Towels, soap and shower privileges go along with the locker rental, whether by day or year.

If the player wishes to become a member, he may pay $100 a year which will entitle him to play at any time and enjoy club conveniences without charge. Membership carries a vote in the club's business and conduct of tournaments and entitles the member to enter outside tournaments under the Creve Coeur banner.

A bus line runs past the links, starting from Delmar Garden. The links is located about six miles from the city limits.

28 Teams Enter Shuttle Relay

Event Will Be One of Features of Tuberculosis Day Program.

Officials of the girls' shuttle relay race, one of the features of Tunberculosis Day at Sportsman's Park, July 15, have been announced as follows: starter, Carl Kamp; judges and timers, Joe Hennessey, Vernon Bradburn, George Thompson, R. Von Lehfton and Charles Metz. The title of honorary starter has been conferred upon Fred W. Pape, and honorary referee upon R. G. Russell, superintendent of county schools. William Yorger, superintendent of recreation of the municipal playgrounds, is in charge of the race.

Gold eversharp pencils will be awarded to the members of the winning team; sterling silver pencils to the girls winning second place, and silver plated pencils to those deserving of third place.

The race is scheduled to take place just before the boys' junior marathon:

At least thirty-eight teams are expected to enter. The twenty-eight municipal playgrounds have already entered teams.

Rules of the contest are that the competing teams shall have six members each, all of whom must be under 16 years of age and less than 62 inches in height. Every team must have a leader. Each organization will be allowed to enter only one team and to carry two substitutes. Each girl will run a distance of 50 yards.

BRITISH WOMEN'S TENNIS TEAM NAMED

LONDON, July 4.—Several weeks ago it was announced that Mrs. Lambert Chambers and Miss McKane had been selected as the first two plapers of Great Britain's women's team to go to America to play against the United States for the Wightman Cup, and that Mrs. Chambers had been chosen as captain.

It is now stated that Miss Joan Fry has been informed of her selection as the second singles player and the present intention is to include Miss Evelyn Colyer as the fourth player.

Originally it was intended to send a team of only four, but some players now urge that a team of not less than six playing members be sent.

The selectors have since decided to send five.

STUDEBAKER
Special Six Coach
$537 down and 16 monthly payments of $89 each, which includes fire and theft insurance for 16 months.

Why Call It a Coach?

THEY couldn't understand! "Why call it a coach—why confuse it with cheap closed cars?" asked the dealers at a recent Studebaker meeting. "Surely it would be better to name it the Special Six Coupe."

To be sure, the Special Six Coach is upholstered in fine quality of material—with high-grade carpeting—and heavy decorative door pulls to assist passengers in alighting.

To be sure, it is lacquer finished in two styles—beautiful Studebaker blue or a rich duotone finish of Wyandotte green-gray above and Ponca green-gray below.

And, furthermore, to get a coach as large and roomy you must pay more than $1,000 above the price of this car.

But the fact remains—that it carries the lowest price at which a fine closed car has ever been sold on the world-famous Special Six chassis.

It is a coach—in price alone. But in quality—a fine type of five-passenger coupe.

From the very beginning, the coach has been an effort towards economy on the part of automobile manufacturers. But, unlike other manufacturers, Studebaker has been able to build a coach without sacrifice in essential quality — and offer it to you at an accepted coach price.

The reason for sedan quality at coach price

Studebaker builds all of its own closed bodies—builds finer coaches than have been built before—and builds them at a lower cost—because there is no outside body-maker's profit to be included in the purchase price to you.

This Special Six Coach is built complete—both body and chassis—in Studebaker plants. It is a "one-profit" automobile.

In buying a closed car, do not underestimate the importance of engine and chassis. With extra weight to carry, these units become increasingly vital.

Plus—the Special Six Chassis

This fine coach body is especially designed for and mounted on the Special Six chassis which has contributed to the splendid reputation of Studebaker cars for dependability, endurance and reserve mileage.

Definite records show that many Studebakers have delivered from 125,000 to 200,000 miles of service. Up in the rugged country around Three Rivers, Quebec, there are eight Studebaker cars that have each traveled 100,000 miles or more.

In Stockton, Calif., one Studebaker car has piled up 138,000 miles over steep mountain grades and rough country roads with negligible upkeep—not a single major part has been purchased or repaired by reason of wear or accident.

So do not buy this Special Six Coach with the expectation that you'll have to trade it in at the end of a year or so. Instead, consider this your permanent investment in transportation. At the mileage when other cars are breaking up, this Studebaker Special Six Coach will just be breaking in.

Buy now—no need to delay

You may buy this Studebaker Special Six Coach today—or on any day of the year—with the confident assurance that no act of ours will stigmatize it as a "last year's model."

For Studebaker has discontinued the custom of presenting a new line of cars each year. Instead Studebaker will keep up-to-date all of the time—introducing new improvements and refinements as their merit is proved through practical use.

Japan's Foreign Minister Has Faith in Continued Friendship With America

Tells of His Own Country's Error in Making Outcasts of Aliens — Amusing Anecdotes of Life in Washington.

By Edward Price Bell.

(Copyright, 1925.)

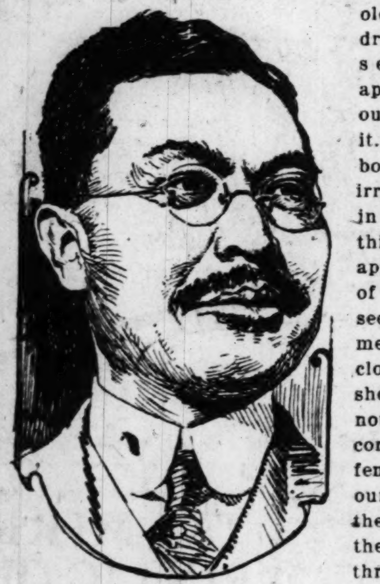
TOKIO, Japan, June 5.

BARON SHIDEHARA, Foreign Minister of Japan, received me with friendly dignity in his beautiful private room at the Foreign Office in Tokio. He advanced from his desk to meet me and shook hands firmly.

"I am glad to meet you," said he smiling like an old friend as he inclined both well-set head and sturdy body—a flash at one and the same instant of culture and of force.



BARON SHIDEHARA.

"This racial question between America and Japan is always changing," said the statesman, speaking in pure English, after we had sat down. "It is in a position now markedly different from that which it occupied when I first gave serious thought to it. Do you chance to remember what were called the 'Morris - Shidehara conversations' in Washington?"

"Very well," said I.

"Those conversations were carried on with earnestness. Both Mr. Morris and myself desired nothing else so much as a solution of the Americano-Japanese racial problem satisfactory to both parties. Our discussions were without any feeling except the feeling of mutual respect and friendship. It was said that the problem turned upon the assimilability or unassimilability of the Japanese as members of the American social community.

Testing Japanese Assimilability

"Touching this question Mr. Morris and I agreed that there had not been time enough to determine whether the Japanese were or were not assimilable in America, as the British and the Scandinavians, for instance, have proved to be in that country. It had been scarcely more than a quarter of a century — the 'Morris-Shidehara conversations' took place five or six years ago—since the Japanese entered America in appreciable numbers. There had not been time to tell whether they would or would not turn out good Americans.

"'How,' we asked ourselves, 'can a reliable test be made?' We agreed that a practicable plan would be virtually to stop further Japanese immigration in America until the Japanese already there could be given a chance to demonstrate their quality in respect of assimilation into the general American social body. At this point I emphasized what I deemed a substantial condition, namely, that while the test was proceeding every encouragement be given the Japanese in America to adopt the American standpoint and way of life if they could.

The Alien Element in Japan.

"I pointed out to my American colleague a grave mistake made by Japan with reference to an alien element in our population. This element presents a curious analogy in connection with the problem of the Japanese immigrants in America. I mean a special class of people who are social outcasts. There are said to be 1,200,000 scattered over Japan. Their origin is uncertain and mixed. Some are descended from Chinese and Korean immigrants and some from aborigines. Most of them were originally and for generations engaged in trading and butchers' work, considered by Buddhists to be unclean.

"I told Mr. Morris about these people, how we ostracized them in old days, how we drove them into settlements apart. I had seen our people doing it. I myself, as a boy, had had my irresponsible part in it. Persons of this class used to appear in front of our house and seek work as menders of our clogs or wooden shoes. They were not permitted to come inside our fence. We threw our clogs out to them, they did their work, threw the clogs back, and we tossed the pay into their hands. We called them unassimilable, while ourselves denying them all opportunity of assimilation.

The Error of Making Outcasts.

"We made a mistake. Our course was politically, socially and economically wrong as well as un-Christian and inhuman. These persons are now treated in every way as our equals. But the antagonism fostered by centuries cannot be swept away in a day. They are still with us, still living in their separate communities, still in their hearts hostile to us, still a problem to vex social relations, perplex statesmanship and grieve humanitarianism. We should have reached out to welcome them and not to cast them away. If we had done that, they long ago would have merged in our community beyond all trace, and today there would be no irritating problem in Japan such as this particular class presents."

Baron Shidehara was thinking and speaking carefully, manifestly searching his mind for his real meaning and for exact words to express it, imparting to his remarks precision and solidity. From time to time he looked into my eyes as if to say, 'Are you interested—do you understand me?' His face now and again wore an unrelenting expression, but as the talk proceeded I found him capable of smiling delightedly and of laughing in that fashion which springs only from the liveliest sense of humor. I found also he could relax into simple, easy narrative, as will appear later in his story of the colloquies between himself and the late Lord Bryce. Thoroughly Japanese is Baron Shidehara in physiognomy, temperament, manner and patriotism, tingling with the spirit of today, but ruled by deliberation and sagacity.

American Attitude Toward Japanese.

"My point of view as expressed to Mr. Morris," continued Baron Shidehara, "was that America, in dealing with her Japanese population, well might consider our mistake respecting a certain part of our population. It seemed to me, and I so stated, that an attitude of sympathy, of welcome, of invitation to assimilation, might yield a result diametrically different from that of an attitude of coldness or persecution or ostra-

NO CASE—NO CONVICTION, IS JUDGE GAYER'S RULE

Judge Holds Rash Use of Power and Violence by Police Is More Dangerous Violation of Law Than Actions of Many Criminals.

Futility of Trying to Make "Record of Arrests" Takes Place of Criminal Record Shown—Police Make Arrests at Will.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.

"JUDGE GAYER Frees 14 On Appeal" . . . "Many Traffic Fines Reduced by Gayer" . . . "Judge Gayer Assails Dragnet System; Demands Evidence." . . .

These and similar headlines have become so familiar of late that it becomes a matter of prime interest and importance to know more about Judge Paul A. Gayer of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction, and more about the reasons which have impelled him, in the last six weeks, to reduce and set aside numerous sentences imposed by Police Courts in cases which have come up to him on appeal. Who is Judge Gayer, and why does he do it?

To appreciate the answers to these questions, we must first recall that when Victor Miller was running for Mayor on a strict law enforcement platform, he promised, if elected, that one of his first official acts would be the appointment of Police Judges who would deal severely with traffic violators and with persons of criminal habits. He did appoint Harry A. Rosecan and Clyde C. Beck.

At about the same time, Gov. Baker named his new St. Louis Police Board, which announced its intention of "cleaning up" St. Louis. Accordingly, an extraordinary number of arrests followed, particularly under the vagrancy and traffic ordinances. The vagrancy charges were aimed at persons of supposedly criminal habits, and at those suspected of being gamblers; and the numerous traffic arrests were intended to reduce the number of motor accidents. Police Judges Rosecan and Beck imposed fines of unprecedented severity. Some of the evidence was obviously pretty thin, and the matter reached a climax when Judge Rosecan, in fining several men suspected of bookmaking, under the vagrancy ordinance, declared from the bench that in the absence of evidence, he had the right to "infer" that they were guilty.

This sanguinary program was proceeding at a brisk pace, when all at once and without warning, it struck a snag, and against that snag, helpless, futile and sweating, it has hung ever since. The snag was Judge Gayer.

He was born in St. Louis 57 years ago, educated at a teachers' college, and taught school two years. Then, for more than 20 years, he ran a photograph studio, but that did not satisfy him, so, while already in middle life, he studied law, and was admitted to the bar. He became Assistant City Counselor, and in that office for almost five years occupied the position of prosecutor of Police Court No. 1, presided over successively by Judges Ittner and Homer. This service, naturally, gave him a wide and thorough knowledge of Police Court practice, and of the methods employed by police officers in making cases, and it also gave him a wide personal acquaintance among the policemen themselves, handling, as he did, from 40 to 100 cases daily, in virtually all of which policemen were the prosecuting witnesses. Gayer knows the cops.

He was elected last year as Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction No. 2, and took office in January.

Judge Gayer Goes Into Action

Without any intimation of what would happen, but hot and resentful over what they considered the undue severity of Judges Rosecan and Beck, many persons fined in Police Court appealed their cases. Whereupon Judge Gayer, who is a small, wiry, alert, hard-headed man, with an outthrust chin and an air of wanting to be shown, began throwing cases out of his court, head over heels, and drastically reducing the amount of the fines in others.

Incidentally, he took occasion to express, in emphatic language, his opinion of the methods which the police were employing to "clean up" St. Louis, and administered a severe implied rebuke to the Police Court Judges for imposing fines on what he regarded as totally insufficient evidence, and out of all proportion to the seriousness of the charges. With one wary eye on the Mayor's office, whence their appointments had come, the Police Court Judges declared they would continue in their past course. As fast as the cases came up to Judge Gayer's court on appeal, he promptly dismissed a large part of them, and reduced the penalties in many others. Lately, Judges Rosecan and Beck, apparently sensing the futility of their position, have begun to scrutinize cases more closely.

When visited in his chambers by the writer the other day, Judge Gayer was perfectly willing to explain the reasons for his policy, and he was quite firm in his determination that it would remain unchanged. He seemed entirely unworried by the criticism which he has received from some quarters.

JUDGE GAYER.

"I am in full sympathy with the public demand for law enforcement," he said. "I am in full accord with the Safety Council's campaign to reduce traffic accidents. I am for the police in their efforts to clean up St. Louis and abate crime, and I am determined to give them every assistance that is proper and possible. But there is just one thing they will have to learn sometime, and that is, they can't convict people in my court unless they have the evidence.

"Of course we want law enforcement. But it isn't law enforcement to arrest everybody you see on the street. It isn't law enforcement to fine every defendant whom the police bring into court. That isn't good police work, and it isn't sound administration of justice. Naturally, if the police know they can rely on the Judge to convict every person they bring in, they won't trouble much to gather the evidence. But a Judge who indulges them in any such practice not only abdicates his office, but he spoils the police force into the bargain. Let the police make their cases. Then the guilty will be punished, and no innocent persons will suffer.

Important to Guard Innocence

"It is just as important to law enforcement that the innocent go free, as it is that the guilty be punished. In fact, the whole history and philosophy of administered justice is that it is better for 10 guilty to escape than for one innocent to suffer.

"Of course, this practice works certain hardships on the arresting and prosecuting officers. It places on them the burden of producing the proof. But it is a hardship and a burden which every civilized people in the world has placed there, and it is absolutely right that it should be there. No matter how strong the policeman's belief that a man is guilty, it is up to the policeman to prove his guilt, and the Judge who accepts the policeman's opinion as a substitute for evidence, betrays his oath, does the police a disservice, and makes himself a menace to the entire community of law-abiding people.

"The fact is," he threw out resolutely, "if you want my opinion, the most dangerous form of lawlessness from which St. Louis has suffered recently is the lawlessness of public officials."

"What have you in mind?" he was asked.

"I have in mind the numerous and wholesale arrests of citizens without any cause or any evidence of wrongdoing, the wanton beating of prisoners by police officers, and the imposition of heavy fines upon defendants without any evidence that they have violated the law," was the quick reply. "If you want examples, I have plenty of them.

"Several days ago I had a case in which two men, riding along the street in an automobile, were pursued by motorcycle policemen, who, without any warning, fired a shot through the car on the suspicion that the men were wanted on some criminal charge. They might have killed you or me—or Mayor Miller himself. Thinking they were attacked by robbers, the men put on speed until they came to a well-lighted and traveled street, and stopped.

"As they got out, the officers came up, and one of the men, one of the officers said, kicked him in the stomach. Well, in view of the circumstances, it is hardly surprising. But the man got a severe beating, and was locked up. It is perfectly plain that the lawlessness in that case was that of the police officers. If anybody should have been arrested, they should have been.

"In another case, a man was standing in a park, idly pitching his pocket knife at a tree, trying to make it stick. Two officers in plain clothes came up and wrested the knife away from him. He grabbed at one of them, and tore his coat. The man got a terrible beating, one of his ribs being broken, and was charged with a peace disturbance. The real peace disturbers were the police. The man was disturbing nobody.

Stories of Police Activities

"It has only been a few days since I heard the appeal of a man who had been fined $600 in Police Court, on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated. The evidence consisted solely of the testimony of a police officer that the man, in driving between a parked car and a safety zone sign, had knocked over the sign with his rear fender, and that the officer smelled liquor on his breath. City hospital physicians pronounced him entirely sober. It was a trivial accident, such as might happen to any driver. The officer himself testified that the man was not going faster than five or six miles an hour. And a $600 fine for that! Think of it!

"Unwarranted arrests can result in even greater injustices. I remember a flagrant case that occurred when I was prosecutor in Police Court No. 1. An officer brought in a man and a girl charged with committing an indecent act. Fortunately I questioned the officer and the witnesses before it got into court. I found that the man was a musician, who performed at night, and was in the custom of taking his girl for a ride after he got off. The sole evidence was that they were sitting in the park in his car, and that he put his arm around her and kissed her. He had a perfect right to. In fact, they were married a month later.

"But think of the consequences if that case had been heard. No matter what the verdict, the girl's reputation would have been stained, and both of those respectable young people might have lived under a cloud all their lives. Merely because the officer suspected that something wrong had happened, or might happen. I dismissed it in short order. A man who never kissed his girl in the park oughtn't to be on the police force."

"Now all these," Judge Gayer continued, "are instances of official lawlessness. It is just as much against the law for a policeman to assault an unresisting man as it is for a thug to assault him. It is no more lawless to steal than it is to enter a man's house without a search warrant, and give him a ride in the hoodlum wagon on the suspicion that he might have done something wrong. And there is no form of lawlessness which is more dangerous than to convict and sentence an innocent man on the general theory that severity is necessary to 'clean up' a city.

"How can you expect private citizens to respect and obey the law when they see it openly violated by the very officials who are paid and sworn to enforce it? That seems so plain that one wonders why it is necessary to state it, but ever so often it becomes necessary to repeat it. The zeal of officials to make a 'law enforcement' record, the zeal of police officers to 'clean up' a city, and the pressure of angry public sentiment to 'treat 'em rough,' make it necessary. Those things are understandable, and perhaps they won't do any great amount of harm so long as the courts stand firm and insist that every case be tried on its merits. But heaven help the innocent when the courts succumb and join in the hue and cry.

Weakness of "Arrests" Record

"I'm not resting on any bed of roses around here," Judge Gayer observed wryly. "Some of the people, and occasionally a part of the press—actuated, I am sure, by the highest motives—have tried to build a fire under me. I have been represented as throwing out every case that came into my court, regardless of the guilt of the defendants. I have invited some of these people to come here and listen to the evidence in these cases.

"It's the easiest thing in the world to get a wrong impression. Not long ago I dismissed a defendant. The prosecuting policemen insisted that he had a record of being arrested

Horthy, Regent of Hungary, A Figurehead, Tired of Job; Boston Lawyer at the Helm

Difficult Problem of Magyars in Fighting Feudalism and Communism, and Restoration of Nation Without Financial Resources.

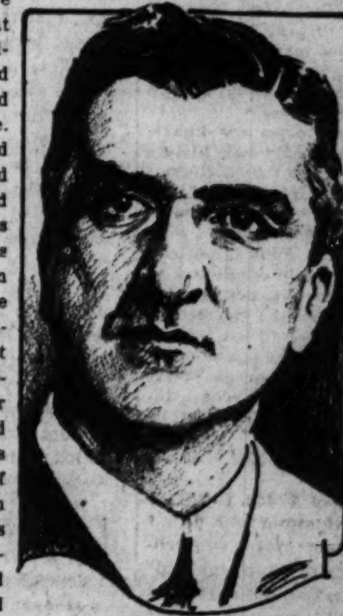
By Samuel Spewack

Staff Correspondent of the New York World and St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, June 15.

His serene highness, Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, lives in a palace set in green hills upon the Danube embankment. It is a palace for a King. In its tower rests the Sacred Crown, traditionally the ruler of Hungary. For Kings are mere human beings intrusted with power transmitted them by the Crown. So it has always been decreed in Hungary. What is known as the Mystery of the Crown slides into the body of the ruler, and he acts. His serene highness is at the moment the receiving station for the Crown.

I came to the palace in a two-horse carriage beloved of the sporting Magyars, and we rattled through various vaulted courtyards until we stopped short at the sight of a soldier who asked if I was possessed of an audience. So he permitted us to pass, and we jogged through various other courtyards until a guard in green and blue saluted majestically and swept me into the custody of an officer with a gold sword dangerous to the morals of a collector. Upon the marble steps were other soldiers who saluted and clicked and moved two steps forward, and in the corridors were still more soldiers.



ADMIRAL HORTHY.

Finally we stopped in front of a rainbow-colored guard with bared bayonet who might have been a super in a Bowery opera or a footman in our best homes. He bestowed upon us the final salute. I entered an ante-room and shook hands with the regent's aid-de-camp. He was dressed in khaki. Without further preliminaries I was ushered into the audience chamber, office or private sitting room of the dreaded Admiral Horthy, his serene highness, the regent.

His serene highness bears a breast-plate of decorations he had won in the discarded navy. Otherwise he is just a handsome, slender Hungarian with a boyish smile, and he looks much less formidable than some American Second Lieutenants I have seen. He can look hard, when the lines of his mouth tighten, but he rarely does. When I had explained my presence he gave me a sheet of paper upon which he had written answers to various questions I had proposed to his subordinates as the framework of the interview. The answers are what are known diplomatically as official answers. So I put them in my pocket and we talked.

War of Evil and Good.

Now the key to his serene highness is his Puritanism. He believes in good and evil. He can differentiate between them. Others may be troubled by overtones, but not Admiral Horthy.

"The situation in Europe," he said, "is this: In Russia we have evil. Here we have good. It is a fight between good and evil. The good will win out."

What could be simpler?

I asked him with what gauge did he measure these rival forces, but he looked blank. So we continued on democracy.

"My brand of democracy is this: All my life when a poor man asked me for help I gave. I gave everything I had. I would share my last piece of bread with a beggar. That is democracy."

I pointed out that conservatives were always charitable to the individual, but not to the mass. Your average communist ignores a beggar, because he sees the beggar as the product of economic causes. Your average conservative, who believes all is well with the world, finds the beggar an isolated and distressful exception to the rule.

"When the worker is right," he said, "I am on his side. When he strikes for justifiable reasons I help him. When he strikes for political reasons I fight him."

We talked of leadership.

"Say what you will of democracy, a country cannot be ruled by men of bad moral character. The scum of the earth shall not inherit the earth. You cannot take a criminal and make him a president. That is evil, and the world fights it. The good men succeed. Otherwise a country is ruined. We had communism here. It could not continue."

He raised his hand dramatically.

"Above me is a vault where we keep the Sacred Crown. Its power is known as the Mystery of the Sacred Crown. In Hungary the King has never been ruler. It has been the Crown. I am only a servant of the Crown. The Crown cannot write. So my hand writes."

Dislikes His Job.

His mood changed to petulance and he lifted a stack of documents only to let them drop contemptuously.

"They talk of me as an ambitious man. I will bless the day when I leave this room. I did not seek this post. I do not want it. I have a country estate where I'd like to live, walled off from all affairs of the world. I would like to live with my family in peace—I have been most fortunate in the possession of a happy family—and I would like to be done with all these papers. I am only doing my duty. I expect no thanks.

"All manner of horrible stories have been printed about me. Do you see a terror in Hungary? Find me a reliable witness who does. Any child can tell you Hungary is a Parliamentary Government. Just now a city election has been concluded, with the Socialists participating."

We talked of Count Karolyi. I had previously discussed the rebel with various Hungarians and foreign observers. It was agreed without exception that Count Karolyi could not muster a following of one thousand throughout the country; that his muzzling in America had not stirred a ripple of interest generally. Count Karolyi is in more respects than one the Kerenski of Hungary. It was agreed generally too (and this in quarters in first-hand touch with diplomatic affairs) that not Horthy but the Hungarian Minister in Washington asked the State Department to keep Count Karolyi quiet because that timorous diplomat feared he would be held responsible by his Government if Count Karolyi aroused any reac-

"Jazz" Opera Was the Subject.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NEITHER you nor Mr. Stokes has mentioned the essential requirement of all the grand operas which have monopolized the stages of the world's principal opera houses in the past 50 years. This sine qua non is a tragic love story involving death. The art world has discovered by experience that such themes have more universal appeal and sound more poignant depths of human feeling and passion than even patriotism or heroism, though one or even both of these motives are frequently combined with the love story in grand opera.

To prove this statement it is only necessary to name some of the grand operas which are most frequently sung: Aida, Faust, Carmen, Lucia, Rigoletto, Traviata, Trovatore, Butterfly, Boheme, Cavalleria, Pagliacci, Tosca, Thais, Giaconda, Force of Destiny, Huguenots, Jewess, Masked Ball, Romeo and Juliet, Manon, Lohengrin, Tannhauser, Tristan and Isolde, Boris and others.

Most of these love stories are imaginary, though some of them are historical. Where could we find such themes in American history which would be of world-wide appeal? They must be so to be recognized as great art works. Perhaps the material for a good American grand opera libretto might be found in our best dramas and novels, possibly including suitable historical characters. The music should be first of all beautiful and melodious, as well as harmonious or appropriately dramatic; in an effort to be original, it should not become bizarre or pedantically dull. It must be the inspiration of genius.

The Riddle of Truth.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN the Tennessee controversy concerning our knowledge of "fundamental" truths will Mr. Bryan contend that matters of faith, belief or opinion are facts? Who has ever been to heaven to tell of those streets of jasper and of gold?

We cannot compare such truths relatively with anything we know and hence cannot reason about them and thus have any real knowledge of them. It is the old story again of Pilate and his question "What Is Truth?"

Abstract truths embodied in laws have led to many religious wars, hence the seriousness of the Scopes trial.

Old Age Pensions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ONCE more the drive for the orphans of the veterans of the last war, or those who will be orphans sooner or later. I am an orphan myself, 63 years old now, but still an orphan, and with all this I gave a little toward the fund; do to most everything that appeals to me as being in the right direction; but with it all we still overlook the one great thing that should be taken care of, namely, old age pensions. I am not talking for myself, as I would sign off any claim I could ever have if I could see this United States adopt such a movement for men and women.

The bonus law recently passed would have been so much better for the boys who got it if they were sure when they got old they would at least be taken care of in a way that didn't hurt their pride, but by paying their small share of the tax as they lived, would be entitled to it, and end their days in peace.

May some statesman with large enough vision, who can answer those who raise their petty objections, arise in our country, and make this old age pension a reality, and, doing so, save the soul of our country.

"The Faces That We See."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

FEELING that there is one great supervising force whose base of operation is the truth, we are willing to count as fundamental all of the rules that have been in force while the period in which man could come to understanding was shortened and could be contained in one lifetime, for—

There is joy, light and gladness,
There is tenaity and madness,
There is sorrow, grief and sadness
In the faces that we see.
And we drink the cup of sorrow,
Feel the madness in our marrow
And of gladness seem to borrow
From the faces that we see—

And we know that our own existence is interwoven, with that of every other living creature, and find no place where the man who understands may claim that he has grown out of this relationship, or that he has reached the place where he may despise the rule that served him well while the truth was dawning upon his infant mind, and count such evolution as unbridled egotism.

KENTUCKY—A PURITAN STATE.

Kentucky, once the seat of a charming civilization, has become a Puritan commonwealth. The idea shocks a writer in the Baltimore Sun, who writes from the heart of the Bluegrass that the campaign to abolish racing is in full cry. The Legislature meets next January, and all candidates are being quizzed as to what they think about a condition which forbids crap-shooting at one end of Fourth street in Louisville and permits race-horse gambling at the other.

Horses, whisky and women are the familiar and much-advertised concomitants of Kentucky's old civilization, but those who knew it in its best days realize the inadequacy of the trilogy to describe it. The Kentucky of the Clays, the Marshalls, the Breckinridges, and many other families which have left an imprint on American life, was a mellow, cultured land, where gentility flourished and soft voices spake, and ancient houses gleamed with warm virtues. There were horses and whisky. There were also books and music. There were and still are pretty and graceful women. Society was not a plutocracy, but a benevolent aristocracy where poor and rich of gentle breeding met on the same plane. This life of old Kentucky, moreover, was chiefly distinguished by its happiness and contentment.

But this so celebrated Kentucky was found in a small and restricted area in the central part of the State. It never permeated the rugged Cumberlands, that primitive region of moonshine and homicide, nor except in spots was it known in the great western wing of the State. These rural and mountainous regions are hardly kin to Lexington and Louisville and the Bluegrass, whence their leaders came for many years. In the past 25 years, however, they have been awakened to a consciousness of power. Out of the hills the Governors of the State have been coming. From the vast dark tobacco regions of the west come farmer politicians, determined to have their share of the commonwealth's favors.

Neither the mountains nor Western Kentucky understands or sympathizes with the cultured civilization of the Bluegrass. Clever politicians, sensing a potential regional antagonism, have seized upon it and have attempted to control the State by fathering the well-known "moral issues" of the day. A wing of the Democratic party espoused prohibition and with that as a banner elected Governors and United States Senators, incidentally disabling the party to such an extent that today for the first time Kentucky is represented by two Republican United States Senators. Now these politicians are fostering a campaign against race-horse gambling. The mountains and Western Kentucky care nothing about racing and are willing to scuttle it in return for lower taxes. This reduction is to be made possible by putting added taxes on the large coal operators. It is a trade most agreeable to the preponderant farmer.

Away from Central Kentucky the old civilization described by James Lane Allen and many others never existed and never will exist; these other regions of the State are prey to all the provincialism, narrowness and Ku Klux Klanism which are common phenomena throughout rural United States. These other regions have become vocal and powerful under the guidance of bosses who espouse "moral issues" not from any sense of morality, but from the knowledge that there lies political success.

Whisky above ground is gone. Horses are going. Yet, in the gentle undulations of the Bluegrass, where are the ancestral estates of pioneer families, there is still a civilization of gentility and charm. It did not depend upon whisky and horses for life, for it was compounded of finer things. It is losing its influence at Frankfort, and in the places where politicians gather, but it still dispenses warmth and graciousness and good living to all who know it.

EDITORIAL FREEDOM.

About to leave the Century Magazine to become president of the University of Wisconsin, Glenn Frank, in the first of a series of articles with which he will close his journalistic career, speaks in high praise of the Century company, "the trustees and president of which have always displayed those qualities of intellectual honesty, tolerance and courage which have made possible a wholly unhampered editorial freedom in this office during the last four years."

That will not come as a surprise to many editors, but it does serve to refute the false impression, too common among readers, that editorial policies are ever subject to the whims of publishers, and dictated with an eye on the counting room. Readers of the Century may regard this case as exceptional, but, if Mr. Frank states his own position truthfully, and there is no doubt of it, it is reasonable to believe the same rule obtains with many other publications.

As a matter of fact, it must. No newspaper or magazine can hope for high standing in its community, nor for forceful writing on the part of those who shape its comment, unless its writers write the truth as they see it. The case of the Century and its departing editor is not unique; not even unusual enough to prompt this comment, were it not that so many have mistaken notions of the restrictions placed on those whose opinions shape editorial policies.

AN AUTHOR GROWS OLDER.

Sinclair Lewis, back from Europe, is said to see some improvement in America; Babbitt is a bit better, and Main Street not so much so as it was. He did not, in the published interview, claim credit for the change, but a writer of best sellers may be excused for thinking his works were read by many at whom he aimed. Doubtless they were, yet those who have not been to Europe may have noticed no more change than the ordinary transition that comes to any community as time passes. The realists have made their mark in our literature; they have done good work and bad, as the romanticists did, but, save that there are more radios and motors; that skirts are a little longer or shorter than when he went away; that another popular song has taken the place of the one he heard when he sailed, the country remains about the same.

Rather, the change is in the man. Normally, the years bring a spirit of tolerance. Even a few months of detached thought, remote from the scenes of his labors, and away from the influences that irritated, may have enabled Lewis to see more clearly and given him a better sense of proportions. When first he shot across the literary field, Lewis was a crusader, although satire was his favorite weapon, and it is the way of the crusader to see but one side of the issue, and that one side of the issue is all to him.

Stinging criticism frequently is helpful, and there was need for Lewis' work, but a better balanced judgment marked William Allen White's "The Other Side of Main Street." The Emporia editor saw with a vision that could see both sides, and now it seems that Lewis can.

DRY OR DIE.

Prohibition enforcement is to be militarized. In appointing district administrators—the key positions in the new tactics—former army and navy officers will have the preference. This announcement is made by Assistant Superintendent Andrews of the Treasury Department, who is at work on the drastic reorganization of the enforcement plan and personnel. It was to be expected. Andrews himself is a professional soldier, with 30 years of continuous service between his graduation at West Point and retirement.

The development is logical. How it will work is a question. It has disturbing possibilities. The soldier's viewpoint is not that of the civilian. The soldier is trained for emergencies. In action he has a specific job to do. When not so engaged he is waiting and preparing for just such a task. The never-ending responsibility of civil office, calling so often, as it does, for discretion, tact, flexibility, is outside the warrior's philosophy.

The experiment of Gen. Butler in Philadelphia is a case in point. For more than a year he has had the detail of cleaning up that city. It has been war, war, war and rumors of war ever since he took command. We have no notion how many times he has declared war, and always "war to a finish"—on the hosts of lawlessness. We have no idea how many ultimatums he has issued. But victory, in the sense of the decisive result that ends a military engagement, has not been won. In the nature of things it never can be won. The problems of peace are never settled.

Further, the civilian en masse bitterly resents military dictatorship. He resents military supervision. Where a policeman would be received jocularly or at worst impatiently, the army officer's appearance would arouse hostility. We are speaking of the law-abiding citizen, or, to be exact, of the man who was a law-abiding citizen before the Volstead act. When in addition to this attitude we consider the extraordinary ineptness of so many army officers in their relations with civilians, their arrogance, their imperiousness, we have all the psychological ingredients for frictional explosions. If the problem of sumptuary law enforcement is to be solved only by increasing force the end can be foreseen. The dry or die alternative will put an end to law and order and to Volsteadism.

THE CRUSHING RAILROAD TAX.

The railroads of the nation last year paid the Federal and state governments $929,896—in round numbers, $1,000,000—a day, including Sundays and holidays, in taxes. We say the railroads paid it. That is only the formal record. In reality the American people paid it. What they did not pay directly to the railroads they paid in the shipping tax on food, clothing, fuel and other necessaries.

The total tax bill of the railroads for the year was $340,342,000. This record-breaking figure represents an increase of 2.5 per cent over the previous year and 187 per cent over 1913. For each $100 of operating revenue $5.80, or nearly 6 per cent, went to taxes.

Whither are we drifting? How long can we keep up the pace? How long will we continue to fool ourselves that we are taxing the railroads and not ourselves? The unlimited power of the state to tax, when it is abused, becomes a menace to efficiency and service. It has the effect of Chinese banditry and blackmail. If the people would protest paying the immense railroad tax directly to political overlords, why should they not protest paying it indirectly?

A REFERENDUM OF REACTION.

Oklahoma had a law against teaching evolution in the public schools before Tennessee did. Because there were no prosecutions for violations, the Oklahoma measure, passed two years ago, attracted less attention than Tennessee's similar law. The Oklahoma statute was passed two years ago as a rider to the free textbook bill, and thus slipped by without the publicity that might have attached to it as a separate regulation. It was repealed by the last Legislature, along with the free textbook measure, which had cost more than the original estimates, and which was unsatisfactory to many people.

If Oklahoma had been disposed to let it go at that the world might have known little of its efforts to suppress Darwin. But free textbooks have their champions. The Farmers' Union sponsored a referendum vote to restore the statute the Legislature had repealed. After the petitions were put in circulation, Dayton, Tenn., became a storm center, and Oklahoma fundamentalists joined the Farmers' Union movement to revive the free textbook law, since it contained this boost to bigotry and intolerance. The combined forces feel assured of enough signers to bring the issue to a vote. Oklahoma people will have themselves to blame if they have as little regard for freedom, tolerance and constitutional rights as a past Legislature demonstrated.

Advocates of the referendum have touted it as a panacea for political ills; as a bulwark of democracy that would restore the government to the people. It does have some such power, but it will not benefit the people, unless they are fit to govern. Ignorance and prejudice can turn a progressive provision to reactionary ends. Oklahoma will be judged by the result of the election that shall decide this question.

TO SPANK OR NOT TO SPANK?

Antispanking laws, like other Utopian measures, are encountering rough handling in the courts. The comment of Circuit Judge Wurdeman in a Clayton case against a teacher who whipped a schoolboy was that the lad probably deserved it. Only a few days ago a New York Judge freed a woman charged with assaulting her 9-year-old stepdaughter and declared that he had frequently "tanned" his own children so severely that they could not sit down.

The latter case aroused a discussion in which it came to light that when Gov. Smith was naughty little Al his parents never applied to him palm of hand or back of hairbrush. On the other hand, a mother of seven found time to go to the movies because the hand that rocked the cradle did not hesitate to deliver a woodshed spanking.

The question of whether to spank or not to spank is yet young, for it is not long since the sparing of the rod has been considered at all. But it promises to be prolonged interminably, for there will always be good and bad children both spanked and unspanked.

—MERMAID.

Sweet mermaid! Whose incomparable eyes
Surpass fair glimpses of the summer skies!
Thy form, O maiden of the saline deep,
So rare and fair that to possess I'd leap
Upon a sword-fish flashing through the sea
With him cross swords for thee.
Where mollusks crawl and octopi entwine
I'd be content on leering eels to dine.
I'd bask in love and by your side I'd swim
With love enflamed by your playful fin.
Hot summer days in grottos we'd forget
That sometimes even fishes sweat.
And with a crab's claw in your chamber there
I'd comb the slimy sea-weed from your hair,
And amorously grow tail and gills—
My heart with rapture thrills!
But Love, you do not know the salty worst:
I own a thirst.
Which all the waters could not satisfy
If all the flashing fishes were to cry.
Perhaps—perhaps—I'd last a day or two,
But O my dearest, salty drinks wont' do!
Sweet mermaid, when the waving currents shine
My—thirst is mine!

Sir: Whatever may be said of its literary contents, the Saturday Evening Post admittedly sets the pace in advertising. In a current ad one of the men in the picture says to the other: "They refinished this car of mine in less than a fortnight."

Is it ethical to take advantage of the general ignorance of the meaning of "fortnight?" Most New Yorkers would think it meant fourth ("fort") night. Have you ever heard it actually used in conversation by any but Englishmen, either real or pseudo?

A ST. LOUISAN ABROAD.

ENGLAND.

Picture an Olive street car floating on a canal and drawn by a horse, and you have rapid transit according to the way of Llangollen, pronounced "Thlangothlan." The canal winds between meadows and under overhanging trees—a peaceful, nerve-saving way of getting downtown. Our conveyance was proudly named "Pride of the Ocean."

In the seat behind, some peasants discussing modern women. This is a Sunday-go-to-meeting community. On the Sabbath no newspaper, no trains, no anything. Lipsticks, rouge and the like, and their effects, not to be seen. The conversation drifts to bobbed hair—evidently unanimity of opening violent denunciation—words come thick and fast and in staccato—voices rise, then a final explosion:

"What business have they cutting off what God gave them by right?"

The town of Bath brings to the mind's eye visions of courtly dames and swaggering dandies, of duels, and the pomp and flourish of a society ruled by the iron hand of Beau Nash.

A Washington square atmosphere prevails in the rows of staid, somber houses, polished brass, and in the browned dignity of eighteenth century neo-classic architecture.

There is a touch of magnificence in the Roman baths—unearthed years ago and put to modern use; but now serving only to emphasize the decline of this once flourishing spa.

Spent a morning in the Royal factories of Worcester watching patient craftsmen modeling, turning, turning and decorating the lovely delicate things from which our most select meals are eaten and our daintiest teas served.

A workman points, with the pride of participation, to the fine, clear ring, lovely translucency and soft surfacing of a cup. What a relief from the boast of quantity that comes of standardization.

But we came to see the Commandery, an old Elizabethan house near the charming River Severn, and to spend the remainder of our day wandering in its oak-beamed rooms, admiring its great four-posters, the carved stairway, its famous refectory, and accepting its traditional story of Charles II, and how he found protection in its garret. If you doubt it, the very trap door is shown.

We visit Carnarvon, an extensive and complete castle of the thirteenth century. A huge pile of medieval walls, towers, fighting galleries, gates and outer defenses, but lacking the charm that the inner domestic quarters give to the lovely ruins of Chepstow and of Raglan.

"If these gray walls could speak
They would unfold a tale indeed."

At Carnarvon in 1284 there was born to Edward I a son. The King had promised Wales a Prince who could speak no English. That son, Edward II, became the first "Prince of Wales," and ever since the heir-apparent to the British throne has borne that title.

Spent the night at Ffestiniog, a remote village perched on a hill in the heart of "Wild Wales," and discovered by that chance the source of the Jones family.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Rev. Warren H. Wilson in the July Century.

THE country woman of the generation just past has been discontented. A change toward greater contentment—or perhaps toward greater courage—is recorded in the past five years. * * * The life of the American farm enticed women and rewarded them so long as it was adventurous. While the pioneers were going westward their women wished to go with them, because they shared the desire for a new country. Women are never afraid of hardship when their men are engaged in it. There is a new spirit in the farmer's wife in these days. Farming has taken on the aspect of a new adventure. Its possibilities in the way of consumption of goods to create pleasure and comfort are greater than they were 30 years ago. The women see even a better future for their daughters. In 1922 an inquiry sent to 10,000 farm women by the "Farmer's Wife" brought back about 8000 answers to the question, "Would you desire your daughter to marry a farmer?" and the majority were in the affirmative. * * * If women on farms in the United States were the economists of the farm and the home, the country churches would doubly profit. They would be better kept, more thriftily financed, and their properties would be a joy to the eye, their inner furnishings a comfort to the weary soul. We are convinced, therefore, that there should be a revolution in the [illegible] of the country church. Women should be taught the lessons of farm economics because theirs should be the expending of the income.

FRANKNESS IN CRITICISM.

WILLIAM LYON PHELPS in Scribner's for July.

THE death of Gene Stratton-Porter last December was mourned more by her readers than by her critics. If not a great writer, she was at all events an extraordinary person. Nine million copies of her novels were sold, and the publishers reckon five readers to every copy. She therefore had a prodigious army of admirers. She was a naturalist, but her books on [illegible] would not sell; she had the mistaken [illegible] that she was a great poet, but no one cared for her verse. Yet her sentimental [illegible] had a vogue paralleled only by that of old Bell Wright. Most of her books I found too soft; but she produced one work of fiction which I am not ashamed to call a good book; and I am supported in this opinion by a discriminating and fastidious critic, who is an American novelist and a distinguished Judge. The novel I refer to is "A Daughter of the Land," which has a good plot and characters, and is [illegible] only by crudity of style. I never saw Gene Stratton-Porter, but I had a good [illegible] letters from her. She began the [illegible] spondence by asking me why the [illegible] ridiculed her books. I attempted to [illegible] the question by replying that if she had 45,000,000 readers she ought not to [illegible] about the critics. She was not satisfied. [illegible] then told her that her literary style [illegible] childish and crude. She sent me [illegible] her books, asking me to mark the [illegible] I covered the first 20 pages with corrections, and I think it a tribute to [illegible] character that our friendship survived. She had a decidedly interesting personality, and I wish I had had the opportunity to talk with her.

Regent Horthy a Figurehead; Boston Lawyer Runs Hungary

in Americt. And Horthy is not at all grateful to the State Department.

His serene highness believes Karolyi is an "aginner." He believes Karolyi's vanity lives upon opposing th eestablished order of things. He doesn't like him personally, and consequently said various harsh things about him. But he wa sonly repeating what I had heard from Hungarian Liberals, not those who live in America but in Hungary.

I brought up the question of a monarchy. Hungary today is a monarchy without a King. There are two rival factions, the Legitimists who recognize Prince Otto as King, and those, including Horthy, who believe the Hungarian tradition of electing a ruler should be resurrected.

"The problem has no actuality. Hungary is not in a position to take up this question, which should come last, not first. Our problem is economic. With two-thirds of our territory divided up between Czecho-Slovakia, Serbia and Rumania our problem is to exist. Our problem is economic. We need credits for our agriculture. We must build up some form of industry. We must keep our budgets balanced, our currency stable.

Suffering a Blessing.

"Hungary is a monarchy. The Sacred Crown rules. Who the individual will be who will be chosen as the servant of the Crown remains to be decided. Whether he is a Hapsburg, whether he is elected." He shrugged his shoulders. "There is no truth in the report that the Empress Zita and Prince Otto are coming back. We have taken no steps with the Ambassadors' Council to receive permission for their return. It is a problem that does not occupy our minds at the moment."

The fatalism of the Magyar, which is not unlike the fatalism of the Slav, manifested itself as he continued:

"It is good that Hungary should suffer. Prosperity makes a people weak. I am not afraid of the future. We were under Turkish domination for hundreds of years. Hungary will arise once more. You cannot make borders on paper. The Danube is a stream. You cannot make Rumanians out of Hungarians. Justice will be given us. The good will conquer evil."

His opinion of his colleague, President von Hindenburg, was:

"It is good that Germany has an honest man at the helm, a man the world can trust. He is the man Germany needs. We, of course, have nothing but friendship for Germany, and for Austria. They are fellow sufferers, especially Austria."

We shook hands. I passed the aid-de-camp, and out into the cruel, colorful world, hurrying past green, brown and red as speedily as I could, and into the carriage. I came to another palace, content with a single doorman. I mounted a flight of stairs, and was ushered into an office. Mr. Jeremiah Smith of Boston came out to say hello. Mr. Smith officially is Commissioner-General for the League of Nations, superficially an American lawyer, with an office in the Finance Ministry and actually boss of the works.

Now, Mr. Smith is the first man to tell you he's just sort of hanging around. Bossing the country? Nothing like it. He goes around and visits the Regent and the Premier and the Finance Commissioner, and talks things over. Well, what? Oh, just talks things over. He's willing to talk things over with you, but he explains diffidently that as he doesn't speak the language he is not in a position to know the situation really thoroughly. And then you discover he is the best informed source in the country, and if you were stationed in Budapest, meeting Mr. Jeremiah Smith would give you all the news available, with its significance neatly and scientifically distilled.

A Hopeful American.

Mr. Smith believes Hungary is well on the road to recovery. Her budget is balanced. Her currency is stable. The crops are good. He thinks the country could be self-sufficient, which Austria is not. The Hungarian Government has co-operated with him fully. It is seriously at work. Most of the loan advanced it is still untouched, and the interest has been paid out of government revenues.

There is nothing of the boss attitude visible in Mr. Jeremiah Smith. He likes the country and admires the people. He, too, believes Hungary will emerge out of her present dilemma.

Mr. Smith has the post in Budapest that the League of Nations gave Herr Zimmerman in Vienna. Herr Zimmerman is one of the best hated men in Vienna. Mr. Smith is one of the most popular figures in Budapest, far more popular certainly than his serene highness. The explanation is simple: Herr Zimmerman is a letter writer. When he has differences with the Austrian Government he summons a stenographer and in merciless type fixes his demands. Mr. Smith takes his hat and calls upon the Government rulers and talks things over. With the result that Austria is constantly negotiating herself out of some difficulty with the league, whereas Hungary shows not the slightest outward sign of friction.

Admiral Horthy is not a popular man. You cannot explain popularity. It is one of the eternal mysteries. All during the war Gen. von Ludendorff was respected but disliked by his men, von Hindenburg admired and loved. And yet there are military experts who believe von Ludendorff an infinitely more capable general than the President of Germany. In France Joffre captured the popular fancy, while Foch for all his brilliance did not. Why isn't Gen. Pershing popular?

In any case, there's the fact. And here's another: Horthy is a figure-head. Count Bethlen, the Premier, as head of the Parliamentary Government, wields such power as is given to a Hungarian ruler. Horthy is not unlike a constitutional monarch. His main task is to provide that color which dazzles one in his palace.

One must but mention Mr. Jeremiah Smith, and his significance, to dispel the Horthy regime myth. Hungary is under outside domination. A country in this position cannot enjoy the luxury of a dictatorship, because the dictator is dictated to from outside. It is obviously impossible for Horthy to venture into Mussolini dramatics, because the league, the Little Entente and the rest of the world would pounce upon him and make him look pathetically helpless.

Feudalism Remains.

The Hungarian Government is a product of its soil. Hungary has always been a feudal country. The big land owner, the servile peasant, the landed gentry and the lower classes; with the small industrialist class, the bankers and the traders as a despised middle class. There has not been a radical division of the land since the armistice, although 50 per cent of the land is in the hands of independent farmers, and the spirit of feudalism has undoubtedly survived. The country is almost always conservative, the cities radical. Budapest is a democratic city, as shown in the last election where the reactionaries suffered heavy losses and a Socialistic coalition emerged out of comparative obscurity into power.

But in the country the open ballot still exists. The cities vote secretly. The Hungarian Parliament now is endeavoring to extend the secret ballot to the entire country. The justification of the open ballot is feudal. The land owners complain the peasants would be easily influenced by communism, which in itself is a confession that at the present moment the land owners dictate the vote of the peasants. But the movement against the open ballot is rapidly gaining strength.

Communism as a bugaboo is losing its value gradually. Hungary was under communist rule six years ago, which is a trifle in the measurement of time. Already the Bela Kun regime is slipping from memory, and fear is giving way to reason. It will not be very long before opposition to the open ballot must lose its foundation of a horrible memory.

Impartial observers are convinced the tendency is away from feudalism economically. The spirit of feudalism survives. That is why Hungary is a monarchy without a King today. The Hungarian loves display, in his private life, in the church, in the state. But there isn't much display possible when money is scarce, when you are surrounded by enemies, when you are fighting for existence. Feudalism grows strong in prosperity, and collapses in adversity.

Two-thirds of Hungarian territory has been taken away from her. In this division of the spoils went many of the big estates. Hungary is surrounded by armed neighbors — by Czecho-Slovakia with a Hungary minority, by Jugo-Slavia with a Hungarian minority, by Rumania with a Hungarian minority. The feudal master cannot pose as a very brave fellow under these circumstances. His pretensions sound hollow. A feudal master must win wars to impress the slaves.

Hungary Cannot Fight.

And Hungary is not going to war. She has the men, like Germany, but not the equipment. She is watched zealously by neighbors who, with French aid, have assembled first-rate fighting machines. She is helpless. Although she wants intensely revision of her borders, she is not going to fight for it, because she cannot. She will merely wait.

Waiting is an Oriental pasttime. Hungary is Oriental. The Turk has left his impress upon the land. Time is measured in centuries, not years. All manner of things may happen in a century. The entire balance of power in Europe certainly will be changed; the details of the change are left to the prophets. When that change takes place Hungary will change. It is a comforting philosophy.

Count Karolyi is undoubtedly a sincere Republican. What he forgets is that revolution must be jammed down a country's throat. You must beat a monarchist into a Republican. Like Kerenski, he sought to do it with words. So Hungary rejected the Republic, and then it rejected communism.

Moderate Republicanism cannot be achieved in a revolution. It must be developed. Hungary had two choices; either Bela Kun or Horthy. I met Bela Kun in Moscow. He is a very bitter man. For he realizes if Hungary were as large a land as Russia, if it were as free from invasion as Russia, he could have survived. Unfortunately for him, it is not, and he lost out forever.

Bela Kun could have stamped out feudalism with an iron heel, as Horthy stamped out communism. Bela Kun's task is being done for him by circumstance. The product will not be at all to his liking. It probably will not be to the liking of Count Karolyi. And perhaps it is not at all the liking of His Serene Highness. Mr. Jeremiah Smith, being just an American lawyer hanging around, has nothing to say in the matter.

Faith in Peace With U. S. Held by Japanese Minister

ism. Parenthetically, I would say that I personally have been surprised by what I have seen in evidence of Japanese assimilability to Americanism. I have seen in Tokio a group of American-born Japanese children who amazed me by their likeness, in dress, speech and manners, to American children. These little visitors of Japanese blood could not speak a word of Japanese.

"Your Ambassador, Mr. Morris," the Foreign Minister went on, "raised two points in criticism of conditions in Japan relative to the relations of America and this country. He liked neither our law of nationality nor our law of property affecting aliens. At that time a Japanese subject, wherever born, remained a Japanese subject in the view of Japanese law unless and until such subject, by his own act, renounced his Japanese citizenship and adopted another. Now, under American law, a person born in America becomes an American citizen without any act of his own—acquires American citizenship automatically by virtue of birth in the country.

Doing Away With Dual Citizenship.

"It followed. therefore, that American-born Japanese inherited two citizenships, Japanese and American. Mr. Morris objected to this dual allegiance, and his objection seemed to me reasonable. His position concerning our law of property I also felt able to regard not unfavorably. On my return to Japan, and on becoming Minister for Foreign Affairs, I recommended to the Diet an alteration of our laws of nationality and property in accordance with the point of view urged upon me by Mr. Morris. My recommendation prevailed. Our laws were changed. As to Japanese emigration to the United States, we stopped it in conformity with the terms of the 'gentlemen's agreement.'"

"You then felt," I remarked, "that Japan had done all she could to clear the way for the test of Japanese assimilability in America and to advance toward a complete Japano-American accord?"

"That is how we felt."

When Americans Make Mistakes.

"And what should you say of the American response?"

"I will tell you a story," replied Baron Shidehara, his air of close thought passing and a reminiscent smile breaking over his face. "I was in Washington when the American Congress took action with reference to the Panama tolls question. Lord Bryce was British Ambassador to Washington then. On the Sunday following the act of the Congress I dropped in, as was my occasional wont, to see Lord Bryce at the British embassy. In the course of our desultory talk I said to Lord Bryce, 'Your objection to the tolls bill has been overruled.' 'Yes,' was his reply. 'What are you going to do about it?' I inquired.

"Lord Bryce looked at me calmly. 'Nothing,' said he. 'There is nothing to be done. There is no use in doing anything. The American people may make mistakes. They may commit injustices. But, in the end, they always of their own will put them right. It is in their history.' On our side—the side of Japan—things had not been going as we should have wished in California. Indeed, almost at the same time that the Congress passed the toll the Legislature of California passed the antialien land law. Presently Lord Bryce said to me, 'And what are you going to do about the California situation?' I replied instantly, 'We are going to do what you are going to do—nothing.'"

A Prophecy of Understanding.

After some unfeigned laughter, Baron Shidehara continued: "Shortly before that wise and delightful British statesman died, we chanced to meet again in Washington. He had come over to speak at the Institute of Politics in Williamstown. He ran down from New York to Washington to call upon some of his old friends at the State Department, and we encountered each other in the reception room. We hat a chat. It was of old times in the American capital. Panama tolls came up. 'You see I was right,' said Lord Bryce. 'Yes,' I agreed, 'you were right about the Panama Canal.' Lord Bryce glanced at me and we smiled. 'California,' said I, 'still awaits the fulfillment of your prophecy.'"

"Do you think history," I inquired, "will prove Lord Bryce a bad prophet relative to Japan?"

"No," answered Baron Shidehara with emphasis. "We all in this country, or certainly those of us who know America, retain our confidence in her fundamental love, not only of justice, but of generosity. We believe that one day she will understand us. We believe that her distrust of us, so far as she has any such distrust, will disappear. We believe that a national American demand for justice and fairness and neighborliness toward the Japanese in the United States will sweep away all misrepresentation, all misunderstanding, and with them all discrimination by American citizens against the Japanese within their gates and the Japanese race as a race. There will be no trouble about it. Knowledge of facts and conscience will do the work. America and Japan will continue to stand side by side, with friendly sister nations, as guardians of the peace of the Pacific."

Japan's Views on Emigration.

"You have no ambition to 'swamp America' with your people?"

"We have no ambition to swamp any country with our people. We do not want to send America a single Japanese to whom she objects. That would not be good for her or us. It is sentiment and principle and devotion to the amity of peoples—not the wish or necessity of emigration—that actuate Japanese citizens and the Japanese Government in respect of the discriminatory clause in the American immigration law."

"It has been reported in America that the 'real' Japan does not welcome the effort in America to have Japan included in the quota. Is this true?"

"It is entirely untrue."

"Is the immigration problem the only important problem between Japan and America?"

"It is the only one."

Opposed to Provocative Alliances.

"Japan will press for the removal of all forms of discrimination against the Japanese people by whomsoever practiced?"

"In a friendly way—naturally."

"Is it possible that obdurate occidental indifference to Japanese susceptibilities would issue in an Asian entente of some solidarity?"

"No. Such an entente would hold out no promise of what we are seeking, namely, all-round recognition of the principle of equality for our people."

"Would such an entente contravene tendencies toward a settled world peace?"

"Decidedly. Japan deprecates all segregative movements inimical to the aggregative interests of the world. I mean that we are opposed to the development of combinations of Powers pursuing particular rather than general world aims. Such combinations, in our opinion, tend to build up the mental and material conditions of war-like conflict. Our conception parallels the general conception or the league of nations as we understand the league."

"Japan's dominant moral and intellectual forces are for universal and permanent peace?"

"Beyond all question."

On Bolshevists and Bolshevism.

"Do you think Moscow hopes to exploit Japano-American difficulties favorably to its ideas of world-wide communism?"

"If it so hopes, it will be disappointed."

. . . . .

"Do you think Russian communism really intends, if it can, to destroy so-called capitalistic society?"

"Its constitution, I believe, contains a clause declaring such a purpose."

"Have you any kind of degree of sympathy with the bolshevists?"

"It is not my province to criticize principles of government in any foreign country. I can say, however, that bolshevism, so far as I can penetrate it, is utterly repugnant to the elementals of Japanese tradition and character. But I am not without a certain sympathetic feeling toward bolshevists as distinguished from bolshevism—toward the human beings, that is to say, who have sprung this unexampled and puzzling doctrine upon the world. Most of the bolshevist leaders are Jews. Their blood is the blood of a race long and cruelly persecuted. May not an error of judgment of the modern world, and an emotion, perhaps, of revenge, run in that blood?

The Product of Age-Long Tyrannies.

"Moreover, the Russians now in power are survivors or descendants of the age-long tyrannies of the czars. Their memories are bitter memories. They remember nothing but serfdom, bloody suppression, denial of human right, exile. How could they have what we should term a normal psychology? How could they be expected to feel anything but terror and enmity with reference to those political and economic systems which, in their imagination, resemble the regimes of the czars? May they not really believe that we should enslave and exploit them, if we could, and that consequently a passion on their part to extirpate us is a righteous passionc

"I am not answering these questions; I am asking them. I do not understand bolshevist mentality. But I never try to understand anything without a sympathetic exploration of its background. My idea is to seek a cure for the destructive pathology of bolshevists. not by withdrawing from them, but by cautiously and prudently endeavoring to establish an educative intercourse with them. Nonbolshevist nations, I need not say, have no wish to wrong Russia, but every wish to see her orderly, prosperous and content, and to have her take her place in the peaceful concert of civilization."

Progressive Forces in Germany.

"Do you know of any national government or organized movement with aims prejudicial to Japano-American friendship?"

"Not now. China gave some evidence of such a disposition at the time of the Versailles conference, but I am aware of nothing of the sort in any quarter at present."

"Is any part of Japan sympathetic with the reactionary elements in Germany?"

"No, indeed."

"Do you anticipate any reactionary revival in Germany from Hindenburg's election?"

"No. My belief is that Germany will persist in the path of democracy and peace."

"Is Japan satisfied with the principle of the open door in China?"

"That principle cannot be too strictly enforced to suit us."

"It gives you natural advantages?"

"It gives us great natural advantages. Besides, it accords with our idea both of justice to China and of the universal welfare. International grasping for selfish advantage in China would threaten humanity with an immeasurable disaster."

Labor's International Question.

"Is Japan free from the menace of internal subversive agitation?"

"Not free from it, but, I think, not seriously threatened, nor more threatened than any other great state. Government everywhere, of course, is beset with new problems in our growing complex modern political and social existence. For instance, international labor attractions are a fresh concern of government. For the first time in Japan we have had a delegation from Japanese labor visiting the foreign office to protest against our measures for preserving order and protecting the rights of our nationals in China. Our reply was that we were not interfering in the strikes as economic struggles but as developments dangerous to life and property. It is a new thing with us—this sign of local labor unrest without the faintest practical local interest. But we are not alarmed over it. I merely mention it as an illustration of the increasing weight of public order burdens in every part of the world."

Friendship of the Pacific Powers.

Our last words—the last words of an interview that had occupied the best part of two hours—were relative to the Pacific. As we shook hands at parting, I said to Baron Shidehara:

"I may state that Japan values exceptionally an Entente with the principal occidental Pacific powers?"

"You may state that with every assurance of accuracy. How highly I personally reckon an Entente with the principal occidental Pacific Powers is reflected in my pride that I had a part in drafting the four-power treaty at the Washington conference."

Baron Kijuro Shidehara, born in Osake prefecture, aged 54 years, was graduated from the college of law of the Tokyo Imperial University. Entering the foreign office in 1896, he rose rung by rung until he became Foreign Minister in June, 1924. His diplomatic career has been long and honorable. In various capacities he has served in Washington, London, Antwerp and The Hague. From 1915 to 1919 he was Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs. From 1919 to 1922 he won his great popularity at Washington as Japanese Ambassador to the United States. His barony was the reward of his services in the great war.

JUDGE GAYER HOLDS RASH USE OF POWER BY POLICE DANGEROUS

16 times. That certainly sounds like the record of a hardened criminal. Think of the public horror when a newspaper announces that Judge Gayer dismissed a man who had a record of 16 arrests. But let us see. I called for the record. I found that in 14 of the arrests he had been released without any charge being filed. Once he had pleaded guilty to parking overtime, and had paid $3, and on the other occasion had been fined $5 on a peace disturbance charge. That is all his 'criminal record' amounted to. Arrests mean nothing. A policeman can give you a record of being arrested 10 times in one day, if he chooses to arrest you that many times on suspicion. One trouble is that if you have ever been arrested once, the police consider you fair game thenceforth."

"How are we going to make these cases, your Honor?" demanded a belligerent policeman recently, after Gayer had dismissed two of his prisoners.

"It's not my business to tell you how to make them," retorted the Judge. "You are a police officer; you ought to know how to make them. My business is to decide whether you have made them after I hear the evidence."

Recently, following a large number of arrests on vagrancy charges Judge Gayer said he met Judge Rosecan in the corridor. Discussing the approaching trial of these cases, Judge Gayer says that Judge Rosecan remarked: 'I guess I'll fine them. I have instructions to impose fines wherever there's any chance at all. What will you do when they get up to you?"

"How do I know what I'll do until I hear the testimony?" was the reply.

"And that's all there is to the commotion about me," declared the wiry little Judge, arising from his chair, and preparing to ascend the bench for the daily grind. "Let the police make their cases; let the Police Judges impose reasonable sentences, and they won't have any trouble in my court. I want the law enforced, but I don't want it violated in the attempt. Nobody's going to get away with murder if I can help it. I wouldn't tolerate 'rough stuff' from the defense, and I won't tolerate it from the prosecution. A fair trial and no favors works both ways. And that goes," he daded with a bang on his desk, "even if it means that I never hold another political office in my life."

A pugnacious and pertinacious man, this Judge Gayer, and altogether likely to sit tight. No case—no conviction.

KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

By the Associated Press.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., July 4.—Samuel Scenider, a shopkeeper, was killed today in an automobile race against time to be the first of the city's dealers to take advantage of the raising of the ban against Fourth of July fireworks.

The fireworks ban was raised yesterday by order of the Supreme Court, and as soon as he heard of the action, Sceneider drove his automobile to Manhattan, where he piled the car high with an assortment of fireworks and started home. He was nearing his store when he crashed into another automobile and his car overturned.

JOURNALISM SCHOOL GETS BRITISH STONE

Portion of Statue From St. Paul's Cathedral Presented by Newspapermen.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 4.—A stone from St. Paul's Cathedral, London, will be placed on the campus of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri. The stone is presented by British journalists through the courtesy of Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph and chairman of the British Empire Press Union, with the consent of Dean William Ralph Inge of St. Paul's.

The British Ambassador to the United States, Sir Esme Howard, will come from Washington to Columbia to deliver the address at the unveiling of the stone. Upon the stone will be placed a meridian plate, showing the distances and directions to the principal cities of the world from Jay H. Neff Hall. The meridian plate, a gift from the journalism graduating class of 1925, was prepared by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. It bears the motto: "I have set thee a watchman." The plate and the stone from St. Paul's are to be placed upon a base of Missouri stone.

Stone Quarried in 1724.

The St. Paul's stone, a three-foot cube, formed a portion of one of the statues on the south pediment of the cathedral. It was quarried in the vale of Portland in the year 1724 and carved by Francis Bird, a famous English sculptor.

"That was a happy idea of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri to obtain from St. Paul's Cathedral in London a stone to be used in the base of a meridian plate," writes Walter G. Bell, a distinguished British historian, who at Lord Burnham's request has supplied to Dean Walter Williams the history of the stone. "Within the big shadow cast by the cathedral most of the outstanding developments in English journalism have taken place."

Asron Watson, revered British journalist, first suggested the fitness of the use of the stone as evidencing the association of British and American journalism.

"St. Paul's Cathedral," said Watson, "is the one English building which, for every reason, is most sacred to all Englishmen. Within a few feet of where this stone comes from, Nelson and Wellington are buried; close by are grouped the last resting places of the great painters, Sir Joshua Reynolds, J. W. M. Turner and Lord Leighton; Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of this most noble temple of Christian worship, lies among these; and, looking down on his grave from a neighboring wall, the press has its memorial, in a tablet to Melton Prior, the war artist of many campaigns.

Center of English Press.

"The fitness of such a stone for the purpose designed appears to me to be unique. The first English printing press was set up at Westminster Abbey, a little more than a mile away; but after Caxton's time the printing and publishing trades clustered around St. Paul's. The first news-letters were written from the inns around St. Paul's churchyard; the first English newspaper was published within a little more than a bowshot of the cathedral doors. If a circle were drawn around St. Paul's at a distance of three-quarters of a mile, it would include the birthplace of English literature, of the English newspaper press, and of the English publishing business, besides comprehending in its area the offices of all the notable London newspapers of the present day.

"At the foot of the hill on which St. Paul's stands, down by Thames side, is the London Custom House where Chaucer was a high official. He lived at that time in Aldgate, within the assumed three-quarters of a mile radius. Spencer was born still nearer to St. Paul's, in East Smithfield, and Milton nearer still, in Bread street, Cheapside, where Shakspeare lodged when his main interests were in the Globe Theater and at Blackfriars. Playhouse yard, where the Blackfriars Theater stood, adjoins Pringing Square, formerly the site of the King's Printing House, and now, and since the foundation of the paper occupied by the offices of the Times.

"All the great publishing firms first established themselves around St. Paul's. Shakspeare's "Venus and Adonis," "The Rape of Lucree," and some of his other plays were to be purchased only at "The Little Door of St. Pawles." Goldsmith went to St. Paul's churchyard with his copy for Newbery, who published most of his work. There is the imprint of St. Paul's churchyard on the first edition of the grammar of Lindley Murray of New York.

Symbolic Gift of Nation.

"From the steps of the cathedral one can see as far as to where "The Complete Angler" was first published and sold. At a slightly less distance Gibbon's 'Decline and Fall' and the histories of Hume and Robertson made their first appearance. The Edinburgh Review was published from Paternoster Row, and the Quarterly Review from Fleet street.

"These are some of the grounds, to say nothing of St. Paul's as an epitome of the history of England, which seem to me to give a special significance to a stone from the great English cathedral. I cannot help regarding it as the most symbolic gift that England has ever made to the United States."

Woman Lost Faith In All Medicine

But After Many Years Finally Does Find Relief From Gas on Stomach

"I had taken medicine for years without permanent relief, so I had no faith. But I am wonderfully glad I tried Adlerika for I have taken only one-half bottle and can eat anything now without causing gas. Before I could eat nothing but bread and milk—everything else soured and formed gas. Since taking Adlerika I enjoy eating." (Signed) Mrs. J. B. Manning.

Intestinal Evacuant.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel, in slight disorders, such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction) a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports from Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire [illegible] years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

A Unique Chapter of American History

"The Rise and Fall of Jesse James"

By ROBERTUS LOVE

A Member of the Post-Dispatch Editorial Staff

An Authentic Photograph of Jesse James Taken in 1875.

The Post-Dispatch will publish in serial form the first fairly complete, connected and authentic account of the career of Jesse W. James, the world's most amazing outlaw.

This narrative, which is History, Biography, Tragedy, Comedy, Adventure and Romance interwoven, includes necessarily the careers of Frank James, Cole Younger and the rest of the group of Missouri Bandits who rode with Jesse James.

Though in many respects this record is more thrilling than exciting fiction, the constant aim of the author has been to hold to the line of fact. It is offered as a contribution to history, though not written in the conventionally heavy historical style.

Mr. Love, who is a native of Missouri, writes of these other Missouri natives from an inside viewpoint. He has known several of the outlaws personally, and many of their friends and enemies. For years he lived and worked as a newspaper writer in the Jesse James Country. He has surveyed the historical background of Missouri-Kansas border banditry which preceded the Civil War, and his narrative is bolstered by knowledge of the genesis of the James gang.

So far as possible Mr. Love has derived his facts from original sources, including contemporary newspaper accounts, statements by Jim Cummins (sole survivor of the gang) and by others who were active or passive participants in the long series of train, bank and stage robberies between 1866 and 1881.

The serial will present the complete and true story—as nearly as it can be written at this late date—of the sixteen years of Jesse James' outlawry—the extraordinary life-story of the man who made a world's record in eluding capture or killing by sleuths who hunted him almost constantly from 1866 to 1882, and who fell victim at last to the bullet of a treacherous friend who killed him for the price on his head.

TUBERCULOSIS DAY CARNIVAL TO BE ON 3-RING CIRCUS PLA

Athletic Exhibitions, Dances and Flag Drills to Be Put On in Groups Simultaneously.

MARATHON RACERS TO FINISH IN BALL PARK

Surprises Promised in Burlesque Baseball Preceding Brown-Red Sox Game, the Main Event of Day.

The "three-ring circus" plan will be carried out in this year's entertainment features of Tuberculosis day which will be celebrated at Sportsman's Park Wednesday, July 15. Stunts will take place simultaneously in different parts of the diamond. This is the first year that this type of entertainment has been followed on Tuberculosis day.

William F. Yorker, Superintendent of Recreation of the Municipal Playgrounds, is taking complete charge of all the entertainment except the Junior Marathon and big league game, and yesterday he announced that all plans were completed. Verne Lacy is chairman of the Junior Marathon Race Committee, and Joe Forshaw, Henry Levison and R. L. Probst are assisting in training the boys.

Health tumblers, acrobatic youngsters from Sherman Park Playgrounds, will give exhibition stunts as the first feature of the program, and at the same time flag drills will be in action in other parts of the field. Groups of esthetic dancers will entertain next. a health dance of the nations being the specialty act. A side feature of these dances will be a tiny youngster dressed in diminutive tarleton skirt who will imitate the dancing of her elders in her own interpretive way.

A Burlesque Ball Game.

The climax of the entertainment will come when the burlesque ball game gets under way. Yorger promises surprise features in this. Music will be furnished throughout the program by the Jefferson Barracks Band and the Mail Carriers' Band.

The fifth annual junior Marathon is already a center of interest for hundreds of boys, according to Lacy. Workouts in Fairground Park every Sunday morning have been in progress for several weeks, and many of the boys are already showing improvement from following regular hours in sleep and food habits. Each of the entrants is given a physical examination, and if physical defects are found, these are reported to the social service department of the Tuberculosis Society which follows them up and sees that they are corrected.

The girls' shuttle relay does for the girls what the marathon does for the boys, according to Yorger.

The girls have to train and keep in trim. Every playground in the city has entered a team, and many county playgrounds, as well as other city and county organizations, such as Girl Scouts, are taking part in the contest. The shuttle relay will be run on the field in full view of everyone, but as the marathon race begins at Fairground Park only the end will be seen by the spectators.

The last and biggest event of the day will be the big league ball game between the St. Louis Browns and the Boston Red Sox. This is the second time in the history of Tuberculosis day that the Browns have been one of the teams. In 1915, the first year that big league teams played for the benefit of the Tuberculosis Society, the Browns participated in the game.

Ticket Sale Under Way.

All other plans for the making of this eleventh celebration the most successful of all years have already been completed. The ticket sale is well under way, according to J. Ferd Oberwinder, chairman of the general arrangements committee. The leading railroads operating in and out of St. Louis, many of the big insurance companies, the War Risk Bureau and Jefferson Barracks, have already promised a half holiday to all those who purchase tickets for the ball game.

More than 25,000 presents, which merchants and manufacturers are contributing to be distributed on this day, have been received and are now on display at special headquarters at 209 North Seventh street.

Educational souvenir programs will be sold as usual at 25 cents each. Hundreds of girls will conduct the sale throughout the grandstand. These programs contain the schedule of events and give a bird's eye view of the activities of the society. They also contain educational health messages, special stress being given the value of annual physical examinations in this year's program.

All the proceeds derived from the day's entertainment will be devoted to the prevention of disease and promotion of health, which is the principal work of the Tuberculosis Society.

REDS FED IN SWEDEN UNDER LABOR CONTROL

Close-Knit Party in Power Offers No Field for Communist Boring.

STOCKHOLM.—In Sweden the "red" menace is not formidable. While communist organizations are not prohibited by law, as in the United States, their membership continues to be small, and it is the governmental Social-Democratic party which is not revolutionary in its tactics, that continues to attract the great majority of the country's labor men. Last year the national trades union organization, which constitutes the backbone of the party in power, increased its membership by 15.1 per cent, reaching a total of 360,337, and the number of locals grew from 3448 to 3810. Being openly organized by themselves, the communists are less in a position to "bore from within."

Politically, Swedish labor is more highly organized than that of any other country in Europe, the latest comparative statistics published by the Socialist Labor Internationale, show. In the Swedish Riksdag the Social-Democratic party now has 104 representatives out of a total of 230, or 45.2 per cent, which is more than any other Labor party controls. The communist Deputies number but four. In the last election the Conservative Labor vote was 725,844, or 41.1 per cent of the total polled, while the communists received only 65,283, or 3.7 per cent.

Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Excelsior Springs, Mo. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for twenty-six years and in more than nine thousand cases. The book is sent postpaid free to persons afflicted with Piles or other rectal troubles who clip this item and mail it with name and address to Dr. McCleary, 566 St. Louis Av., Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Boy and girl friends of the babies are commencing their summer activities in real earnest for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund, five money-making affairs having been reported during the last two days. The proceeds of these enterprises and five cash donations added $84.30 to the Ice Fund, which now totals $1438.85. This amount is short of the sum annually on hand at this time, but it is hoped that the awakened interest of the children will speedily make up the deficit.

A show given on the lawn of Mrs. Fred Foan, 7233 Sarah street, Maplewood, followed by a refreshment sale added $23 to the fund. The affair was sponsored by the Maplewood Amateur Club, which devotes much time every year to the cause of the babies. The following children took part: Coleta Foan, Edna Gibbar, Patricia Cleghorn, Doris Sanders, Anna Scully, June Mason, Grace Jones, Elinore Lipp, Bessie O'Hara, Melba Bohlman, Virginia Sanders, Georgia Mason, Jane Nacthmann, Susan Burke, Lillian Gibbar, James Foan, Pat Cleghorn, Edward Beekman, Clarence Crider, Billy Ray Stoppelman, Frances Nacthmann, Daniel Nacthmann, Joe Durney, Kenneth Durney and Billy Rabenberg.

Helen and Emma Jane Hazzard, Margaret Mitchell, Helen Venner, Merla Brandt and Marion Epstein, sold a cake donated by Zeller Bros. and cleared $13.20 for the fund.

An evening's entertainment at 6010 Enright avenue netted $13 for the fund. Those taking part were Buddy and Dot Herbst, Ellen Jane Freund, Ruth, Edith and Marion Radloff, Pauline Stimson, Donald Long, Harry Nichols Moss, Jack Trask, George Warner and Ralph Kalish.

Sixteen neighborhood children gave a show at 2717 Thomas street and earned $1.10 for the fund. Bessie Eisen and Morris Lanzboum managed the performance and the following assisted: Hyman Eisen, Israel Landau, Lily Shanker, Alex Achnurman, Sidney Goldworths, Leo Lanzbaum, Sam Eisen, Nathan Barnholtz, Max Barnholtz, Robert Lanzbaum, Marvin Steinman, Isadore Feldman, Paul Saltzman and Sam Shanker.

An entertainment at 7210 Manchester avenue, Maplewood, managed by four little girls, all under 11 years of age, netted $2 for the babies' fund. The workers were: Loreen Lutes, Bernice Lutes, Janet Lee Lutes and Elizabeth Benn.

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 5, 1925. PAGES 1—16.

Several Church Weddings Are Set For October

Miss Grace Wallace to Become Bride of Marion Niedringhaus, Oct. 10 — Miss Catherine Hall to Be Married Oct. 14.

WITH the June brides still on their wedding trips, a coterie of young women who have chosen October for their bridal month are already making plans for their weddings.

Perhaps the early setting of the dates is being done to avoid a conflict, but in spite of the precautions the present list is quite long enough to overlap and the guests at the fall ceremonies may find themselves going to two or more weddings in a day.

One of the latest to announce her marriage day is Miss Grace Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace of the Price road and Veiled Prophet Queen of 1923, who will become the bride of Marion Niedringhaus, Saturday, Oct. 10.

According to present arrangements the ceremony will take place in the late afternoon at the Wallace home in the county, with a reception following. The personnel of the bridal party will be announced later. Because of the popularity of Miss Wallace and her fiance in the younger circles of society, the wedding probably will be one of the largest of the autumn season. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and their daughters are planning an Eastern trip for August.

Another bride-to-be is Miss Catherine Hall, who has chosen Wednesday, Oct. 14 as the day of her wedding to David D. Walker III, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Walker of Wydown Terrace. The Rev. Dr. J. Courtney Jones will perform the ceremony in the evening at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Webster Groves, before a large company of guests and a reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Hall, of 225 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves.

Miss Hall is a graduate of Miss Bennett's School in Millbrook, N. Y., and was a Veiled Prophet maid in her debut year. Mr. Walker is a Yale man. Miss Hall will spend the month of August as the guest of Miss Barbara Bay at Ephriam, Wis.

With the exception of Miss Wallace's all of the large fall weddings will be church affairs. That of Miss Louise Bemis and William H. Luyties, Oct. 3., will take place at St. Michael and All Angels; Miss Frances Compton and Turner Clarkson will have a church wedding Oct. 17, and Miss Jane Whiteside will become the bride of Edward Morton Banister, Oct. 24 in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, the Rev. William Crowe officiating.

Miss Whiteside will go East next month to visit friends in Atlantic City, New York and Pittsburg and will purchase much of her trousseau in the East. Miss Compton will depart soon to join her family in Michigan, and Miss Bemis and her mother, Mrs. Judson Bemis, will go to Wianno, Mass., about Aug. 17.

MISS STEPHANIE JARVIS. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Jarvis of Webster Groves, who will spend the late season in Algonquin Park, Canada.
—Kandeler

MISS MARY FRANCIS DICKSON She will depart July 15 for Hyannisport, Mass where she will be Miss Marceline Reyburn's guest for a month.

Dinners, Parties And Dances Mark Independence Day

Clubs in Country Are Centers of Activity — Fireworks at Glen Echo, Tilting Contest at St. Louis

ANOTHER Fourth of July, with its glorious traditions and inspiring history, has passed, leaving many memories of a day well spent. In St. Louis the clubs, and especially those in the country, were the centers of social activity. Many of the members with their families, taking advantage of the 48-hour holiday, are using them for week-end parties, while others motored out for the holiday and remained for the celebration in the evening.

At each of them some form of entertainment was provided. At Glen Echo the golf links were crowded and there was a dinner dance and spectacular fire works display at night. At Sunset Hill, the swimming pool proved an added attraction, with the regular Saturday night dinner dance in the evening. Dinner was served at Bellerive, with dancing later, and the same sort of entertainment prevailed at Algonquin.

The most elaborate party of the day was the "gymkana" derived from the Anglo-Indian, a meeting for sports on horseback, given at the St. Louis Country Club. The events were scheduled for 3:30 in the afternoon and included a tilting contest with spears, which was arranged instead of the tug of war previously announced: a potato race and egg race for the women and a stick and ball contest, weaving and relay race for the men. A polo game followed.

The lawn about the clubhouse was decorated with Japanese lanterns and dinner was served in the evening at small tables on the terrace. Mrs. Harold M. Kauffman and Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., were in charge of the program for the day, and Edward B. Pryor, president of the club, was chief judge of events, he was assisted by Lewis D. Dozier, Tom Reyburn, Harry Hall Knight, Francis Drew and Harry Papin. Andrew McCreery was the announcer.

The participants were Mmes. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., Ira E. Wight Jr., Cupples Scudder, Gates Williams, Eugene Williams, and

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., July 3.

MR. and Mrs. George Welch Simmons, of New York, formerly of St. Louis, arrived this week to occupy for their first season here "Mayfields," the villa of Howard Dickinson, in Halseys Neck Lane. With them are their children, George Jr., Richard W. and Virginia and Lulie. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons entertained over the Fourth her brother, Thomas Wright and Frank O. Watts Jr., both of St. Louis.

Also here for their first season are Mr. and Mrs. Gerard B. Lambert, formerly of St. Louis, and now of Princeton, N. J., with their children, Gerard B. Jr., and Rachel and Lilly. They are occupying Miss Schieffelin's villa in Dunne Road and will be here until mid-September.

Mrs. D. R. Francis Jr., of 20 North Kingshighway, St. Louis, is passing the summer at the Maidstone Inn in Easthampton. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Robyn, formerly of St. Louis, now of New York, with their sons, Alfred and Byron Robyn, are at their cottage in Apaquogue Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Swenson of St. Louis has taken the Gay Cottage in Buell Lane in Easthampton and are here for the season.

BOSTON, July 4.—"Overledge" the Manchester Cove home of Mrs. Francis Adams Lane of St. Louis has been opened since May, Mrs. Lane coming East early to enjoy the delights of the North Shore before the rush of the summer. Members of the family will join her later. Mrs. Nathaniel T. Lane and her son, Nathaniel T. Lane Jr., are to spend the midsummer at Overledge, while Dr. Pressley Carr Lane of St. Louis will make his usual visit to Manchester during the season.

Among the group of St. Louis people who come early to the North Shore is Mrs. Samuel M. Kennard, whose summer home on Fuller street, Magnolia, is a lively place during the summer where the young children of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Ely Smith of St. Louis stay with their grandmother. Miss Adeline and Luther Jr. are among the young people who enjoy the sport at the North Shore Swimming Club, and both have taken home each summer several trophies won in the swimming and diving exhibitions.

Mrs. Clay Brown of St. Louis, who is spending the summer at her cottage at Biddeford Pool, Me., entertained a luncheon company in honor of Vice President Dawes upon the occasion of his recent visit to New England. Vice President Dawes was the guest at Kennebunk of Mr. Kenneth L. Roberts. Other guests at the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Booth Tarkington, who spend long seasons at their summer home in Kennebunkport.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Claflin Allen Jr., and family of St. Louis are at the "Overlook" cottage, at Annisquam, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Walker of New York, formerly of St. Louis, have opened their cottage at Kennebunkport for the summer. Nearby at the Old Fort Inn, Mrs. Walker's mother, Mrs. James H. Wear Sr., of St. Louis is staying.

The F. B. Ewing cottage at Great Diamond Island, Maine, has been opened, Mrs. Ewing and daughter having arrived late in June.

Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe and son, Thomas Jr., were among the early arrivals at Woods Hole, where their summer home "Schiverick," is located. Mr. Ratcliffe will come for the midseason.

MISS JUNE MORGENS, who will leave St. Louis this month to spend the summer in La Jolla, Cal.
—Kandeler.

MISS ANNE HANCOCK. She has gone to Kenilworth, Ill., to visit Mr. and Mrs. Frank Watt, parents of Alfred Riddiford Watt, whom she will marry in September
—Dieckman.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 4.—That this is to be an im portant season at Newport is indicated by the large number of people here for the holiday. Every villa has its quota of visitors, and the Casino has been the scene of many reunions during the week.

Prominent in the colony are Former Ambassador James G. Gerard and Mrs. Gerard who have taken Bythesea, the August Belmont estate on the Cliffs.

EUROPEAN ROYALTY VISITS LONDON

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, July 4.—Despite Henley, the tennis championships at Wimbledon and the horse show this week has been regarded socially as a recuperative period prior to the strenuous activities at Goodwood and Cowes.

But a flock of royalties has been arriving on unofficial visits, including the Crown Princess of Rumania, Princess Yolanda, whose husband, Count Calvi, was unsuccessful at the horse show, and the Duchess d'Aosta.

The Queen of Rumania arrived for the week-end, also the Queen of Spain and her daughters, and the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden are due before the Cowes regatta.

Cornelius Vanderbilt is scheduled to entertain during Cowes week aboard his yacht Atlantic. The King and other royalties will be among his guests.

The week's smartest wedding took society by surprise. There was an announcement that a "marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place, etc.," between Basil Dean, theatrical producer and the former manager of the Drury Lane Theater, and Lady Mercy Greville, daughter of the late Earl and Frances, Countess of Warwick. Within a dozen hours of this announcement the ceremony had been performed in the Strang Registry office.

Only a few relatives and friends were present, and Mr. Dean slipped in at the back door directly from the rehearsal of Wednesday night's production of Galsworthy's play, "The Storm." As soon as he was married, he returned to the theater to continue the rehearsal.

The bride first met her husband when she was playing in amateur theatricals, and later taking small parts in West End theaters under the name of Nancy Parsons.

The Countess of Warwick, known as the "Socialist Countess," has long been identified with the labor movement, and gave Easton Lodge in Essex as a recreation residence for labor leaders.

Mr. Dean and his bride soon will go to New York, where he is planning to produce Noel Coward's plays.

Care for Your Eyes

Proper Attention Is of Vital Importance

WHEN your eyes feel the need of attention, it is gratifying to know that there is here a competent and thoroughly reliable optical service at your command—one in which you may place perfect confidence. Of important interest also is the wide selection of frames of newest types, provided for your selection.

Special This Week
Duo Invisible Bifocal Lenses
Complete With Frame, $8.00

This style of double lens is most efficient; it eliminates the heavy line between the distance and reading glass, and looks as well on the wearer as the ordinary single lens. (Optical Department—Main Floor.)

A RECENT BRIDE

MRS. ADOLPH B. HILL JR.

THE marriage of Miss Ruth Allison Waldron, daughter of Mrs. Roman S. Waldron, of 5367 Pershing avenue, and Adolph Burge Hill Jr., son of Mrs. and Mrs. A. B. Hill, of Nashville, Tenn., took place the morning of July 2 at the home of the bride's parents the Rev. Dr. W. E. Barton, of the Compton Heights Baptist Church officiating. Only the immediate families were present and there were no attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Hill have gone to Chicago on their wedding trip, and will visit Mr. Hill's aunt in Michigan before returning to St. Louis, where they will be at home at 6041 Waterman avenue. The bride wore a brown silk suit trimmed with fur at the ceremony and a brown hat trimmed with feathers completed the costume.

MARRIAGE OF FORMER WIFE OF SENATOR STIRS CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The announcement of the marriage of Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, the divorced wife of Senator Gerry of Rhode Island, to Sumner Wells, formerly of the State Department, has been a topic of interest during the week. Mrs. Gerry was Mathilde Townsend, daughter of Mrs. Richard Townsend, and a reigning belle some 10 years ago. Washington society is waiting with keen interest to see if Miss Bessie McKelden, the debutante daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Leigh Palmer, will marry Henry Breckenridge of Kentucky, formerly Assistant Secretary of War, before she sails for Europe this week. Breckenridge divorced his wife in Geneva several weeks ago and the younger set is excited over the possibilities of another romantic wedding in its ranks. Miss McKelden is at present the house guest of Miss Ruth Stoddard in New Hampshire. Rear Admiral Palmer, her stepfather, is a Missourian.

Gen. Pershing was in town last week long enough to close his apartment on Connecticut avenue. He left for Newport and will stop at Swampscott to receive final instructions from President Coolidge on his South American mission on which he will embark in a few weeks.

Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Secretary of Labor, will sail for England for a visit to Wales next week. She will be accompanied by her mother-in-law, who will renew old friendships in the land of her birth, which she left some 50 years ago. Miss Jane Davis, eldest daughter of the Secretary and Mrs. Davis, also will go along. The Secretary will sail about the middle of July for Europe and will join the party for a vacation on the Continent.

Washington's blase four hundred had a real thrill this week in the arrival of Madame Samy Pasha, wife of the Minister of Egypt and one of the leading feminist of that country. They have taken a house in Q street N. W.

The Missouri colony was interested in the wedding on Wednesday of Miss Mildred Minor White, daughter of Mrs. Stapleton G. White of Louisville, Ky., to Maj. James Allen Lester, U. S. A., of St. Louis and Louisville, Ky., at the Church of the Incarnation, by the Rev. George W. Atkinson.

Former Senator and Mrs. Chauncey Depew of New York passed through Washington Tuesday on their way to Hot Springs, Va., where they will spend the month of July.

Secretary of State and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg have gone to Roslyn, Long Island, for a week-end visit with Clarence H. Mackay at his country estate.

Mrs. James M. Thomson, daughter of the late Senator and Mrs. Champ Clark, has gone to Asheville, N. C., with her husband, James M. Thompson, publisher of the New Orleans Item and Tribune, to attend the annual meeting there of the Southern Publishers' Association.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair and her daughter, Miss Ellen Blair, have sailed for Europe to visit the Princess Margaret Boncompagni in Paris. The Princess is the daughter of Mrs. William B. Draper, widow of the late Ambassador to Italy. Mrs. Draper was a St. Louisan by birth. The Princess is the god-child of Queen Dowager Margherita of Italy.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth McCalmont Wilson, a cousin of the late President, and daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Alfred McCalmont Wilson, to Lieut. Lionel Lewis Rowe, U. S. N., of New Albany, Ind., has been announced. The wedding will take place on July 27.

Among the Washingtonians who have followed the presidential trail to the north shore of New England for vacation purposes are Secretary of War John W. Weeks and Mrs. Weeks, who are in their country place in New Hampshire; Baron von Maltzan, the German Ambassador, and his wife; Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and Mrs. Holmes of the United States Supreme Court; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter and Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond.

Mr. and Mrs. B. von Brecht, Miss Virginia Hull von Brecht and Dick and B. von Brecht Jr. of St. Louis and Washington, have closed their apartment in the Roosevelt Hotel and sailed for an extended tour of Europe.

STRAINS OF VIOLIN CAUSE BEES TO HIVE

PIKEVILLE, Ky.—W. B. Ward reports a unique experience of "settling" or hiving bees while on a visit in Martin County.

Ward was in a house near an apiary conducted by a Dr. Fairchild, where he saw a great mass of bees in a swarm. Dr. Fairchild, desiring to see his bees settled, took up his violin and went to the enclosure surrounding his apiary. He fixed upon a place he thought sensible bees should come to rest, and scraping the bow across the strings of his violin sent the notes of "Sourwood Mountain" into the ambient atmosphere.

As the music of the mountain country dance tune reached the mass of honey gatherers, they drew together in mass formation and settled on an apple tree limb just above Dr. Fairchild's head. Dr. Fairchild played softly until finally the last bee had taken its place. He then laid aside his fiddle and bow for a bee-gum which he placed under the bees and raked them off into their new abode. He was not stung once and the bees apparently were happy in the gum.

CIVIC BODIES GIVE ACREAGE FOR CAMPS

PEORIA, Ill.—Civic clubs and factories in this city are contributing toward the improvement of 89 acres of hilly, wooded land near Mossville, which on July 4 will be dedicated as the summer camp of the Salvation Army.

From that day until some time in September hundreds of men, women and children, who might otherwise not have a real vacation, will be given the experiences of the vacationist who spends the summer at a resort. Plans have already been made for the entertainment of 500 persons, chiefly from Peoria.

A combination kitchen and dining room forms the center for the group of buildings. The Optimists Club of Peoria has donated one of the cottages.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

"Nature's Masterpiece"

There is no finer summer resort in the Midwest than Lake Geneva. No lake surpasses it in clearness or beauty. Nature abetted by mankind has created a beauty spot beyond description.

Hotels, from the finest hostelry to the modest family hotel. Restaurants that cater to the epicure, cafeterias that offer every enticement to a jaded palate and cozy little cafes that offer real home cooked meals are here. Whatever your desire may be Lake Geneva can gratify it.

Famous orchestras supply dance music, weekly band concerts, a splendid new golf course, municipal tennis courts, bathing beaches and three public parks, shady walks and bridal paths, trap shooting, fishing that is unbeatable, boating, sailing and every sport. You'll love Lake Geneva, it fascinates you and once you leave invariably it calls you back again.

ENGAGEMENTS AND WEDDINGS OF INTEREST

About 40 guests were present at the marriage of Miss Margaret Bristow and Lingurn S. Burkhead last week at the home of the bride's parents, 4229A South Grand boulevard, the Rev. Dr. Tadlock of the Centenary Methodist Church performing the ceremony. Miss Annie Puncheon sang "At Dawning," before the entrance of the bridal party. Miss Elaine Evans played the wedding march. Miss Dorothy Bristow attended her sister as maid of honor, and Fred Yeater was best man. The bride wore white pin-tucked georgette trimmed with lace and her veil was held in place with orange blossoms. She carried roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore Nile green taffeta and carried pink roses. After a wedding trip the couple will be at home at 4229A South Grand boulevard.

Announcement has been made by Mrs. Elizabeth McLaughlin of 3923 South Broadway of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mildred, and Louis L. Henne, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Henne, of 3844 Gravois avenue. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Josephine Cohn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cohn, of 7112 Alamo avenue, will become the bride this evening of Barnett D. Bearman. The ceremony will be performed in the garden of the home of Mrs. David D. Israel, a sister of the bridegroom, at Clayton and Lay roads. Mrs. Arthur B. Nathan, sister of the bride, will be matron of honor; another sister, Miss Anne Cohn, will be maid of honor and Miss Cecil Bronstein, bridesmaid. Joe W. Kofman will be best man, and Robert Mathis, groomsman. Mr. Bearman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Bearman of Maryland terrace. After a short honeymoon trip the couple will be at home at the Georgian Court apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gast announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Frances Margaret Hall, and Isadore Abrams of the Westgate Hotel. The marriage will take place in the early fall. Miss Hall makes her home at 1185 Hamilton avenue.

The marriage of Miss Isabelle Whitney, daughter of Mrs. B. Whitney of 5906 North Market street, and Albert R. Wallack of Fenton, Mo., took place Tuesday morning, June 23 at Notre Dame de Lourdes Church, Father Brady officiating. The couple were attended by Miss Marie Hogan and George Wallack. The bride wore white Canton crepe trimmed with lace and orange blossoms and carried roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid was gowned in orchid georgette trimmed with cream lace and pearls and a picture hat. She carried sunburst roses. The bride's nieces, Marye Isabel Le Matty and Marye Agnes Elliott of Berkeley, Cal., in pink and blue frocks with maline hats to match, were flower girls. Following the ceremony the bridal party and 40 guests attended breakfast at the Hamilton Hotel. The couple have gone to Sioux City, Ia., to reside.

The wedding of Miss Anne Koplovitz of 6609 Washington boulevard and Adolph Iskowitz of Madison, Ill., took place Sunday evening in the rose parlor of the Buckingham Hotel. A bridal supper for 20 guests preceded the ceremony. Mrs. Fae Fierstine, a sister of the bride was matron of honor, and Misses Charlotte Koplovitz and Lillian Landau, bridesmaids. Victor Fierstine gave the bride in marriage and Joe and Horatio Bernard were groomsmen. A reception followed. The couple will sail on the Berengeria for a honeymoon in Europe and will return Oct. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pieske of Des Peres, Mo., have announced that the marriage of their daughter, Miss Alma Lydia, to Rev. Paul Affeldt of Bloomington, Neb., will take place at the Lutheran Orphans' Home, Manchester and Ballas roads this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. C. A. Affeldt of Elgin, Minn., father of the groom. The couple will leave soon after the wedding for an extended honeymoon trip through Minnesota and will be at home at Bloomington, Neb., after Aug. 30.

A wedding which took place Monday at 5 o'clock at the Centenary M. E. Church, was that of Mrs. Lalla Byrd Atkinson, daughter of Mrs. M. M. Byrd of Festus, Mo., and Albert S. Lehr, by Dr. Charles W. Tadlock. Mrs. Atkinson is a singer, having receiver her education in St. Louis, Chicago and New York. Lehr is the editor of the Missouri School Journal with headquarters at Jefferson City, to which place he will take his bride after a month's trip in the West.

Miss Hilda Blitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Blitz of Morrison place, announced her engagement to Milton Morris of Memphis, Mo., at a luncheon Sunday afternoon, June 28, at the Gatesworth Hotel. Fourteen guests were present.

A "Queen of Sharpshooters."

BERLIN, July 4.—For the first time in German history the Schuetzenverein, or Sharpshooters' Club, will have a queen instead of a king as its head for the ensuing year. At the annual sharpshooting contests at the Ringenwald Club, Frau Koeppen, wife of a Junker estate owner, scored the highest number of points and thereby earned the right to the title "Queen of the Sharpshooters."

FOOTWEAR that gives no thought to style if frumpy.
FOOTWEAR that fails to provide comfort is "impossible".
IN ADAPTO Shoes style and comfort are given an equal chance!

ADAPTO SHOES
for STOUT WOMEN

Sometimes a patron asks, "Just what do you mean by 'shoes made especially for stout women'?" This: Shoes that fit the heel snugly as well as accommodate the length and width of the foot; shoes that give the foot arch the added support made necessary by greater body-weight; shoes that in addition to these fundamental, comfort features, are good-looking and stylish—in appreciation of the fact that the stout woman more generally than others, perhaps, is careful of her good appearance.

ADAPTO footwear is available in all sizes up to 11, width AAA to EEE

Our Foot Specialist

—upon request, gives a free foot examination to all ADAPTO Shoe wearers, and to those who suffer with their feet.

SAINT LOUIS DRUGGISTS UNABLE TO SUPPLY DEMAND FOR HERB JUICE

Local Wholesale Drug Houses' Stock Entirely Exhausted with Many Orders on File. Retail Druggists Report Sensational Sales. Hundreds Benefited. Many Prominent Citizens Testify to the Marvelous Cleansing, Strengthening and Relieving Power of Herb Juice.

Since the introduction of Herb Juice in Saint Louis only a few months ago, thousands of citizens have been benefited. People from all walks of life are in highest praise of this great nature remedy, and are voluntarily coming forward with statements telling of the wonderful results they have obtained from the use of Herb Juice, that their friends may read and profit by their experience. Never has the demand been so great for any medicine as it has been for Herb Juice. The demand in Saint Louis has increased so rapidly that the local druggists have been unable to meet it.

J. S. Merrell & Co., wholesale druggist, stock has been entirely wiped out, and practically every retail druggist in the city has been unable to obtain a supply. Hundreds of customers who called at Judge & Dolph Drug Store, 514 Washington Avenue, headquarters for Herb Juice, late Saturday afternoon and evening, were turned away unable to secure this wonderful medicine, as the Herb Juice man's large stock was completely exhausted Saturday afternoon owing to the increased demand for this famous medicine. The manufacturers of Herb Juice have simply been unable to supply the enormous inflow of orders which they have been receiving for the past thirty days. Nothwithstanding the fact that they have greatly increased the output and are working day and night filling orders. Never before in the history of Saint Louis has any medicine accomplished such wonderful results and the demand been so great as it has been for Herb Juice. Not only has this unprecedented demand been in Saint Louis, but in every other city where Herb Juice has been introduced. Daily testimonials are appearing in the columns of this and other Saint Louis papers from the grateful users of Herb Juice, and many who had given up hope of ever being well again have been benefited and relieved, and proclaiming Herb Juice to be the greatest medicine they have ever used.

The Herb Juice man wishes to apologize to those who had to be disappointedly turned away Saturday and promises to have a good supply on hand about the middle of the week. Watch the papers for the announcement of the arrival of Herb Juice. It would pay those who could come to see the Herb Juice man and place their orders Monday or the first part of the week, because this shipment will be limited.

The manufacturers of Herb Juice also wish to announce that they will have a good supply on hand to be distributed through J. S. Merrell & Co., and other wholesale druggists in Saint Louis in a very few days.

Hundreds are now calling daily to see the Herb Juice Man, who has established headquarters at Judge & Dolph Drug Co., 514 Washington Ave., giving statements for publication, and praising Herb Juice, that their friends may be induced to try the great remedy which is relieving so many sufferers in St. Louis.

COUNTRY VACATIONS REVIVE ENERGIES

Conserve Resources of Children Is Plea of Parent-Teacher Head.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Vacations for school children should be planned so that the child will see the country as well as the city, according to a letter prepared by Mrs. T. M. Kilbride, president of the Illinois Council of Parent-Teacher Associations.

"Vacation is here," Mrs. Kilbride's message reads. "To many that means dissipation of energies; to others it means conservation of resources.

"All parents should ask themselves 'What will increase my child's resources so that he will return to school in better condition than he quit in June?'."

Mrs. Kilbride suggests that his vacation should be planned so that the child will see the country as well as the city. A child cannot go very far wrong if he has lived a goodly portion of his youth close to nature and nature's God. Strike the balance.

Best Routes.

The best route from St. Louis is via Crystal City, De Soto, Potosi, Belleview, Ironton, Glover, Lesterville and Centerville, in Reynolds County, then south on No. 21 through Ellington to Garwood, where No. 16 can be picked up and followed through Van Buren, in Carter County, to Winona. At Winona, the motorist can turn north on No. 19 through Eminence to Round Spring. Dent County may be reached by going to Rolla, then south on No. 7 to Licking, then northeast to Salem.

The roads are fast concrete and gravel from St. Louis to Potosi. There is a good four-mile detour on No. 21 from Potosi to Belleview, and gravel the rest of the way through Ironton to Glover, Lesterville and Centerville. Between Lesterville and Centerville it is necessary to ford several small streams and there is a bridge of timbers, with runways protected by upended planks, over the east 18 miles of No. 21 from Ellington fork of Black River. Leaving Centerville it is necessary to detour for 17 miles over a marked road that is rough in places, but traverses a picturesque country. This stretch is expected to be finished within the next three months. The to Farwood, is splendidly finished gravel road, and the scenery is beautiful.

From Poplar Bluff, one can run north of No. 23 (the Poplar Bluff-Fredericktown highway) to Sylvia, and there turn west over a finished gravel State highway to Piedmont, then north over a good gravel county road to Des Arc, then over a sand and dirt detour to Annapolis, whence there is a splendid State gravel highway to Glover and No. 21. Incidentally, the stretch between Des Arc and Annapolis should be completed within 30 days.

From Ste. Genevieve, one can motor over No. 68 to Farmington and thence to Arcadia and Ironton via Doe Run to Ironton, there picking up No. 21. From Cape Girardeau, one can go over No. 9 to Fredericktown, and thence to Ironton on No. 70.

From Cairo, the route should be west to Poplar Bluff over No. 16, then north over the route described above.

Reynolds Has a "Shut-in."

Possibly the most interesting sight in Reynolds County is the "Shut-in" (not the "Shut-in" near Arcadia and Like Killarney). The Reynolds County "Shut-in" is near Lesterville. Few people in Reynolds County have visited it. Few know of its beauty, although virtually everyone has heard of the place and know it is "somewhere in the mountains." While the canyon is difficult to reach, the walk of a mile and a half after driving an automobile through the creek bottoms for two miles is well worth the time of anyone.

Deep between two mountains, the "Shut-in" is hemmed in by cliffs. A small stream flows into the canyon from a small crevice, the only opening to be found, then disappears into a sand bed. Giant boulders extend above the dark bed of water. The water in "Shut-in" Canyon is warm and nearly black. A tradition is that Indians came from miles around to get water from the canyon, believing it had unusual power to heal wounds. There are many images on the rocks around the canyon. Some of the rocks have almost per-

What is its greatest feature?

"Roominess!"—said the Public

Roominess! Rear seat passengers leave the Jewett Coach without disturbing those in front.

Doors 36 in. wide permit easy access to both front and rear seats.

When we first exhibited Jewett Coach to the public, we knew its many advanced features of design.

We wondered which of these features would take most. And we found out—immediately!

Everyone who sees this Coach says—

"My! How Roomy."

Jewett realized the need for a roomy Coach—a Coach that would carry five grown-ups—with leg room, foot room, and seat room to spare.

So Jewett built it—the finest Coach ever designed.

And that's not all. Jewett knew the need for a quality Coach—a Coach of rugged construction at moderate price. Jewett did not sacrifice quality to achieve so remarkable a price ($1260). This newly-proportioned, roomy Coach body is constructed like a sedan. Of the best materials money can buy. The finest workmanship we know anything about. It's a brand of construction that means years of constant service.

And the great Jewett chassis! Unchanged—in the slightest degree. The same powerful Jewett motor, high-pressure oiled and counterbalanced to utmost smoothness—long-life—economy.

And the result—the greatest Jewett ever built!

And What a Beauty!

You'll realize this car's finished beauty only when you see it. Double belt moulding—ball back—and brilliant coloring give you a combination of appearance features found only in costliest cars. Jewett Coach has them at $1260.

And Jewett Coach will outperform any car within $500 of its price.

Roominess? Yes—and far more than that. Quality construction! Beauty of line and color! Power that talks! That is what you buy in Jewett Coach at $1260. Let us call and give you a thorough demonstration.

NEW ILLINOIS LAW TO END ROAD RIGHT OF WAY HOLDUPS

Important Legislation, Designed to Hasten Construction of Highways, Signed by Governor.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, July 4.—Several important bills affecting the highway system of Illinois have become laws after being signed by Gov. Small. They had been passed by the Legislature in the final days of the session.

Two bills appropriating a total of $1,300,000 were among those approved. One gives money to the State Division of Highways to close gaps through towns on the $60,000,000 system. Of that amount, $300,000 is for refunds for roads already constructed, and the remainder is for gaps which still must be paved.

Another important piece of road legislation is a bill submitted by Representative A. Otis Arnold of Quincy, empowering the Highway Division to select any street it wishes through a municipality to connect State roads. This will allow the State to take any street it wants, and will prevent right of way disputes from delaying important road work.

With $1,000,000 at its disposal to close gaps, the Division will be enabled to pave any street through a town it wishes, without the consent of the municipality.

This means that State Highway No. 2, which runs north from Cairo through the center of the State to the Wisconsin line, can be paved throughout. Hitherto all efforts to effect a compromise between warring factions whereby gaps in No. 2 in De Witt County could be paved have failed. The Highway Division now can go ahead and complete this road—one of the most important in the Middle West.

No work will be started on the $100,000,000 bond issue system this year, according to Frank Sheets, director of the division. There are a great many details of the $60,000,000 system to be finished, and he wants to get the entire system cleared up before starting on the second extensive program.

CINCINNATI-ST. LOUIS RECORD IS CLAIMED BY ST. LOUISAN

E. A. Benish, the St. Louis restaurant owner, claims to hold the record for automobile time between Cincinati and St. Louis. Benish, who drives a Studebaker car, recently motored to Cincinnati. He learned at Cincinnati that he must get to St. Louis quickly because of a business deal. Leaving Cincinnati at 5:30 a. m. and driving through Dayton and Indianapolis, he reached St. Louis at 8 p. m. Out of this driving time there was taken 30 minutes for luncheon and about the same time for oil, water and gasoline.

GENERAL MOTORS SALES.

Sales of General Motors cars to consumers in May totaled 87,531 cars and trucks, compared with 84,715 in May, 1924. Sales of cars and trucks to dealers by the manufacturing divisions of General Motors in May totaled 77,313, compared with 45,965 in May, 1924.

ADDS HUGE FOUNDRIES.

To provide closer control of quality in castings and to unite its production processes in one plant, the Cadillac Motor Car Co has invested $2,250,000 in new foundries and new foundry equipment. At the company's main plant in Detroit, the new buildings cover seven acres.

Raft of railroad ties descending Meramec River, photographed by Durant four party from bridge between Grubville and St. Clair.

POTOSI-STEELVILLE TRIP RARELY PRETTY

Durant Four Party Travels Country of Marked Scenic Charm.

By Spence.

IF there be any 40-mile stretch within 100 miles of the St. Louis city limits that is more lovely than the road from Potosi to Steelville, Mo., State highway No. 62, the writer has failed to see it in thousands of miles of motoring through Eastern Missouri. Traveling it last Saturday in a Durant touring car with Howard Shelton, regional salesmanager for Durant Motors; George C. Hamilton, assistant salesmanager, and another newspaperman, he found it generally good going, mostly gravel, and practicable for any reasonably good driver.

How Best to Make Trip.

It would be better for St. Louisans to go via Crystal City, Hematite, De Soto and Potosi to Steelville and return via Cuba, St. James, Belle, Owensville, Rosebud, Union, Gray's Summit and the Manchester road (a total of 282 miles) than to follow the route used by the Durant party, which aggregated 243.2 miles. There are two good reasons for this. First, the Potosi-Steelville road has some narorw sections. If many motorists travel it both ways, the result will be dusty going and continued watchfulness for places to turn out for approaching machines. Also, the Grubville-St. Clair section of the Durant party's route is rough and hard on tires, and Highway No. 14 is likely to be closed off and on this summer between St. Clair and Bourbon, because of construction.

One can make good time over fine concrete and gravel roads via Crystal City to Potosi, then will want to drive more slowly to Steelville. The roads from Steelville through Cuba, St. James, Owensville and Union are good and fast in dry weather, but have many miles of dirt, as has No. 14 between Stanton and Bourbon. Drivers who care little about roads or tires so long as they find attractive scenery will do well to go via De Soto and Potosi to Steelville, the return via St. James and Owensville to Union, then follow No. 14 to St. Clair and reverse the Durant party's route from St. Clair via Grubville and Valley Park to St. Louis.

Attractive Detour Road.

The route used Saturday goes out Big Bend road to Meramec Highlands, then straight ahead down the hill, eventually joining the Quinette road to Valley Park, where the Durant's speedometer was reset at 00.0 at the bridge, 21.3 miles from the starting point. Crossing the flat beyond the bridge, Shelton swung the car right on the Antire road, turning left at 01.6 on a dirt and gravel road marked as a detour to highway No. 30 (also the Gravois road). This road should be travelable when wet. It traverses a beautiful countryside with a number of grades, and is the only practicable detour for motorists wishing to reach points on the Gravois road beyond Fenton. At 04.8, right. At 06.3, left with detour sign. A tenth of a mile farther on is a short, but trying upgrade that took Shelton by surprise, so that the Durant had to show real pulling power to roll over it in high onto the Gravois road.

From this point there is an unusually fine gravel road, except for a dirt fill at House Springs, to a point half a mile beyond Cedar Hill where highway No. 30 turns off to the right, the Gravois road continuing straight on to Morse's Mill.

He Feared no Foe.

The Durant party swung right on No. 30 as far as 29.8, where they went straight on through, leaving No. 30 and continuing through Grubville on a narrow road that was made up of alternate stretches of dirt and gravel, with rough spots, rutted places and considerable good going, with now and then a rock section and one series of low ledges.

Once a rabbit darted across the road, sat alertly beside a clump of weeds till the car was within 10 feet of him, then vanished into the bushes with a flirt of white. Presently a brace of quail flashed up from the dust, and in a few minutes a skunk, sleek as a petted house cat, sauntered unconcernedly across the road, paying no heed to the onrushing car, serenely conscious that no one would care to molest him.

At 36.6, left with an "Outlook" sign, then past a white church on the right. A weasel slipped through the grass, so intent on following a trail that he failed to see or hear the car as it coasted silently down a grade. At 35.7, right with an "Outlook" sign. Then a mile and a half of rail fence, shutting off a tract of scrub oaks and second-growth oaks, and solid seemingly as when built, despite the moss and gray film of years.

Back 100 Years.

A ford through a crystal clear stream at 37.4, then so stiff a pull up a dirt hill that the Durant seemed to settle down and pull like a mule with its ears laid back. At 38.0, a bump over a culvert. At 39.2, right with an "Outlook" sign. At 40.4, a fine camp or picnic place, then a stretch of woods and at 42.4 a fine view over densely wooded broken country.

Presently a man cradling oats with long, slow sweeps of the scythe, half a dozen children tagging along behind him and gathering like a little flock of chattering magpies at sight of the car. Then a bank thick grown with sumac and vines, splotched with white clusters of elderberry blossoms, the black and yellow of oxheart daisies and gorgeous purple blooms. At 44.8, the road debouches on the bank of the Meramec River, with high bluffs overhanging it.

As the car was crossing the bridge a long, snaky something poked its nose around a bend upstream—a 1000-foot raft of railroad ties, guided on its writhing way down the river by two men armed with poles, who continually walked up and down over the ties, keeping it in the current, thrusting it clear whenever there was danger of its running aground.

Beyond the bridge, the road traverses a beautiful flat, then rambles up and on until at 48.1 there is a fine vista from a ridge high above the river valley.

No. 14 Under Construction.

At 51.5 the Durant party swung left in St. Clair on Highway No. 14. The car, well warmed into its work, was purring along singing the song of perfect ignition. There was a very bad stretch at 59.9 and a warning from a road gang that the road had been closed to Sullivan and that motorists should use the Union-Owensville-St. James detour. However, they let the car through and the party had rough going over dirt fills and detours. From Leasburg, there was good gravel to Cuba. Running a short distance beyond Cuba, Shelton swung the Durant left into Highway No. 19 for Steelville.

The road is fine, wide gravel, fast as a racecourse, through a sharply rolling country, generally well grown with trees and with spacious views from the ridges. At 96.1, the road narrows and becomes dirt, then presently is gravel again. At 98.2, a bridge over the Meramec River, then a sweep upward on graceful curves over which the car rolled with rapidly increasing speed. Soon a steep grade down into Steelville, 101.2 miles from Valley Park.

Into a Land of Beauty.

The Durant party reset the speedometer at 00.0 where highway No. 68 leaves No. 21 in Steelville, No. 62 starts as a good gravel road. At 00.9, it runs alongside a clear stream for a quarter mile, then fords the creek which is about six inches deep and clear and cool over a gravel bottom. On through a valley, and at 01.7, along the base of a hill with trees hanging heavily over the road. Here was the best looking corn seen since leaving St. Louis.

Then came a long upgrade, with some level stretches and one half-mile pitch which gave the Durant a chance to show how it really could pull in high.

By 03.6, the road is well into the uplands, in a country of oaks and rail fences, log houses and now and then a cabin roofed and sided with shakes. The road here is well nigh perfect gravel.

The "Bob White" of the quail was heard time and again, and frequently the birds were seen running jerkily along the dusty side roads that meander off into the woods. A cardinal bird darted from bush to bush, a flame of crimson against the tender green. A rabbit skipped from under a bush, halted with a ludicrous plowing of stiffly outthrust feet in the dust, then bounded high with feet spraddled in all four directions and, landing sprawled in the dirt, whisked around a shrub and was gone.

There are camping places aplenty—that is, if one has been forethoughted and is carrying water. The road continues fine gravel on the ridges, at times smooth as a boulevard. One feels a buoyancy of body and spirit such as is seldom experienced. It is a fine country—A country good to be alive in.

Shimmering Loveliness.

Down a hill, across a gravel flat, through the dry bed of a water course, then through a wooded flat and out on the brink of a 200-foot pool where Huzzah Creek broadens into a shallow, gravel-bottomed sheet of shimmering beauty. Upstream, the water lies mirror-smooth, gleaming where the sun rays impinge on the glimmering center, darkly cool and silent in the shadows cast by the overhanging bushes. Downstream it ripples softly over the lip of a semicircular line of stones and ledges perhaps eight inches high, then goes whispering over the riffles and around a bend. As the car rolled through the creek, following a sign's direction to keep close to a wire strung along the lip of the pool, thousands of minnows were disturbed and darted wildly from under the wheels.

Beyond the creek is more good gravel road, though narrow as it winds through an upland valley. Then came a stiff pull for the Durant on a shelf road high above a valley, up to a land of high airyness, of woods and ledges, of deep ravines with strangely variegated effects in light and shade in their cool depths.

By 12.3 the road is wider and well-nigh perfect gravel. To the left a deep valley is sensed rather than seen through the dense foliage. At 15.5, the road is over a hilltop. If it be possible the country grows prettier with every mile. There are sites for dry camps everywhere. Here and there piles of railroad ties [illegible] occasional flurries of woods activity. For a while the road is narrow and rougher, though there are plenty of places for turning out.

At 18.3, a pretty flat, [illegible] Courtois Creek, sparkling [illegible] glides between wide gravel [illegible] The ford passes over a corduroy bottom between two rows of [illegible] the stream being some 6 [illegible] deep and about 75 feet wide. OUTE TO TEXAS VIA TEXARKANA IS RECOMMENDED

Reports on Road Conditions Indicate This Is Best Way and Is Travelable in Wet Weather.

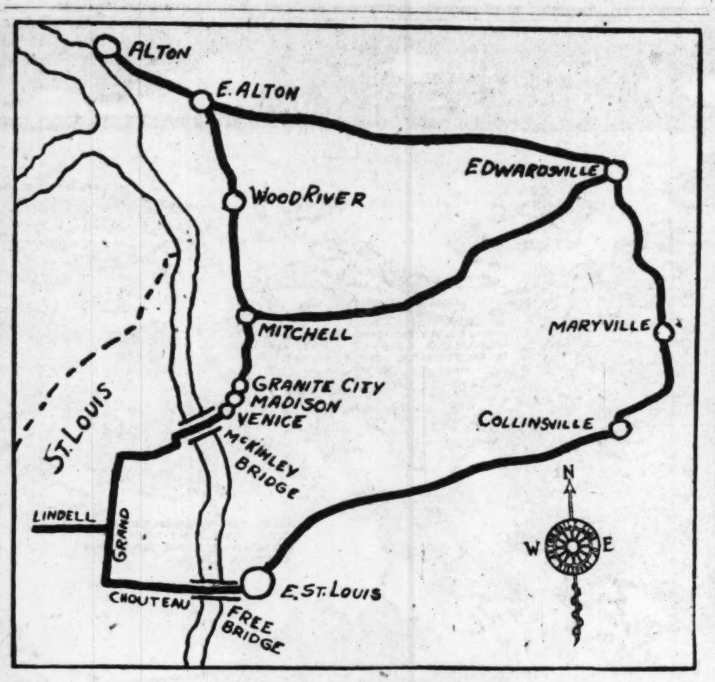
As a result of detailed reports road conditions, the Cairo-keston-Little Rock-Texarkana ute to Dallas and other Texas ies is now recommended. Overlapping reports, checked by eorge Drummond, head of the uring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri, indicate e following road condiitons on s route:

Concrete and gravel to Little ck, Ark., except 28 miles of dirt ad in Southeast Missouri and e stretch between Palestine and heatley in Arkansas. In wet eather, one can reduce the ount of dirt road traveled to a w miles by going from Sikeston t to Dexter, then south to echville, Ark., southeast to ytheville, and then following the gular route to Little Rock.

The road from Little Rock rough Hot Springs, Arkadelphia, rdon, Prescott, Emmet, Hope, lton, Homan and Mandeville to arkana is reported to be pavent and gravel in good condition, cept that between Gurdon and pe the road at times is somewhat rough.

From Texarkana through Maud, , and Douglasville to Mt. easant, is reported fair to good avel. There is a rough stretch at ltillo. From Mt. Vernon to Sulur Springs the road is reported ht gravel. Then there is gravel to Greenville, Drummond is informed, and from Greenville to Dallas, the reports state, the road is paved, except for a detour at Rovse City, which is mean when wet.

Edwardsville and Alton Trip Suggested for Sunday Afternoon



THE tour mapped above was outlined by George Drummond, head of the Touring Department of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and the Automobile Editor. It starts at the Free Bridge, is almost entirely over pavement, and is about 69 miles long. The distance can be reduced to 52 miles by returning from Edwardsville through Mitchell, instead of going on to Alton.

Crossing the Free Bridge, continue to the end of Tenth street, then turn left 200 feet in St. Clair avenue, then right into Ninth street, Collinsville road and Illinois State highway No. 11. Follow No. 11 to Collinsville and at the fork, just after crossing the trolley tracks, keep to the left on the concrete through Maryville to Edwardsville. Go straight ahead in Edwardsville to Highway No. 4 at Hillsboro avenue, turning left into Hillsboro avenue to its end at the courthouse, then swing right and follow local signs to Alton. Return on Highway No. 3 through Wood River, Mitchell, Granite City, Madison and Venice to the McKinley Bridge. Crossing the bridge, go through Salisbury and Palm to Grand boulevard.

It is 29 miles to Edwardsville and 40 miles back from that city via Alton. The alternative route from Edwardsville on No. 4 to Mitchell and then back is 23 miles.

ILLINOIS HIGHWAY NO. 12 RAPIDLY NEARS COMPLETION of the creek, then through the village of Berryman, prettily situated on a flat.

Illinois State highway No. 12, from East St. Louis to Lawrenceville and the Indiana line, is rapidly nearing completion. The bridge at Clay City has been opened to traffic. The only detour of any moment left is one of 3900 feet of dirt and two miles of gravel around contruction between Noble and Clay City.

Pictures Along the Road.

On through a narrow valley, with trees overhanging the road and casting shadows on the road as it winds along the base of a ridge. To the right the valley widens to a sweep of pastoral beauty. A parklike stretch alongside a brook. A little white school house, with a saddle horse tethered to a ring in one corner. Wonderful hill sides. A perfect gravel road.

At 21.5, a brook ford. An avenue of graceful trees. A dry watercourse winding off to the left through the trees. The white road dappled with sun spots and shadows. The air pleasantly cool under the green arches.

Then comes several more brook fords. At 25.3, a tiny, rock-bound pool, as cool and black under its three-foot cliffs as if it was a highland tarn at the base of a precipice. Off to the right, an old loghouse picturesquely set against a hillside.

The valley stretches on and on, mile after mile of pastoral scenes as attractive as any to be found in this part of the State. Here is a solid bank of elderberry blossoms 100 yards long. There the road winds through another narrow valley, with hillsides thickly wooded, pines mingling with the hardwood trees. A quarter of a mile of new rail fence. At 28.4, a short stretch of dirt road, then gravel again—fine going. At 31.4, a bridge over a clear creek. There are numerous grades, but the Durant made them all easily in high. At 35.5, another brook ford. A black hound, morosely independent, stalked across the road and up a path to a log cabin. At 36.0, a brook ford, and within a quarter mile four more. At 37.8, a shallow ford on a gravel bottom through a creek about 80 feet wide. Then, at 39.5, into Potosi and out again on highway No. 21—a fine gravel road via De Soto and Hematite to Crystal City and No. 9 back to St. Louis.

There were several miles of loose gravel on No. 21 Saturday, but they were rapidly being packed down by passing cars and were not dangerous. The Potosi-De Soto section of No. 21 offers much lovely scenery and a number of dry camping and picnicking places.

The speedometer registered 100.7 miles from Steelville at the Meramec River bridge on the Lemay Ferry road and 120.7 to the morning's starting point. As it was 21.4 from the starting place to the Valley Park bridge, and 101.2 from Valley Park to Steelville, the day's trip was 243.2 miles.

How the Durant Performed.

In the performance of every car on the road some one thing, of course, stands out. With the Durant on Saturday, this outstanding impression was one of strength and solidity of body. Instead of weaving continually as the car ran over ruts and rough stretches the body was firm, unyielding, cushioning on its springs as if bumps and jolts meant nothing to it. The only way the writer could account for this—and it seemed a most desirable quality—was that the tubular backbone which is a feature of every Durant-built car, does just what it is supposed to do, that is, adds greatly to the strength and rigidity of the body.

The car's road performance, as well as its acceleration on city streets, was A1 throughout. Not a weakness developed. Time and again on rough and rocky grades—the kind that mean poor traction for wheels—it hung on and went over the top in high when by every rule it should have been forced to finish in second. It held the road firmly, going around curves without undue side sway and wholly without lurching. It rode the bumps comfortably and in a fashion to insure touring comfort on long trips. It traveled sweetly and steadily at 35 to 40 and 45 miles an hour for long stretches, so that the writer can testify that it did not heat or falter when pushed. It made all the mean stretches on No. 14, between St. Clair and Bourbon, on high—no mean feat considering the character of the roadbed and the dodging of teams and road gangs. The writer specially noted that not once in the day's trip did the motor hesitate or show any sign of letting down in its steady output of power.

All these things, of course, such a car—with four-cylinder engine, having a four-bearing crankshaft and 3⅞-inch bore—should do. It should perform creditably. But, above and beyond these facts of performance, the Durant sticks in the writer's memory as a good car as a whole—not because of one or two features or selling points, but because the entire car seemed substantial, practical, sanely satisfactory.

Never Before a Value Like This

The Super-Six principle, exclusive to Hudson and Essex, is responsible for the largest selling 6-cylinder cars in the world, because it gives results in smooth, brilliant action, reliability and economy never attained by any other type.

This Essex, in all ways, is the finest ever built.

Easier riding and driving, more flexible in performance, handsomer in line and finish, it is also lower in price than ever before. Its success is simply the belief of buyers that it represents the utmost automobile value and satisfaction within hundreds of dollars of the price; and it proceeds entirely from what owners themselves say of Essex.

BUYERS AFRAID OF TEETH IN NEW INDIANA DRY LAW

Effect of Drastic Measure Is Already Felt After Little More Than Month of Enforcement.

ODOR AND WORD OF OFFICER ARE PROOF

Heavier Jail Sentences and Fines and Broader Interpretations of Search and Seizure Provided.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 4.—Indianapolis liquor law—"bone dry," they call it—today occupies the center of national interest in prohibition enforcement.

Its provisions are drastic—even revolutionary. The drys champion the law as ideal for the purpose for which it was created, and its proponents unhesitatingly declare that it will strip the liquor question of its hypocricy and place prohibition on its merits as a reality. On the other hand, many consider the law is imperialistic. They contend it flagrantly violates every article of the bill of rights and tears into the very heart of the Federal Constitution.

From the standpoint of the neutral observer, the law is producing results in a manner indicating that the State soon may experience an era of real prohibition in which few citizens will dare run the risk of arrest.

The inescapable facts in this case, taken from official Government records here, are these:

Indiana's new liquor law has been in effect slightly more than one month.

For the first five months of this year, during which time the old law was in force, a total of 370 arrests were made for prohibition violations. In the first month that the "bone-dry" law was operative, a total of 267 arrests were made for prohibition violations.

Sentences of those convicted under the old law during the first five months of 1925 totaled 161 years. Sentences of those convicted in the single month the new law has been in effect totaled 67 years.

Heavy Fines.

Total fines of liquor-law violators during the first five months of the current year under the old law were $63,617. Fines assessed violators of the new law in the first month of its existence aggregated $27,156.

A sample of the drastic manner in which the new law deals with what previously was a minor liquor offense follows:

Under the old law a person arrested on a public street or in a public place for drunkenness could be fined not less than $1 nor more than $5 for the first offense and also for the second offense. It was not until he committed the third offense that he could be sent to jail, and then only for a short time.

Jail Sentence.

Today arrest for intoxication carries a minimum fine of $10 and a maximum of $100, plus a jail sentence of from one month to six months. On only one condition is the Court empowered to show leniency and lessen this penalty—when the prisoner reveals the name of the person from whom he obtained the liquor.

The increase in arrests and convictions has been made possible by two sharp teeth in the new law. The biggest, keenest and sharpest of these two teeth is the provision against the mere possession of liquor.

Under the old law the possession of liquor was not punishable, the State Supreme Court having ruled that portion of it out on a legal technicality and declaring it unconstitutional. Thus, under the old Federal law, agents could raid a home only when there was evidence of a sale.

Under the new law, however, things are radically different. Possession constitutes a serious crime in itself and is punishable for the first and second offenses with a $100 to $500 fine and a jail sentence of from one to six months. A third offense is a felony and is punishable with a one to five year sentence.

May Raid Homes.

And also, under the new law Federal agents may enter and raid a suspected home on State search warrants to get evidence of possession, provided they are accompanied by State officers, or if they are deputized as Constables.

The officers now do not have to carry into court any of the liquor alleged to have been in the possession of an arrested person. Containers with the mere odor of liquor and the testimony of the officers that they smelled liquor are prima facie evidence, under the "bone-dry" law, of the operation of a "blind tiger."

The second sharp tooth in the new law is the provision making the purchaser of illicit liquor equally as guilty as the seller.

Under the new law a person receiving or buying liquor is liable to the same penalty imposed on the vendor. A $50 fine is mandatory, and a jail sentence is optional with the court.

Bootleggers Hit.

This, according to Federal enforcement agents, has delivered a staggering blow to the exclusive bootlegger catering to a high-class liquor trade, and has thoroughly frightened the patron of a regular bootlegger into sobriety and almost total abstention.

It can readily be seen how precarious it is for a person to patronize a "regular" bootlegger under the new law. In the first place, the liquor peddler wields a wicked club over the heads of his customers; a club made all-powerful because of the potential blackmailing dynamite it contains. Because under the law, the person whose name is found in a bootlegger's list of patrons faces a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

Thus far the major effect this provision of the new law has had on the situation has been to frighten away the habitual purchasers from their regular sources of supply, and this in turn has jolted the hitherto thriving liquor peddling industry to the point where today scores of bootleggers in Indiana have turned to less lucrative means of earning livelihoods.

Search Citizens.

Another drastic provision of the new law, serving as a concrete example of the thoroughness with which it deals with the liquor situation, makes a person carrying just a few drops in a bottle on his person liable to search.

This offense is classed as a misdemeanor and is punishable by a fine of from $100 to $500, in addition to a jail term of from 30 days to six months. On a third offense the penalty is one to two years' imprisonment and a fine of from $200 to $1000.

To briefly state the major provisions of the "bone-dry" law, any person in Indiana may be sent to jail and fined today for:

"Selling or Giving Away Intoxicating Liquor—Thirty days to six months and a fine of from $100 to $500.

Purchasing or Receiving Intoxicating Liquor—Thirty days to six months and a fine of from $100 to $500.

Possession of Intoxicating Liquor—Thirty days to six months and a fine of from $100 to $500.

Carrying Liquor on the Person—Thirty days to six months and a fine of from $100 to $500.

Transporting Liquor by Vehicle—One to two years' imprisonment and a maximum fine of $1000.

Possession of a Still or Its Use—One to five years and a maximum fine of $1000.

Manufacturing Liquor — Thirty days to six months and a fine of from $100 to $500.

Operating Motor Vehicle While Drunk—Thirty days to six months and maximum fine of $500; and the Court may prohibit the guilty person from driving any automobile for one year.

Advertising Any Formula, Ingredient, Apparatus for the Illegal Manufacture, Disposal or Transportation of Intoxicating Liquor—Ten days to 60 days and a fine of from $50 to $100.

Increased sentences and heavier fines are provided for second and third offenses in virtually all cases.

DOOR BELL SIGNAL TRAPPED MOLE THAT WRECKED A GARDEN

Missourian's Novel Device Puts End to Animal That Long Eluded Capture.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 4.—A. J. Brezeale has a nice garden and tends it carefully. But Brazeale also had a mole on his premises. Not that he purposely acquired the mole, but rather because the mole liked his garden and adopted Brezeale. The garden is planted to truck, such as beets, lettuce, beans, onions, tomatoes, peppers and beans. The loose ground made a nice rooting for the mole and it proceeded to root, thus rooting up plants of all kinds, which promptly died in the hot sunshine.

Brezeale tried many times to catch the mole. He watched for it diligently. He tramped down the "runs" and then waited for the mole to come along, but in vain. The mole still lived and continued to commit depredations in the garden. Finally, Brezeale hit upon a plan as novel as it proved to be effectual. Despairing of catching the mole in the rooting act, he connected his doorbell with the mole runs by wire and electric batteries, hoping that when the mole appeared he would get a signal. He followed his "hunch" and connected the bell with the mole run. Then he went to bed. In an hour the bell jingled. He jumped out of bed, grabbed a club and rushed to the other end of the wire, to find the mole passing by, and he clubbed it to death.

BURNED ON VISIT TO MINE

Illinois Experiences More Than Ordinary Thrill of Novice.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., July 4.—Wesley McAlvoy of Tamms has had all the coal mining he wants. He had never seen a coal mine before, but decided to go down into the Paulton mine for a visit with his uncle. He experienced all the thrills of the novice, the sensation of expected disaster that very rarely happens.

The "scare" had about all disappeared by the time McAlvoy and his relative had spent many hours touring the mine. Then there came a sudden flash of fire and a loud report from a gas pocket. Both men were carried from the mine by rescue parties, badly burned.

How Long, How Wide and Other Canal Facts

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, known to the Spanish as Cristobal Colon, visited the shores of Panama in 1502, on his last voyage in search of a strait between North and South America.

Balboa crossed the isthmus 100 miles south of the present canal route in 1513, the first European to see the Pacific ocean.

Four hundred years later, almost to the day, Sept. 26, 1913, took place the first test operation of Gatun locks.

Following the discovery of the Pacific, the search for the strait continued until 1529, when Alvaro de Saavedra, a companion of Balboa in the discovery of the Pacific, prepared the first plans for a canal.

From that time on the canal was an international hope; Spanish, French, British and Americans through the centuries made surveys and developed projects.

The actual work on the canal was begun by the French on Jan. 20, 1882, in excavation of Culebra cut. This company operated until 1889. A reorganized company continued operations until its rights and property were purchased by the United States June 28, 1902. The American occupation of the Canal Zone began on May 4, 1904, and in the tenth year after that the canal was opened.

The first ocean steamer passed through on Aug. 3, 1914, and on Aug. 15, 1914, the canal was opened to commerce.

The official and formal opening was proclaimed by the President on July 12, 1920.

The gold rush for California brought about the building of a railroad across the isthmus. On Jan. 27, 1855, the last rail was laid and the next day the first train passed from ocean to ocean.

LENGTH of canal, deep water to deep water, 43.84 nautical miles, about 50 statute miles.

Length of sea-level sections 12.76 nautical miles.

Length of sections of lakes and locks, 31.08 nautical miles.

NEW HIGHWAY ROUTE ELIMINATES CROSSINGS

Survey Through Gasconade County From Osage to Franklin Lines Completed by Engineers.

By the Associated Press.

BLAND, Mo., July 4.—Many changes from the present routing were made by surveyors of the Missouri Highway Commission who have just finished a survey through Gasconade County for the State Highway No. 28 from the Osage County line to the Franklin County line.

As now surveyed, Highway No. 28 runs along the south side of the Rock Island Railroad, thus eliminating all railroad crossings in Gasconade County. The present road crosses the railroad at Bland and three times between Bland and Owensville.

LISH PASTOR DENOUNCES UNDAY SERMONS BY RADIO

res Those Who Depend on Wireless for Services Are Neglecting Duty.

ondence of the Associated Press.

ADDLESTONE, Surrey, Eng., 4.—What he describes as "the habit of wireless" has been ly denounced by the Rev. A. ng, vicar of Addlestone, in parish magazine. "There is ger the packed church to we have been accustomed Lent," asserts the Vicar, the reason for this is the ybody who thinks he can God by lolling back in an m chair and listening by the beautiful singing of y at St. So-and-So's, or the al effects of the 'Bishop of Kamchatka,' is simply living in a fool's paradise. True worship demands sacrifice. People who are too lazy to go upstairs and put their things on and come to the House of God on God's day, are grossly neglecting their duty.

"We must face the fact that in wireless has been found another powerful recruit added to the phalanx of counter attractions which, in their various ways, continue to keep the people out of the churches."

The British Broadcasting Company, which controls most of the wireless entertainment in the London area, has recently declined to broadcast Sunday sermons, excepting on rare occasions, because of the objections of ministers that their congregations would be materially reduced if the practice was followed generally.

SCENTED AND WASHABLE FLOWERS MADE OF RUBBER

English Woman Makes Them and Hopes to Establish an Industry.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, July 4.—Roses made from rubber, but so scented and tinted that it is difficult to distinguish them from real flowers, are likely to form the subject of a new industry. A bouquet of these roses was presented to Princess Mary at the opening of the new premises of the Institute of Hygiene, in Portland-place, W. They were made by Mrs. McGarvie Munn of Athelstan terrace, Gloucester road, S. W., who hopes to establish workshops presently in which she will teach disabled ex-soldiers the art of making rubber flowers of all kinds.

Another bouquet of roses made by Mrs. Munn and accepted by the Queen as a birthday present has just been presented by her Majesty to the Hospital for Gentlewomen, Lisson Grove, W. Great interest in what is described as "this artistic and hygienic novelty" is expressed by the Rubber Growers' Association, who state that the roses made for the Queen "present the most natural effect that has yet been achieved in artificial flowers." The process of making rubber flowers is to be filmed shortly for public exhibition.

The flowers are washable, and therefore need not be allowed to harbor any dust. "The idea came to me while feeling the petals of a rose," said Mrs. Munn. "I realized then that rubber was nearest in texture to the real flower."

OLD-TIME FIDDLE PRAISED BY KENTUCKY PROFESSOR

Husky, Red-Faced, Jolly Players Need no Pedigree for Instrument.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., July 4.—The fiddle is praised by Gordon Wilson, associate professor of English at the Western Kentucky Normal School and Teachers' College.

While the violin is often pedigreed, like a Kentucky horse, he says, the fiddle needs no pedigree; it is abundantly able to take care of itself.

"The fiddle is not a violin, whatever their superficial resemblances," he says. "A violin is a high-brow instrument, one on which you take lessons under some famous musician at $2 a lesson and on which you learn to play Humoresque, Melody in F, Consolation and Mendelssohn's Spring Song.

"A fiddle is a folk instrument on which one plays by ear the traditional numbers which cannot and should not be written down in cold notes.

"The fiddler is husky, red-faced, jolly, with locks that are long only because it has not yet come time for his annual spring haircut."

The professor has been giving the breakdown ballads an airing, such summer ones as "Little Black Dog With a Green Toe Nail," the "Hogwallow Kentuckian," "Kitty Puss," "Whoa, Mule," and others, in addresses before the Kentucky Folklore Society and the Kentucky Educational Association.

STORMY PETREL OF SOUTH DAKOTA BEGINS SENTENCE

G. W. Egan, Four Times Beaten in Race for Governor, Loses Fight Against Two-Year Term.

TWICE DISBARRED AS A LAWYER

Polled 40,000 Votes After Being Convicted of Making False Fire Insurance Claims.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., July 4.—Four times an unsuccessful candidate for Governor of South Dakota, defeated once for United States Senator, losing out in an effort to be elected Mayor of Sioux Falls, and twice disbarred from practicing law in South Dakota, are high lights in the career of George W. Egan, who is in the State penitentiary in Sioux Falls to serve two years for making false claims for fire insurance.

For more than four years, following his second conviction, in April, 1921, he had made an effort through various courts to prevent execution of the sentence, the case finally reaching the United States Supreme Court on habeas corpus proceedings. On May 25 of this year the Federal Supreme Court decided against him. On May 28, 1910, he was first convicted on the charge of making false claims for fire insurance. The State Supreme Court, to which he had appealed, reversed the conviction and Egan was granted a new trial, which resulted in his second conviction.

Prosecuted Millionaire's Wife.

Egan's first appearance on the scene in South Dakota was in 1906, when interested persons engaged his services as special prosecutor to conduct the case against Mrs. Emma Kaufmann, wife of Moses Kaufmann, then known as the 'millionaire brewer" of Sioux Falls, who in June of that year was arrested on the charge of having been responsible for the death of Miss Agnes Polreis, her 16-year-old domestic.

Mrs. Kaufmann was alleged to have caused the death of the girl by a series of brutal acts, treating the girl in such a manner that she died in a Sioux Falls hospital, to which she was rushed when her serious condition became known.

Egan got a conviction at the first trial of the case, which attracted nation-wide attention. After some months, Mrs. Kaufmann was granted a new trial, which resulted in her being found guilty of simple assault and battery, and she was given her liberty after paying a fine of about $125. The strain of the charge against her is believed to have caused the death of her husband, Moses Kaufmann, who dropped dead some months after the second trial. Mrs. Kaufmann died several years after her husband.

After the two Kaufmann trials Egan took up his residence in Sioux Falls and engaged in the practice of law. His theatrical manner of conducting the first Kaufmann trial had attracted attention to himself and he did not lack for clients. In due time stories gained circulation that he had "fleeced" some of his clients, and later when these clients made the necessary affidavits disbarment proceedings were instituted against him. "After a hearing before the State Supreme Court that body disbarred him, finding him guilty of unprofessional conduct.

Wins Reinstatement.

After several years, Egan made an appeal to the State Supreme Court for reinstatement, and on his promise to conduct his law business in a professional manner in future he finally was reinstated. But it was not long until charges similar to those made in the first disbarment proceeding were made against him, and after a full hearing the Supreme Court disbarred him for the second time. This disbarment has since been in effect.

The manner in which he was able to sway people by his gifts of oratory was shown at the statewide primary election held in South Dakota in March, 1922, when he received a total of about 40,000 votes in his unsuccessful fight to win the Republican nomination for the office of Governor of South Dakota.

This marked the high tide of the vote received during the numerous times he made unsuccessful campaigns for the office of Governor and for United States Senator. At the time Egan received the 40,000 votes he was under sentence of two years in the Sioux Falls penitentiary following his first conviction of making false claims for fire insurance, and had made application to the State Supreme Court for a new trial, which afterward was granted, and which resulted in his again being convicted, after one of the most sensational trials ever held in the Circuit Court in Sioux Falls.

Some of the testimony at both his trials was to the effect that the building of his which was destroyed by fire was worth no more than $4000 or $5000, upon which he had fire insurance of $27,500.

ST. LOUISAN BACK FROM MOROCCO DESCRIBES WAR

W. H. Danforth Saw "Victory" Parade in Spain, Then Found Spanish Driven to Coast in Africa.

IN FRENCH REGION WHEN RIFF STRUCK

He and Wife Were in Fez When Abd-el-Krim Was Reported About to Capture City.

The war in Morocco against the Riff tribes, personal impressions of some of the personages figuring in the news from Southern Europe and Northern Africa and sidelights gained from an 8000-mile automobile tour of those regions are described by William H. Danforth of 17 Kingsbury place, who returned recently to St. Louis.

The Danforth party, which was made up of Danforth, president of the Ralston Purina Co., and Mrs. Danforth; Walker Buckner, vice president of the New York Life Insurance Co. of New York City, and Mrs. Buckner; and Gordon M. Philpott of the promotion department of the Ralston company, sailed from New York March 26 for a vacation tour. Upon their arrival in France they engaged the automobile, with a chauffeur and a courier, who spoke four languages, and set forth.

The closeups of the trip included officials of France, the King and Queen of Spain and Ambassador Moore, Gen. de Chambrun and his wife, the sister of Congressman Nicholas Longworth; Marshal Lyautey; the Sultan of Morocco and lesser dignitaries.

"The tour of North Africa began at Casa Blanca and included Marrakesh, the old capital of Morocco; Rabat, the present capital and Marshal Lyautey's headquarters, and the home of the Sultan; Fez, where they were entertained by Gen. and Mrs. de Chambrun, the Governor-General; Toza, fought over many times, where a French garrison is located; then across country to Oudja, through Algiers, Constantine, Biskra, the Garden of Allah; through the ruins of the ancient cities of Hippone, Lambesa and Dougga; and thence to Tunis and old Carthage.

The Spanish "Victory."

"We saw France at the beginning and also at the end of our trip," he related. "This included her coast line along the Atlantic, her beautiful Mediterranean shore line, to say nothing of Paris and her other attractive cities which will live long in our memories.

"Spain, like France, is as disturbed as a setting hen. We saw King Alfonso and his Queen twice, once at the bull fight at Seville and once at a fiesta at Jerez. We also saw the dictator, Primo de Rivera. When in Spain we were shown the 'victorious' Spanish soldiers returning from Morocco with bands playing and flags flying.

"But in Morocco we learned a different story—that the Riffs under Abd-el-Krim had actually driven the Spanish army back to the sea coast. Only a few soldiers and guns were left to guard the coast fortifications and the remainder of the army returned to Spain.

"Then came Gibraltar, where English guns command the entrance to the sea. Then to Africa. On the extreme northwest, on the Atlantic, is Tangier, an international city. To the east, along the Mediterranean, there is a territory stretching toward the south, about as big as the State of Massachusetts. This is that part of Morocco governed by Spain. The Riff mountains form the southern boundary and the warlike tribes seem to have things pretty much their own way.

Troops Marching to Battle.

"Immediately to the south of Spanish Morocco lies French Morocco, of which France was given the protectorate in 1912. From the moment we set foot in Morocco we heard rumblings of war. The Riffs, flushed with their success over the Spaniards, were filtering into French territory. Tempted by promises of rich spoils by Abd-el-Krim, the border tribes began flocking to his standard.

"When the wounded French soldiers were being brought into Fez and the report came that Abd-el-Krim was planning to cut the railroad and capture Fez our blood was at fever heat. There we were right on the spot. Permission was given to me to go to the front as an American war correspondent, but Mrs. Danforth rebelled. She had visions of those anxious days in 1918.

"We passed Senegalese, Soudanese and Algerian troops marching into the fray. The situation is complicated. It costs men and money to wage war and France has been drained of both. Rumors are rife that Egypt has emissaries with the Riffs and that many other foreigners, whose sympathies are not with France, are actively aiding Abd-el-Krim's campaign. A war like this, in my opinion, might be just the spark to set off another conflagration, as the Serbian incident did in 1914."

How To Go

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau: I want to go to Eureka and Pacific, Mo., by way of Manchester and Valley Park and the Antire road. How are conditions on these roads, and can they be made after rain?
WEST END SUBSCRIBER.

The Manchester road offers concrete to Manchester. The Manchester-Valley Park road is all-weather, as is the Antire road and on through to Pacific. On the whole, the Antire road is in better shape than in past years, but has some roughish spots. Rain should cause no trouble anywhere on this route.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau: What is the best route to Chicago? I hear that the route through Marshall and Danville is closed.
W. E. R.

The popular route to Chicago is over No. 4 from the McKinley Bridge through Edwardsville, Springfield, Bloomington and Joliet. A route that many prefer is only a few miles longer and in some ways offers better going. It goes over the Free Bridge, then follows No. 11 through Collinsville and Vandalia to Effingham, then No. 25 through Mattoon and Champaign to Kankakee, No. 17 to Momence and No. 1 to Chicago. Both routes are paved, but there are no bad spots reported on the Effingham-Kankakee such as exist at Staunton and Virden on No. 4. No. 11 is in fine condition through Marshall to the Indiana line, but No. 1 is being rebuilt in stretches north of Marshall and there is much detouring along it.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau: Can you tell me the best route from St. Louis to Delaware Water Gap and then to Montclair, N. J.?
C. R. T.

Cross the Free Bridge and follow Illinois Route No. 11 and the National Old Trails through Indianapolis, Dayton, Columbus, Wheeling and Uniontown to Hagerstown, Md. There turn north to Chambersburg, Pa., then go via Harrisburg, Lebanon, Reading, Bethlehem and Easton to Delaware Water Gap. From the Gap go via Hackettstown, Netcong, Kenvil and Dover to New Jersey highway No. 8, then turn south to Contclair.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau: Please tell me the best way to get to Charleston, W. Va. J. R. R.

Cross the Free Bridge and follow Illinois No. 11 and the National Old Trails to Indianapolis, then Indiana No. 39, which is reported smooth, fast gravel, southeast to Cincinnati. Then via Milford, Fayetteville, Hillsboro, Chillicothe, Waverly, Portsmouth, Ironton, Ashland and Huntington to Charleston.

CONCRETE OPEN ON NO. 2 TO MILE BEYOND WRIGHT CITY

Concrete pavement is now continuous from St. Louis to a point one mile west of Wright City on State Highway No. 2, the primary route through St. Charles and Wentzville to Kansas iCty. There is stil la six-mile gap where the old road is used from the end of the concrete to Warrenton, whence the concrete is open to the Montgomery County line.

LATEST NEWS ON DETOURS TO AND FROM GRAVOIS ROAD

The detour on the Gravois road over the Denny and Watson roads to Fenton will be in effect for a long time to come. The steel work has been erected on the new bridge across the Meramec River, but it will be six weeks to two months, probably, before the flooring is finished and the bridge opened. It is probable that the long fill across the flat to the new bridge will be allowed to settle for several weeks longer before work begins on laying on the concrete slab.

Motorists desirous of reaching points beyond Fenton on the Gravois road and State Highway No. 30 should go to Valley Park, cross the Meramec River, turn right into the Antire road after crossing the flat beyond the stream, and turn left again at 1.6 miles beyond the bridge into a country road marked a sa detour to Highway No. 30. This enters the Gravois road near High Ridge, whence the road is perfect gravel, except for a fill at House Springs, to a point half a mile beyond Cedar Hill, where No. 30 swings to the right for St. Clair. The Gravois road, as is generally known, continues straight ahead to Morse's Mill.

CRYSTAL CITY REMINDS THAT IT IS ON STATE HIGHWAY NO. 9

To the Automobile Editor Post-Dispatch.

CRYSTAL CITY, Mo., June 30.—We often wonder why, in all the routes and tours that are given in your column State Highway No. 9 is invariably referred to as going through Festus. No. 9 does not touch the limits of Festus at any place, but, on the contrary, passes through Crystal City almost in the center of the incorporated city. One would imagine that Crystal City was just a wide place in the road by reading the tour in Sunday's Post-Dispatch, when, in fact, it is a fine little city of nearly 2500 inhabitants and is the home of the largest industry in Jefferson County—and we could almost say in Southeast Missouri—Works No. 9 of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co., employing 1750 people and working 24 hours every day in the year. We doubt very much if there is an industry employing that many people at any one place in Southeast Missouri. Surely, with these facts before you, you can in the future give us just a little credit for being on the map.

DETROIT THINKS MERGER STORY IS TRUE.

RUMORS of mergers are again heard. Detroit believes there is reason to believe the one that involves absorption by General Motors of the Chicago Cab Manufacturing Co. Negotiations are said to be nearing a successful end. Chicago Cab is the world's largest taxicab manufacturer. In addition it produces trucks on a goodly scale and after taxicabs excells in making street car type busses and coaches and intercity buses. Its production is 11,000 taxicabs and trucks a year, 5000 motor buses and 1200 coaches. By acquiring it General Motors would become a bigger truck maker than it is now, the leading taxicab and coach maker and, in addition, would acquire a sleeve-valve motor, which it does not now make, inasmuch as Chicago Cab manufactures the R. & V. Knight motor for passenger cars and commercial vehicles.

He stopped at the Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributer, and at the Automobile Club of Missouri, which has undertaken to make all arrangements for gasoline, oil and keeping the way cleared from Kansas City to Terre Haute, Ind. Wade expects to pass through St. Louis on his trip July 21.

"CANNON BALL" BAKER BREAKS ALL RECORDS FOR ST. LOUIS-CHICAGO RUN

Drives Rickenbacker Eight 296.8 Miles in 5 Hours 48 Minutes, Beating Train Time 42 Minutes.

"Cannon Ball" Baker, driving one of the new Rickenbacker vertical eights with the larger engine, slipped into St. Louis Tuesday and and at 10:30 o'clock that night was checked out by two newspapermen from McKinley Bridge on an attempt to set a new St. Louis-Chicago record. At 4:12 a. m. central standard time the next morning, only 5 hours and 48 minutes after leaving St. Louis, he was checked into Chicago, at Ogden and Cicero avenues, by Chicago newspapermen. Thus, he not only beat the time of the fastest trains between the two cities by 42 minutes, but clipped an hour and 38 minutes off the old record, made by himself in a Cole eight in 1923. His average speed for the 296.8 miles recorded by his speedometer was 52.02 miles an hour.

Baker drove the No. 4 route through Edwardsville, Springfield, Bloomington, Pontiac and Joliet to Chicago. Despite traffic, rough streets, car tracks and grade crossings, he was in Springfield (108 miles away) in 2 hours and 10 minutes. On the long stretches north of Springfield he sent the Rickenbacher along for mile after mile at 80 miles an hour, attaining a maximum of 87 miles an hour.

He used the car with which a few days ago he drove from Cleveland to Detroit, a distance of 174.4 miles, in 2 hours and 49 minutes, averaging 61.9 miles an hour. The car has traveled only about 4000 miles, and Baker said here Tuesday that it would not be at its best until it had gone at least 10,000 miles farther.

Until recently, Baker has been driving a Rickenbacker six to record after record on the roads. One feat was to drive from New York to Los Angeles in 71 hours 33 minutes, actual driving time, averaging 43.4 miles an hour. He drove only after midnight on a number of successive nights.

FLORIDA PERMITS 45 MILES AN HOUR ON OPEN HIGHWAYS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 4.—Under the new law recently signed by Gov. Martin automobiles may travel Florida highways at a speed of 45 miles an hour in open country, 25 miles through residence districts, and 15 miles through business sections, in cars weighing less than 5000 pounds.

Traffic officers outside the corporate limits of villages, towns and cities must wear uniforms.

The reason given for the passing of the new law is that realty busses could not make rapid enough trips between cities, cross-state trips with sightseers and investors.

The narrowness of the older paved roads, the numbers of cattle which wander freely over them and the freedom with which liquor is obtained at all points in Florida make the new law somewhat of a menace to communities through which much travel is routed.

AJAX SHOWN IN CHICAGO.

The Ajax six was shown June 7 in Chicago. A check revealed that 3725 people inspected the Ajax six between 8 a. m. Sunday and midnight, and every day since the showroom has been thronged. The general opinion expressed on all sides was that the Ajax is a different automobile than ever before placed on the market. The chief concern seemed to be about deliveries, despite the fact that it was known that trade-ins are not to be considered for the first few hundred cars.

SE OF HIGH POWER FOR BETTER RECEPTION

A Chain of 50,000-Watt Stations to Cover Entire Country Is a Possibility.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Improved broadcast reception due to greater station power strengthens the possibility of increases from 5000 to 10,000 or even 20,000 watts next summer.

This is the view of Government officials and experts who have been watching the experiment approved by the Third National Radio Conference. So good have been results so far that the next radio conference, scheduled to meet in Washington this fall, very likely will take up the question of recommending even further increases in power.

Realizing the unalterable opposition of the public to anything bordering on monopoly of the air, commerce officials shy at discussions of increased station power or "super-power." During the last conference considerable opposition was expressed to higher power on the ground that it would enable a few stations to blanket the entire country.

Because of this opposition advocates of super-power or those favoring increase of power to 50,000 watts were forced to make concessions. The result was that the conference recommended that stations be permitted to increase their power to 5000 watts, if such increase did not result in undue interference. The increase was allowed in steps of 500 watts and when interference resulted an immediate decrease was compelled.

The power increase was an experiment pure and simple. The understanding clearly was that if better public service resulted, only would higher power be allowed.

Frank announcement was made at the conference by representatives of the Radio Corporation of America that they planned a chain of super-power stations of 50,000 watts to cover the entire country. Because of the 5000-watt limitation adopted by the conference, the Radio Corporation awaited the results of the experiment before going further with the project.

There is reason to believe that the Radio Corporation has not abandoned its plan for a chain of 50,000-watt station, but is merely waiting until the public is convinced that such a step would result in improved service. It is also known that other stations are preparing to increase their power above 5000 watts in the event permission is granted by the next radio conference.

It is safe to say that extreme caution will characterize the treatment of this subject by the next radio conference. In other words, the dominant consideration will be public service. Any scheme designed to give any particular group a monopoly will be immediately vetoed by Secretary Hoover, while, at the same time, the arbiter of radio does not desire to put any handicaps in the way of steady advancement of the art.

When the next conference meets, there will be available for its consideration considerable data on the results of the increase from 1000 to 5000 watts. In the opinion of experts, the experiment has been a complete success and approval will be urged for even further power increases.

Some data regarding even higher power may be available for the next conference. Two stations—KDKA Pittsburg and WGY Schenectady—hold experimental licenses which permit them to use almost unlimited power for experimental purposes. Each of these stations is equipped to use around 50,000 watts and there is every reason to believe that both of them have gone well above 20,000.

Yet, few complaints have reached the Department of Commerce against these stations. If WGY tends to blanket Schenectady which, according to reports, is [illegible]) the fans of that city are too loyal or too fond of their local station to protest.

The attitude of the public will determine whether higher power will be permitted. No station, experimental or otherwise, will be permitted to increase its power to a point where interference will result.

In the final analysis, one fact stands out. Stations located in congested centers, or in the heart of a city, will never be permitted too high power. If super-power comes about, it will be used only by stations located 20 or 30 miles from cities where only a few will have distant reception spoiled.

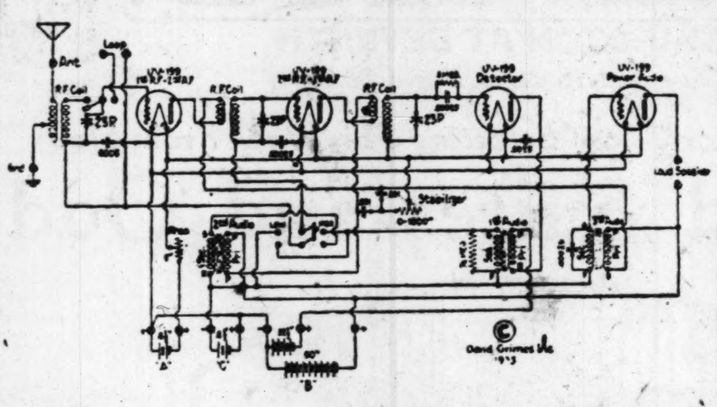
Hook-up of the New Grimes Set



The Grimes Inverse Duplex system of amplification has been well known for some time as an experimental circuit of unusual economy and efficiency with excellent tone qualities and selective tuning. Two new models of this receiver are now being placed on the market, one that uses three tubes and the other four, both of which incorporate the instruments and circuits recently perfected by the inventor. The drawing shows the new Grimes Inverse Duplex employing tuned radio frequency amplification and timed audio transformers. Several unique features will be noticed and it will also be found that this circuit differs very radically from the early adaptations of the Inverse Duplex.

Three tuning dials permit superselective tuning. The circuit employs two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification a vacuum tube detector, and three stages of transformer audio frequency amplification. A double-pole double throw switch is installed and is called the gear shift switch. This cuts out one audio stage when receiving nearby stations as the energy under these conditions is too much for the dry cell tube.

A stabilizer has been placed in the circuit to allow variations in the 199 tubes. The average run of 199 tubes varies considerably but the stabilizer shown in the drawing will take care of such variations. It will also be noted that by means of the loop switch a loop may be put on the set with very good results. The new Grimes receivers are enclosed in attractive two-tone and mahogany cabinets.

SHORT WAVE TESTS ON ARCTIC VOYAGE

Complete Equipment Expected to Keep Cruisers in Touch With American Stations.

PITTSBURG, July 4.—The most flexible and complete equipment ever carried into the North for short wave tests in that land of continuous summer daylight is aboard the "Arctic," the Canadian Government ship which left Quebec late in June for Etah, Greenland, and "points north" and which will carry on short wave experiments with Westinghouse station KDKA, Pittsburg.

Continuing last year's short wave experiments, when the "farthest north" reception record was established at Cape Sabine, within 11 degrees of the North Pole, through the co-operation of the Canadian Westinghouse Company, the Radio-telegraph Branch at Ottawa has arranged with the Westinghouse Company at East Pittsburg to transmit from KDKA to the "Arctic" every Monday and Friday night from 10:30 to 11:00 Eastern standard time, on the same wave length of 63 meters which was so successful in maintaining constant contact with the boat last year. It is also anticipated that KDKA will also make special test transmissions to the boat on 49 and 24½ meters.

There has recently been installed at Westinghouse Station WBZ, Springfield, Mass., a high power short wave transmitter working on 49 meters. Occasionally certain experiments may be carried on between the boat and this station.

Westinghouse Station KFKX, Hastings, Neb., in addition to its standard broadcast transmitter also has a high-power short wave transmitter working between 50 and 55 meters, and there is being constructed at Hastings a high-power transmitter to work on 20 meters. It is anticipated that possibly sometime during the trip tests will also be made through this station to the "Arctic."

Part of the time will be devoted to experiments between the boat and members of the American Radio Relay League.

For transmitting, the "Arctic" is equipped with three sets—

One standard ½ KW., 600 meter spark set.

One 1 KW., 2100 meter ICW set.

One 2 KW., Short Wave Experimental set.

This experimental set is equipped to work on wavelengths of from 40 up to and including 120 meters. It is with this latter set that the boat will maintain contact with members of the Canadian Branch of the American Radio Relay League.

For receiving, the boat will be equipped with two special Canadian Westinghouse Co. receivers, one for a range of 15 to 45 meters, and the other with a range of from 40 to 125 meters. In addition to these the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has loaned to the Radiotelegraph branch a special experimental short wave receiver with a range of 35 to 95 meters. This set was specially designed for experimental short wave reception for relaying in Australia, but in the meantime it is being loaned temporarily to the Dominion Government.

In addition there will be a standard Canadian Westinghouse Co. broadcasting receiver which will probably be installed in the dining salon to entertain the crew and also to see what results can be obtained on regular broadcast wavelengths.

The Government is also providing the boat with a long wave receiver to pick up the commercial telegraph stations.

The "Arctic," a stout vessel built especially for Polar region exploration, goes North every summer to provision the Royal Canadian Police posts in the Arctic circle, and make scientific and geographic observations. Robert M. Foster is the 1925 operator aboard the ship, the call letters of which are VDM.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

The Daven Type MU-20, a three-element vacuum tube designed by Daven engineers to increase the amplification of resistance coupled A. F. amplifiers, is one of the latest products to be introduced to radio fans. This new tube is said to have an amplification constant of 20. It is a six-volt ¼-ampere tube and is recommended by authorities for use in resistance coupled amplifiers where a plate coupling impedence of 100,000 ohms is employed. A plate voltage of 100 to 200 may be used with the MU-20 and satisfactory volume may be obtained with as low as 90 volts. The new tube also can be used as a detector, particularly in those circuits in which several stages of audio frequency amplification precede the detector. By using the Daven MU-20 in the first two stages of a resistance coupled amplifier and the usual commercial or power tube in the third stage adequate volume for any purpose may be obtained with unexcelled tone qualities, according to the manufacturer of these new tubes.

Two additional Fansteel products are included in the most recent bulletin received from the Fansteel Products Co. of Chicago. The Balkite trickle charger for charging radio A batteries is made especially for use with sets of relatively small A current requirements, dry cell sets and those having a small number of storage battery tubes. A low capacity storage battery of the sort commonly used with dry cell tubes and a trickle charger makes possible a very economical installation with sets using these tubes. This combination will furnish more current than is used by six dry cell tubes so that if the charger is used while the set is in operation it need not be used at any other time. A new model plate current supply set is made especially to serve sets of five tubes or less where four blocks of 22½-volt B batteries are recommended. The unit occupies approximately the same space as a 45-volt B battery, weighs 10 pounds and operates from 110-120 volt 60-cycle alternating current.

A nonradiating and nonoscillating circuit has been achieved, it is said, in the new De Forest F-5 type receiver that will be placed on the market next week. This circuit is a five-tube tuned radio frequency set of improved design with a wave length range of 220 to 550 meters. It consists of two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification with tuned input to the detector and two stages of transformer coupled audio frequency amplification. Chief R. A. Weagant of the De Forest company has departed from the usual practice in the design of the radio frequency transformers by using astatic radio frequency coils, which confine stray fields to a minimum, and in addition the set is equipped with new shock absorber sockets to prevent damage to the tubes under field conditions.

The F-5 portable is entirely self-inclosed, the antenna and ground wires, the new De Forest cone loud speaker which is said to give the most truthful reproduction, and all batteries are compactly housed in a shielded and durable Dupont case fitted with a permanent carrying handle of convenient form. The portable measures 15½ inches deep by 14 inches wide and 11 high when closed for carrying, and weighs but 37 pounds complete, with batteries. One hundred and fifty feet of flexible antenna wire are wound on a built-in aluminum reel of original design connected to the receiving circuit in addition to 15 feet of flexible ground wire conveniently assembled in a spring clip.

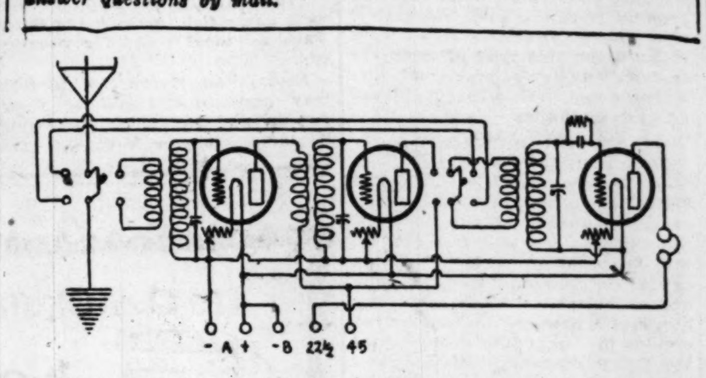
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.



Q. Please publish the proper way to shunt the aerial through the radio frequency coils to eliminate the radio frequency tubes when listening to local stations.

A. B.

A. One method of cutting out the radio frequency tubes is shown here. If your set does not use regeneration in the detector circuit it will only receive local stations when the radio frequency amplifiers are cut out. We believe that the best method of controlling amplification is by the proper regulation of the audio frequency amplifiers rather than by the method you suggest. Varying the amount of amplification in the audio frequency amplifiers gives a much better range of control and permits one to hear even distant stations when all of the audio amplifiers have been cut out. The method you have in mind gives either a great amount of amplification or very little.

Q. I have a three-tube set; cannot hear anything but local stations. I get plenty of whistles at various places on the dials, but when I turn the tickler back below the point of oscillation there is a profound silence. Can you give me a remedy?

T. E.

A. First go over the circuit carefully and make sure that the set is wired exactly according to specifications. Then if you find no trouble, test the various instruments for defects, including the A and B batteries and tubes. Also inspect the antenna and ground leads for a loose connection. From the information you give it appears that there is slight defect in your receiver, but it would be impossible to locate it without seeing the set. If you are not successful in finding the trouble take the set to a repair man. Most of the local radio dealers repair sets for a reasonable charge.

Q. In the June 21 edition of your paper you published a diagram of a three-tube regenerative receiver. If I use a 4-inch tube for the secondary of the vario coupler and a 3½-inch tube for the tickler instead of 3¼ and 3 inch tubes, how many turns of wire will be required for these two coils?

J. D.

A. The same as stated for the smaller tubes. The differences in the two sizes of tubes are very slight. If the .0005 mfd condenser across the secondary is found to be too large try a .00025 or a .00035 condenser.

Q. What studies would be included in a four-year radio course?

O. D.

A. That depends upon what you wish to work for. If you desire to become a radio operator or a radio repair man you might attend a trade school. There are a number of such schools in the country that offer courses that include studies of the elementary principles of electricity, storage and dry cells, motors and motor generators, sending and receiving sets, and other subjects that prepare one to become an operator of commercial stations or to enter the commercial field. The most thorough training is that obtainable at a college or university that prepares a student to become an engineer. Here the first two years' work consists of pre-engineering studies—mathematics, physics, chemistry, mechanical drawing and other minor courses. The last two years of a college course for a B. S. degree in electrical engineering consists of courses in advanced mathematics, mechanics, elements of electricity, direct current machinery, alternating current and other electrical studies. A student can complete his training in any particular branch of engineering by taking a fifth year's work and obtaining a master's degree. Only a few subjects are offered in radio during the regular four-year college course. To obtain a thorough knowledge of radio engineering it is best to take the fifth year's work. However, a B. S. degree in electrical engineering and a little extra study outside of school prepares a man very well for whatever branch he wishes to take up.

Keep Aerial From Wires.

In erecting an outdoor aerial, it is important to keep the wire well away from the other wires carrying current. It is dangerous to attach an aerial to a pole on which lightning transformers are mounted, or to run it over or under electric wires.

WHEN TO USE THE HEAVY DUTY BATTERY

Economy of Operation Is Assured by Proper Selection of Plate Current Unit.

Perhaps the easiest answer to the question, "Shall I buy a heavy-duty battery?" is, "If your set has four or more tubes and you can afford a heavy-duty battery, buy it, because it is always the cheapest in the long run." While the heavy-duty battery is probably not superior for very light radio plate-current service, it is certainly most economical for heavy drains.

With the almost universal demand for loud-speaker reception and the consequent production of multi-tube sets, a need arose for a source of "B" battery current capable of furnishing considerable current several hours daily over a period of months. The small batteries developed during the war for military use proved hopelessly inadequate for the steady daily use and comparatively heavy current drain to which the modern "B" battery is subjected. The heavy-duty battery represents a larger first cost, but, on the other hand, its ability to supply heavy current at a much lower cost per operating hour more than justifies its extra cost.

If the trend is so distinctly toward the extra large batteries, for what purpose are the smaller sizes made? The "large" battery (as distinguished from the extra large or heavy duty) certainly has its distinct field of usefulness. The battery compartments of many makes of radio receivers are of such a size that the extra large battery does not fit in them and consequently the large size must be used instead. But little by little radio manufacturers are realizing that economical upkeep helps to keep customers sold and they are consequently adapting their sets to the most economical source of plate current.

It would be a simple matter to prescribe the most economical battery if there were not so many variable factors concerned in their proper selection. First, there is the actual current drain of the set; second, the number of hours it is used each week; these two factors determine the most economical battery for your service. But even accurate knowledge of these two factors, difficult as it is to maintain a close check on them, does not take into consideration convenience as to size and shape and convenience because renewals are required only at very infrequent intervals.

In general, multi-tube sets are best served with the heavy-duty battery, even if equipped with the current saving "C" battery. The gain in cost per hour of operation favors the heavy duty battery even with sets drawing as little as 10 milli-amperes; the economy secured with the heavy-duty battery makes it decisively superior to smaller sizes. An indication of the added value of a heavy-duty battery over the "large" size is given through a comparison of their respective cubic dimensions. The "large" battery is about 175 cubic inches, while the heavy-duty is approximately 260 cubic inches. But its cost is not proportionately higher, because the labor involved in the manufacture of both large and heavy-duty batteries is approximately equal.

No radio station of the United States is licensed to use 300 and 450 meters except broadcasting stations.

SOPHOCLES' "ELECTRA" A KSD FEATURE

Broadcasting of Police Band From Post-Dispatch Roof Also on Week's Schedule.

A series of events to be broadcast during the next several weeks by KSD, which will begin Tuesday night, will be the performances presented on the stage at the new Garden Theater in University City. The production of "Electra," Sophocles' drama, with Margaret Anglin in the title role, will be the first of these performances, and will be sent out Tuesday night beginning at 8 o'clock. Electra will have a specially picked orchestra to present the music score, which was composed by Furst for the University of California production. Miss Anglin is bringing her own cast.

Next in interest in the week's schedule will be an open-air concert on the roof of the Post-Dispatch Building by the St. Louis Metropolitan Police Band. This band numbers 32 men, all of whom, with the exception of the director, Henry J. Falkenheiner, are active members of the police force of the city of St. Louis. Capt. Loepker is the manager.

The day for broadcasting the Statler Roof Garden dinner program has been changed from Tuesday to Friday for the remainder of the season. The hour will remain as before, 7 o'clock. On Wednesday night a special program of popular music by Silverman's dance orchestra will precede the usual concert at the Lyric Skydome, and on Saturday night the music from the Grand Central Theater will be sent out. A special concert of the week will be the orchestral and organ music and other features at the Grand Central Theater on Monday night. This will take the place of the usual Grand Central concert of Saturday, which was omitted last night to give place to the "Muster day" program from Washington, Chicago and New York.

STATION CALLS AND CHANGES

WTAM, at Cleveland, has been authorized to increase its power from 1500 watts to 2500 watts.

Call letters WSBC have been assigned to the new World Battery Co. at Chicago. WGBU is the call of the Lane Tech. High School at Chicago.

The Radio Entertainments, Inc., Station at South San Francisco, will soon open with the call KFWI.

Otto Baur of New York City has changed his call from WDBX to WOKO.

WHAT is the new call of Dr. G. W. Young's station in Minneapolis, in place of KEMT.

With the closing of KFBU at Laramie, Wyo., that State joins Nevada, neither having a single broadcaster on the air.

WJR, at Pontiac, Mich., will go on the air on Aug. 15, with 5000 watts power.

The metropolitan area of New York City, with 27 broadcasting establishments, is one of the most congested radio sections in the country.

What's New in Cars

RICKENBACKER EIGHT IS MADE MORE POWERFUL.

REDESIGNING many parts so that they are interchangeable between the six and the vertical eight chassis has permitted reductions in prices ranging from $200 to $600 on the Rickenbacker eight, yet at the same time the bore of the eight engine has been increased to 3¼ inches and the horsepower from 72 to 84. Thus the bore of the Rickenbacker eight is the same as that of the six. New bodies of more advanced design are mounted on the eight chassis, listing at factory as follows: Coach-brougham and sport phaeton, both $1995; coupe roadster, $2095; sedan, $2195. A new roadster at $1995 and a de luxe sedan at $2470 are to be added. A new line of de luxe eight models at $125 more than the standard models is now available. A new line of bodies, like those on the eight chassis, have been mounted on the Rickenbacker six, which mechanically is virtually unchanged. The price of the Rickenbacker six sedan has been cut to $1795 and of the six phaeton has been increased $100 to $1495. Rickenbacker coach-brougham and roadster prices are unchanged. A new coupe roadster is announced and a large sedan will be included in the six line.

PIERCE-ARROW COACH IS ANNOUNCED.

Offered in six choices of colors, the new Pierce-Arrow custom built coach, just announced publicly, was placed on display yesterday at the showrooms of the Western Automobile Co., local Pierce-Arrow representatives. The new coach body is hand-built at the Pierce-Arrow factory with a frame of northern white ash, seasoned for two years in the open. Thick aluminum plates, hand-hammered, are used for body panels. The coach makes the eighth body style now available in the Series 80 line, Pierce-Arrow's moderately priced car. It is priced at $3150 at Buffalo, close to the price of the Series 80 open cars. Built on the standard 130-inch Series 80 chassis, the low lines and windows of the coach make it appear even longer. With 32x5.77 balloon tires, chubby spoked military wheels, a smart trunk rack in the rear and the distinctive Pierce-Arrow front, the new coach is a worthy companion to the other members of the Series 80 line. The doors are 36 inches wide and permit entrance and exit without folding up the tilting front seats. The rear seat is 50 inches wide. Forty-two inches of space is found between the seats.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY SEDAN BY GARDNER.

Fifty years ago Russell E. Gardner laid the foundation for the Gardner Motor Co., Inc., in 1875. In commemoration, the Gardner Motor Co. announces the Gardner Fiftieth Anniversary sedan, a full-size, four-door sedan, on both the Gardner six and Gardner eight-in-line chassis. Factory prices are $1595 and $1995. Because Gardner cars are made in St. Louis, there is no freight charge on local deliveries. Both new models have full four-door sedan bodies, and are substantially built. The eight-in-line body is finished in two-tone Brewster green Duco, the six in moleskin Duco. Mohair upholstery is used for seat cushions and backs, the seat ends and inside door panels in Milais cloth of a harmonizing color. Standard equipment includes arm rests and dome light in the rear compartment, full plate-glass windows throughout, full-size balloon tires and inclosed four-wheel brakes. The Fiftieth Anniversary sedans are being featured in a special display by the Tilton-Gardner Motor Co., local Gardner distributer.

NEW STUDEBAKER BUS.

Production of the new Studebaker bus chassis in 158 and 184 in. wheelbase lengths will commence this month. The Big Six 3⅞x5 in. engine is used in both models. The shorter chassis is intended for bodies seating 12 to 15 passengers and is priced at $1785, while the longer model is for 15 to 20 passenger bodies and lists at $2150. Service brakes are of the hydraulic servo type furnished as optional equipment on Studebaker passenger cars, and six ply 34x7.3 in. balloon tires. Steel disc wheels are standard. Semi-elliptic springs, 2 in. wide, are used front and rear, the former being 38 in. and the latter 56 in. long.

GLOVE FABRIC BODIES USED BY APPERSON.

Glove-finish fabric over an expanded metal frame feature two new coupe models announced by the Apperson Automobile Co. The fabric bodies are being introduced in two series of sport coupes, one on the Straight-Away eight chassis and the other on the six. The coupes will be gray and black, with a choice of bright stripes. It is planned to extend the use of the new type body to other models in the Apperson line. It has been found that a damp cloth removes dust and grime from the fabric and that the use of a good dressing at specified intervals maintains the original freshness and attractiveness of the exterior. Advantages claimed for this type of body are freedom from paint problems, longer wear and greater beauty under adverse conditions.

MANY "ORPHAN" AUTOS.

More than 600,000 "orphan" automobiles are owned in the United States, according to C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, who describes an "orphan" car as one whose manufacturer has gone out of business. Vane says the buyer of a new car "cannot be too careful in demanding evidences of the financial stability of the company producing the automobile he contemplates owning. Results of a survey recently completed by the association show, Vane says, "the necessity of the buyer looking far beyond the car right under his eyes when he is in the market." He points out that 40 per cent of the farmers who own cars above the Ford, Chevrolet, Overland and Star price class own "orphan" cars, and he adds that most of the "orphans" were sold with inflated price lists or trading allowances to catch buyers seeking the best trade-in allowance.

INTERESTING TRIP TO REYNOLDS AND SHANNON COUNTIES

fect images of human heads, others seem to be images of babies.

At Reed Spring.

At Centerville, motorists are directed to Reed Spring. This spring is 2-10 of a mile east of Centerville, and operates a grist mill. The mill is owned by R. E. McKibbon, and the power developed furnished electric light service for Centerville and grinds corn. The mill has been used for more than 100 years and is believed to be the oldest one of the kind still in operation in America. Reed Spring is very beautiful. Different kinds of grass, moss and fungi give the spring a riot of colors when the sun rays strike it. The flow of Reed Spring is estimated at about 5,000,000 gallons daily.

Trip to Big Spring.

At Van Buren, a side trip to Big Spring, said to be the third largest spring in the world, is worth while. The route from Van Bureu to the spring is as follows: Set speedometer at Courthouse. Drive south across long bridge over Current River. Cross railroad at end of bridge, and 50 feet farther turn off Route No. 16 to left and follow main country road. At 0.5, cross railroad south of Chicopee Station; 1.0, road parallel with Current River; 3.5, cross railroad at Hanson spur, going to right of tracks; at 4.6, Big Spring River. The spring is 100 yards north of the bridge. The State recently purchased the spring and a large tract of land for a park. Workmen have constructed a walk along the mountain side to the spring. To the west and south of Big Spring, the rock wall extends hundreds of feet into the air. More than 380,000,000 gallons of water pour daily from under a bluff. This forms quite a stream that empties into Current River, 200 yards distant. Current River is well "seeded" with game fish, making Big Spring Park an ideal place for vacationists.

From Van Buren the motorist may return to St. Louis over Route No. 21 and No. 9, or go through Poplar Bluff over Route 16, turning north on No. 23 and No. 9, making a good week-end tour. On Route 16, he will encounter loose gravel from the Cane Creek bridge at short intervals for about 15 miles. The road is not difficult, however, and is being packed by the heavy traffic. Some of the road from a point nine miles out of Poplar Bluff is being graveled 20 miles and will not be completed until fall.

Big Spring is the nearest spring in the Ozarks of any size for St. Louis motorists. It is 56 miles from Poplar Bluff, while Greer Spring is 86 miles and is more difficult to reach. The distance from Poplar Bluff city limits on Route No. 16 to Van Bureu is 51.4 miles.

Pleasures to last a Lifetime

A PLEASANT motor trip over good roads will bring you from heat and humidity into the wonderful Rockies, where days are refreshing, nights are cool, and where the air always has a stimulating, pine-scented tang.

The Rocky Mountain region offers hundreds of places of unusual scenic beauty and interest from which to select your ideal vacation spot: Utah has Salt Lake City, Bryce Canyon, Cedar Breaks, Zion Canyon, Kiabab Forest and the north rim of the Grand Canyon; Denver is the gateway to 12 national parks, 32 national monuments, and 125 national forests; Great Falls, Montana, is known as the "Niagara of the West"; near Grand Junction, Colorado, is Grand Mesa National Forest, with its magnificent scenery and abundant big game.

Eagle Gate
Salt Lake City

Santa Fe and Albuquerque, in "The Land of Sun and Silence," still reflect the glories of early Spanish conquistadores. Pikes Peak stands guard over Colorado Springs, and near at hand is the Garden of the Gods. Sixty miles from Pueblo is San Isabel Forest; Coeur d'Alene and Sandpoint, Idaho, are radial points for the "Lake Country." Vacation days in the cool Rockies pass all too quickly, but they provide pleasant memories to last a lifetime.

We have, for free distribution, in separate folders, road maps of the six Mountain States. Fill in the coupon now and get the maps before you start your trip.

What Greek Theater Was Like When the "Electra" Was New Actors, All Men, Wore Masks and Played Several Roles in Same Drama—Performance Ran From Sunrise to Sunset.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

THOSE attending the performances of "Electra" at the Garden Theater, beginning tomorrow night, will observe a sort of pillar at the front of a small dancing space which lies before beneath the stage. This shaft represents an altar of Dionysus, it has potency to convey us to the very cradle of the theater. ropean drama was born of the anthems, devoutly ribald and phal which were hiccoughed 30 centuries ago by ecstatic tipplers as reeled about the shrines of the divinity of wine and fecundity.

The Galilean's ruinous hand long flung down the fanes of ysus, but this relic of a dead , so strangely recurring in an hemisphere and era, sets the gination adventuring. The speeds homing to Athens, ther of wit and eloquence, in golden age of genius. The is midway in the fifth cen before the Christian inter ; and the capital is celebrating annual festival in honor of ysus.

A Rite of Springtime.

S it is late in March, spring is beginning, and the sea is once more navigable. The rbor at Piraeus is thronged with pping. Ambassadors are arriving with brilliant suites; together tourists whose errand is asure, and envoys from allied tes bringing their yearly tribute old and silver to the imperial . The entire commonwealth holiday, business is abaned, the law courts are closed, tors have respite from their opsors, the very felons are re from jail to share in the .

hile it is still dark, the city is . Lusty breakfasts are bolted, nst the prospect of spending entire day, without intermis , at the theater. As the sun , all masculine Athens—with rinkling of hardy matrons, and courtesans—flocks en to the mighty auditorium the foot of the Acropolis. In r of the deity, and by express mand of the oracle, everyone decked his hair with a crown, donned his gayest tunic of let, or orange, or purple. Cush and carpets are borne, for the are hard; and many carry kets of wine and light provi lesome, if Deplorable Custom.

HE latter have an office more esthetic than mere bodily refreshment. They are often as the Greek equivalent of matic criticism. Figs and serve admirably as missiles which to pelt an unskillful . In fact, it is to be dreaded some of the playgoers have ed themselves with brickbats cobblestones. There is the of an unpopular actor who owed a supply of boulders in r to build a house, and prom to repay the loan with the collected at his next public ormance. Another ranting pian was hissed off the stage nearly stoned to death." With ur admiration for Greek cus , we hasten to add that we do explicitly recommend this salu practice to St. Louis audi ch spectator clutches in his a ticket of admission, in the of a leaden disk stamped theatrical emblems, the names the poet and his play, and a let and number indicating the seat. merly admission was free, but were so many brawls over of vantage that the city has uted an entrance fee of two , or six cents.

rble Thrones for Dignitaries.

HE cost of seats is the same throughout the theater, wheth in the front row or in the at the top of the auditorium. the "fierce democratie" of it is considered intolerable a rich man, simply because he more, should have a better than a poor man. If any citi unable to muster two obols apply to the city treasury, is bound by law to present with the price of a ticket.

The only preferred seats are 60 marble thrones at the , which are allotted to digni of the Athenian hierarchy to eminent officials. The high of Dionysius, on the central highest throne, has above his the only canopy permitted in theater. As the season is early warmth of the sun is probably me; but many of the specta bring hats, despite the Athe custom of going bareheaded when on a journey.

Theater Seats 20,000.

HE theater is now before us— vast structure on a hillside which is capable of seating 20, persons, or about twice the of the Municipal Theater Park. The audience, ing virtually the entire theatergoing population of the city, is packed together as closely as possible on stone seats without backs, and yet settles down with tireless enthusiasm to listen to a performance which will continue almost without interruption from sunrise to sunset.

It is no assembly of dull and muddy-mettled rascals, but probably the most intelligent and discriminating gathering of its size ever brought together. The keen and rapid intellects of the Athenians excited the admiration of antiquity—and woe to the actor who sang off pitch, erred in the quantity of a syllable, or misplaced an accent! The writer heard John Barrymore wreck the meter of a line in one of Hamlet's soliloquies by pronouncing "contumely" in three syllables—"con-TUME-ly." In a New York playhouse his blunder passed unnoted. In Athens he would have had to flee for his life.

Encores or Hoots.

IT was an audience which knew no reticence in expressing its reactions. If it was pleased, hand-clapping and shouts roused the welkin. If it was displeased, the hisses and groans were equally vociferous; but with them stamping the feet was a sign of disapprobation instead of applause, as among ourselves. The actor might either win an encore with a successful passage, or be hooted from the stage, amid a shower of critiques more substantial than adjectives. The poet himself, if his play seemed particularly bad, might suffer the laying on of violent hands and be ejected forcibly from the theater.

But on the day of our visit, let us hope that the dramatist is Sophocles and that his play is a masterpiece, such as "Electra." And also, that he has been fortunate in finding a prodigal choregus. This personage embodied a charming Athenian institution. The archon, or chief magistrate, was empowered to designate any wealthy citizen and command him to bear the expenses of a theatrical production. The law forbade him to refuse; in fact, to be so nominated was regarded as a lofty civic distinction.

Certain citizens are on record as having ruined themselves by their expenditures upon sumptuous habiliments, costly actors and virtuoso flute-players. Others are commemorated for their stinginess in hiring cheap performers and renting secondhand costumes. One part of the budget was for feeding the chorus during its period of training, and the saying, "as hungry as a chorister," became a proverb.

Must Submit Four Plays.

BY voice of a herald, to the fanfare of a trumpet, it is announced that Sophocles is exhibiting a tetralogy. It should be understood that a poet entering the annual competition was required to submit not merely one play, but four—three tragedies and one satyric comedy, in which he often burlesqued the characters in his tragedies. In addition, the poet composed his own music, trained his actors and chorus, served as stage manager, and not infrequently acted in his plays. This intimate connection between library and stage accounts for the fact that so many technical inventions in the theater are ascribed to the dramatists. For instance, Aeschylus is said to have introduced painted masks, as well as a second principal actor, and to have devised a number of new dances. Sophocles is credited with introducing a third actor, with inventing scene-painting, and with designing an improved dancing shoe for the chorus.

As the performance begins, many surprises are due for modern eyes and ears. All the actors wear masks which cover the head, back and front, and which, made of linen, cork or wood, are painted so boldly and strikingly with lineaments typical of the character represented as to be visible all over the theater. The principals, but not the chorus, wear boots called cothurni, with wooden soles six inches high, and their bodies and limbs are padded to heroic proportions. The height of the mask adds another six inches to the stature. The costumes are dyed in the most brilliant colors, and are cut from the most expensive fabrics.

Chorus Never on Stage.

THE actors at times descend to the orchestra, or dancing floor, where the chorus performs its evolutions, but the chorus never ascends to the stage, which is a long narrow platform, a few feet higher than the orchestra. Both actors and chorus are males, for women never appeared on the Greek stage. Female parts are taken by men, who on these occasions exercise the falsetto tones of their voices.

All the roles are divided among

Half the Plays Do Not Deserve Criticism

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, July 4.

THE most common cause of bad plays is the fact that the playwright has nothing to say. This is also the usual cause of bad theatrical criticism. But after all we critics are less at fault than the playwrights. The dramatist can take his time; and besides, in most cases, nobody is asking him to write a play at all. He does it on his own responsibility.

The critic writes under compulsion. It is one of the requirements of his job that he should spread words on paper even on those nights when the current play has enticed him to no expression whatsoever. About half the plays produced are not in the least provocative of true criticism. They are not very good and they are not so very bad, and the easy and natural thing to do would be to say: "A play called 'Miss Smithers' was produced last night at the Main Street Theater. It has three acts and the performance lasted until about 11 o'clock."

Has to Take Sides.

SUCH a review would probably be too short and too neutral to please the editor and the critic would be fired. And so he writes less honestly. He racks his brains to discover something or other in "Miss Smithers" which arouses his enthusiasm or his an-

Massive Production Is Promised for "Erminie"

THE seventh production of the Municipal Theater Association's current season will be "Erminie," by Edward Jakobowski and Harry Paulton, which is principally remembered because of the comedy roles of Cadeaux and Ravennes, frequently acted by Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper. These engaging vagabonds will be played here by John E. Young and Detmar Poppen.

The book was taken from a French melodrama, "Robert Macaire," by Frederic Lemaitre, an English version of which was made by Robert Louis Stevenson and W. E. Henley. The late Sir Henry Irving found one of his most striking roles in the part of Robert Macaire, prince of blackguards.

Eliminating the tragedy of the original—which ended with the killing of Macaire by the police—Paulton wrote an amusing book, which Jakobowski, an Englishman despite his Polish name, set to music. Macaire became Ravennes, and his accomplice, Bertrand, was converted into the stupid Cadeaux.

Named "Erminie," after the heroine, the operetta was first produced in London during 1885 and had its American premiere in 1886, with Francis Wilson in the part of Cadeaux. It was last presented here at the American Theater during the week of Nov. 21, 1921, with Wilson and Hopper in the principal parts.

Municipal Theater Cast.

FOR the present production is promised one of the most massive and costly presentations the work has ever enjoyed. The roles have been assigned as follows:

Marquis de Pontvert	Leo de Hierapolis
Eugene Marcel	Forrest Huff
Vicomte de Brissac	Jules Waldeck
Delaunay	Bernice Mershon
Dufois	Roland Woodruff
Chevalier de Bratazon	W. J. McCarthy
Ravennes	Detmar Poppen
Cadeaux	John E. Young
Cerise Marcel	Clara Schlief
Javotte	Eleanor Henry
Princess de Gramponeur	Sara Andrada
Marie	Elva Magnus
Erminie de Pontvert	Yvonne d'Arle

Story of "Erminie."

ACCORDING to the story, Erminie, daughter of the Marquis de Pontvert, is about to be betrothed to Ernst, a young nobleman, although she is in love with her father's secretary, Eugene Marcel, and Ernst is enamored of Erminie's friend, Cerise Marcel.

On his way to the betrothal ceremonies, Ernst is held up by Cadeaux and Ravennes, robbed of his money and clothes, and tied to a tree. The rogues present themselves to the Marquis, Ravennes declaring himself to be the expected bridegroom, and introducing Cadeaux as a friend of high degree, whose remarkably bad manners and lan-

Margaret Anglin to Launch New Garden Theater Tomorrow

Scholarly Actress Will Christen St. Louis' Second Open-air Auditorium With Production of Greek Tragedy.

A WORK eminent for nearly 25 centuries as a masterpiece of drama, a direction of proved inspiration in the art of open-air production, a beautiful new theater built expressly as a haven for esthetic ideals and a cast led by the distinguished and scholarly Miss Margaret Anglin—these factors combine to herald an imposing event in tomorrow night's opening of the Garden Theater, St. Louis' second outdoor auditorium.

It will be christened with a production of the "Electra" of Sophocles by Miss Anglin, who also dedicated the Municipal Theater in Forest Park with an all-star revival of "As You Like It." Since "Electra" is in one act and is played without pause, it is announced by the management that no one will be seated after the beginning of the performance at 8:20 p. m. Latecomers will be turned back at the entrances.

How to Get There.

THE theater lies at the intersection of the Olive Street road and the Creve Coeur trolley line, and is easily reached by street car, bus or motor. Trolley passengers should take the Delmar-Olive line and transfer to Creve Coeur cars, which stop at the theater. Bus line No. 1 (Washington-Delmar) of the People's Motor Bus Co. will be routed directly to the entrance of the theater, with an extra fare of 5 cents. Two automobile routes are available. One follows the Olive Street road and the other turns north from Delmar boulevard into Midland boulevard, at 7200 west, and follows a trail of arrows marked "To the Garden Theater."

Spectators will observe a structure different in many respects from the Municipal Theater. The new edifice is far more intimate, as it seats 3000 instead of 10,000. Instead of being built on the slope of a hill, it stands on level ground, and the elevation of the successive tiers of seats is obtained by means of a concrete bowl. The space under the auditorium will be used as a shelter in case of rain. It also houses dressing rooms, a stage-lighting plant of unique power and resources, and a tearoom, planned to become an attractive social feature.

THE rear of the theater is decorated with a series of arches, running vines and multicolored awnings. One approaches it through a garden of flowers, with fountains, illuminated by a lofty brazier with 42 clusters of lamps which will play on a column of steam. Ample parking space is provided by the 11 acres of ground surrounding the theater.

Two broad ramps on either side rise into the auditorium, the tiers of which are curved instead of straight, as at the Municipal Theater. A promenade bisects the slope at its center, and along this the boxes are ranged instead of at the front. The seats, especially designed for the theater during a long course of experiments, are expected to prove unusually comfortable. A special system of lighting has been devised for the auditorium.

Vestige of Ancient "Orchestra."

BESIDES its open-air character, the stage has some other resemblances to an ancient Greek theater. A small semicircular dancing space is a rudiment of the old Athenian "orchestra," in which the chorus of the classical tragedies and comedies performed its maneuvers. The stage is elevated several feet above the dancing floor, and communicates with it by means of a staircase. The orchestra in the modern sense, meaning a body of musicians, will be seated, for the "Electra" performances, at the right of the stage instead of at its front.

The stage itself, built over a branch of the River des Peres, is spacious, and seems small only in comparison with the immense proportions of the Municipal Theater. Instead of oaks at either side, it has a proscenium of elm trees. The natural hill, in this case, lies not beneath but facing the auditorium, and provides a natural backdrop which will be utilized in some of the productions. The problem of the river has been solved by pumping up its waters at the right of the theater, conveying them through a pipe, and discharging them into the river bed again at some distance to the left. A wall has been built to muffle the noise of street cars back of the stage.

An Architectural Setting.

THE Greek theater, for various technical reasons, was compelled to have its stage-buildings, containing dressing rooms for the actors, directly adjacent to the stage. Here the dressing rooms are under the auditorium, and the stage may be used exclusively for settings. In the case of "Electra," which has only one scene, the setting is a replica of a Mycenaen tomb, built massively in three dimensions, and decorated with bas-reliefs and ancient lamps.

The Garden Theater came into being as an offspring of the St. Louis Pageant of Fashions, a commercial enterprise, the essential feature of which was a succession of parades by models displaying current styles. To while away the time while the mannekins were changing their costumes, it was thought advisable to interpolate various entertainment skits, musical, acrobatic and dancing.

Solari's Outdoor Technique.

JOSEPH SOLARI was placed in charge of this feature of the show, and proceeded to evolve a technique of outdoor staging which resulted in the most beautiful and rational spectacles ever provided at the Municipal Theater.

It occurred to Flint Garrison, spokesman of the group of merchants responsible for the Fashion Show, that Solari should be supplied with a theater of his own in which, for the most part, he might devote himself to art without commercial distractions. The result was the Garden Theater. In March its site was one of the most unprepossessing bits of ground in the vicinity of St. Louis. The concrete structure rose like an exhalation in the space of 35 days; and a little more than three months after the first spade of ground was turned the theater is ready for its opening.

Little Known of Sophocles.

THE choice of a Greek tragedy to christen the theater was deliberate, as a prompt and unambiguous manifesto regarding the standards at which the new enterprise will aim. "Electra" is one of seven dramas which have been preserved out of the 100 or more written by Sophocles, who is considered the foremost tragic poet of antiquity. Only a few facts are known concerning him. He was born in 495 and died in 406 B. C., at the age of 89. Because of his beauty and grace he was chosen to lead a chorus of boys in celebration of the victory of Salamis.

At the age of 55, on account of the political wisdom displayed in his "Antigone," he was nominated as one of the Generals who served with Pericles in the Samian war. His amiable temper caused him to be universally beloved, and he was nicknamed "The Attic Bee," because of his gift for extracting an exquisite grace from all that he touched. The plays which survive are "Antigone," "Ajax," "Oedipus Rex," "Electra," "The Trachinean Maidens," "Philoctetes," and "Oedippus Coloneus."

Was a Poor General.

IN addition, a quantity of more or less plausible gossip is told. Pericles is said to have remarked that Sophocles was a good poet but a bad general; whereupon he retorted by boasting humorously of his strategy in affairs of love. He is credited with saying that Aeschylus was often right without knowing it, and that Euripides represented men not as they ought to be but as they are. Aeschylus is reported to have left Athens for Sicily because of mortification over his defeat by Sophocles in the dramatic contest of 468 B. C.

Aristophanes accused Sophocles of becoming a miser in his old age, and shortly before his death, the story goes, the poet was sued by his son Iophon on the ground that he was incompetent to manage his property. The sole defense of Sophocles was to read passages from his recently written "Oedipus Coloneus," which convinced the judges that he was no dotard. One of the most famous sayings attributed to him is quoted in Plato's "Republic." As an old man he was asked whether he ever regretted the passing of youth and love. On the contrary, he answered, he felt as if he had escaped from the claws of a savage beast.

"Electra" deals with one episode in the bloody history of the Atridae, kings of Mycenae in the Peloponnesus. Agamemnon, leader of the Greek expedition against Troy, was murdered on his return to Mycenae by his wife, Clytaemnestra, and her paramour, Aegisthus. Orestes, the victim's son and heir, was saved by his sister, Electra. She intrusted him to a faithful retainer, who carried him to Phocis. There he grew up in the house of Strophius, King of Crisa, near Delphi, the father of his friend, Pylades.

Vengeance Long Deferred.

MANY years have passed when the play opens to the song of birds and in the glow of a newly risen sun, before the palace at Mycenae. Electra has perforce continued to live under the same roof with the murderers. Her sisters, Chrysosthemis and Iphianassa, have been taught by prudence to hide their feelings, but she has made no concealment of her loyalty to her father's memory and of her inconsolable grief.

Every kind of hardship is her portion at the hands of her mother and the dastardly Aegisthus; no slave could fare worse than she in the house that was once her father's. Clytaemnestra's hatred has been embittered from time to time by some false rumor as to the return of Orestes—the one terror that still haunts the guilty pair. Meanwhile Electra herself, worn out with misery and waiting, has begun to falter in the single hope that sustains her—that Orestes would be sent back by the gods as an avenger. The play, continuing from this point, relates the return of Orestes and the vengeance inflicted by him upon his mother and her lover. The cast of the present production will be as follows:

Electra	Margaret Anglin
Attendant	Howard Pyle
Orestes	John Knight
Pylades	Oscar Hambleton
Aegisthus	Paul Harvey
Clytaemnestra	Alma Kruger
Chrysosthemis	Sasa Biala

Local Orchestra and Chorus.

THE executives for the production are Joseph Solari, artistic director; Paul Streger, stage manager; Livingston Platt, designer of stage settings, and William A. Parson, musical director. Parson will lead an orchestra of 30, consisting of members or former members of the Symphony Orchestra, who will play a score of incidental music by William Furst. There will be a chorus of young women dancers trained by Miss Irma Summa.

After two weeks of "Electra," the Garden Theater will present Humperdinck's fairy opera, "Haensel and Gretel." The Fashion Show will be given this year at the Garden instead of the Municipal Theater, and after it will come an original revue, dealing with periods and scenes in American history.

Half of Plays Produced Do Not Merit Criticism

tagonism. Accordingly, his character becomes warped and he tends to be the sort of person who takes sides on everything. He finds himself looking at the weather with a critical eye and trying to make up his mind if it is adequate.

Most trying of all is the fact that the drama critic is compelled by his job to write about acting, an art for which almost no words of any meaning are provided. One must be a wing shot to bring down an actor for the reading public. Something subtle and vital and occasionally vastly exciting occurs on a stage and then there comes a review in which all this is dissipated into adjectives. All too often they are the same adjectives which that particular critic used the night before last and the month before that.

Likes and Dislikes.

IN the course of seven or eight years of drama reviewing I have called actresses and actors superb, magnificent, enthralling, intriguing, thrilling, admirable, exciting, vibrant, astounding, glorious and good. But in every case I have really said nothing more than "I like this performance." And in the same way the much longer string of unfavorable adjectives which have been used by the same reviewer in the same period mean nothing more than "I don't like this performance."

After all, what more is there to be said? For years I have tried to explain why I liked or didn't like, but I have never done it satisfactorily because I never truly knew the secret root of my enthusiasms and my dislikes.

How can anybody give precise and understandable reasons for liking or not liking a play? The art of acting is almost entirely intuitive. The actor may be a person of profound intelligence, but he need not be. One of the greatest performances I ever saw was given by a man who is just a shade more than half-witted. I don't see why the critic should be expected to tell why an actor is good or bad when the performer himself has only the vaguest notion of how he gets his effects.

The Critic Criticised.

EVEN if I should restrict myself to such simple declaratives in theatrical criticism as, "I liked Jane Roe and I disliked John Doe," there would still be difficulties in the job. By now I know a large number of actors and actresses. Some of these friendships I value highly, but they are precarious. Almost without exception there comes a time when I see each of these friends in a play in which I don't like him at all. That observation is duly set down. For this frankness I make no claim of virtue. The practice of speaking ill of our friends is much easier than is generally supposed. But it is hard to endure the fact that the person criticised takes the comment as a personal affront.

Once upon a time I believe that sensitiveness was the worst form of sportsmanship. Perhaps it is, but by now I understand and sympathize with the so-called bad sport. I learned the other side of the problem when I first wrote a novel. One of my best newspaper friends read the book and wrote a review in which he said that it was entirely lacking in interest. No public brawl resulted, but for a week I loathed the man. I lay awake at night and pondered and pondered. It was impossible for me to make up my mind whether he was crooked or just stupid. You see, as a matter of fact, it really was an excellent novel.

WHAT GREEK THEATER WAS LIKE WHEN THE "ELECTRA" WAS NEW

three actors, each of whom plays several different parts, with appropriate changes of costume and mask. This system has the advantage that minor roles are acted as expertly as major ones. The actor, deprived of facial expression and limited as to gesture, relies for effect almost solely on his voice. This must be powerful and sonorous, in order to fill the theater; and also musical, expressive and clear. The three principals may be attended on the stage by as many supernumeraries as are desired; but all of these are mutes. The actor, like a modern performer in operetta, changes from spoken text to recitative and from recitative to melody. There are solos, duets and trios.

Music Secondary to Poetry.

The chorus also speaks or sings according to the poet's directions, and sometimes speeches are divided among several choristers. The tragic chorus always consists of 15, and the comic chorus of 24. All the choral singing is in unison, with each voice following the text simultaneously, syllable by syllable. A single flute—or rather, oboe—accompanies the voices note for note. The Greeks cannot endure unintelligible text, and musical effects are deliberately sacrificed in the interest of clarity. The Hellenic view, contrary to the modern one, is that music is ancillary to language—a mere relish and seasoning of words.

So the performance goes on, while the sun climbs the heavens and descends to the horizon. The audience is not a literate one, in the meaning of the modern census, for books are few and expensive. However, it not only understands but infinitely relishes the loftiest flights of poetry, and the deepest reflections possible to the human mind. Let us pray that Sophocles on this particular day is victorious as he usually was, and that, as the sun sets and the multitude roars its homage, the archon presents him with the prize for tragic drama, which consists of an ivy crown and a goat.

OPERA FESTIVAL REHEARSALS TO BEGIN MIDDLE OF MONTH

Rhea Toniolo, Mezzo-Soprano, to Make First American Appearance in St. Louis.

Chorus rehearsals for the grand opera festival which Guy Golterman will give in August and September at the Municipal Theater are to begin about the middle of this month under the direction of Isaac Van Grove of Chicago, who is one of three conductors engaged for the season.

The works to be given will be "Carmen," "Aida," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and one act of a new opera, "The Music-Robber," which has a score in American rhythms by Van Grove. This excerpt will be combined with "Cavalleria" as a double-bill, and on the evenings when the new work is not sung, a series of ballet divertissements will be substituted.

A singer who will make her first American appearance during these performances is Rhea Toniolo, mezo-soprano, who will sing the title role in "Carmen" and Amneris in "Aida." She has made her career in Italy and South America.

guage are explained as the eccentricities of a nobleman.

When Ernst, having broken his bonds, finally arrives, he is denounced by Ravennes as the bandit who attacked him and his companion earlier in the day. By convincing Erminie of his sympathy for her love of Eugene and promising to aid in their happiness, Ravennes entangles her unwittingly in his scheme for a wholesale robbery of the chateau, which just fails of success. The plot comes to a happy conclusion with the thieves in the hands of the law and the lovers paired off according to their wishes.

Tonight will occur the concluding performance of "Dolly Varden," and next week the association will celebrate its first venture into grand opera with a double bill consisting of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "H. M. S. Pinafore." The Mascagni tragedy will be sung in English.

Reducing Your Weight

By Dr. Lewis Baker, M. D.

Science recognizes truly the extreme embarrassment, the constant annoyance and the real danger of becoming too fleshy. Particularly is the condition most pitiable during hot weather. If, therefore, this condition can be overcome, as it unquestionalby can in a vast number of cases, I am truly glad to point the way.

It appears to be an established fact that obesity is often due to a partial failure of the thyroid gland to secrete and disperse through the blood an iodine gland substance which nature intended as a regulator of the fat absorption from the food consumed. Science, through myriads of experiments, discovered that the simple administration of the dessicated thyroid gland substance supplies to a degree nature's need for the control of fatty accumulation.

For many years I have recommended Arbolone Tablets as a reliable, non-secret home remedy, as it contains one grain of thyroid gland, with other approved ingredients, that have a tendency to aid in reducing the superfluous fatty tissues and to regulate the perverted craving for wrong foods. Taken as per directions, I have never known them to be harmful; on the contrary, many have gratefully written the facts of their success. Leading pharmacies dispense Arbolone Tablets.

Registered Nurse Reduced With Arbolone

"I have benefited after using for about three months when all other prescriptions did me no good at all. Arbolone, certainly has done for me and another member of my family what nothing else could do, though I had tried for years, etc." (Signed) N. Mc St. Clair, R. N., New York City.

Reduced 15 Pounds First Month

CLEVELAND, OHIO. Mrs. L. Vance, 10811 Detroit Av., Suite 4, writes: "I have been taking Arbolene so far for one month and lost 15 pounds. I feel better and know I look much better, too. Thanking you, etc."

Lost 15 Pounds in Two Weeks

NEW YORK CITY. John D. Strecher, 331 E. 125th St., writes: "I used Arbolone Tablets two weeks and lost 15 pounds. Weighed 170 before and now 155. I am 55 years old, a baker and work every day. It is a great relief for me, so thank you."

Used Arbolone Successfully

RENOVA, PA. Mrs. H. A. Peters, 1122 Erie Av., writes: "I took the Arbolone Tablets and must say they have done me a lot of good. I weighed 180 pounds. After taking a few days I did not have that stuffy feeling, so I kept on, and now I weigh 160 pounds. Thanks to you for the good they have done. I am telling my over-stout friends, because I know they have never done me any harm. Thanking you again, etc."

Arbolone Tablets are sold and recommended in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson, Johnson Bros., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores and by good druggists everywhere.

PORTMEN'S LEAGUE TO ERECT LODGE NEAR PIEDMONT, MO.

Structure of Native Timber and Concrete to Be Built at Cost of $28,000.

Announcement has been made of the plans for the members' lodge to be erected by the Mountain Lake Hunting and Fishing League on its preserve near Piedmont, Mo. The league, as is known, is conducting a membership campaign, with the intention of aiding the conservation of wild life and increasing the facilities for sport.

The building, to be known as Mountain Lake Lodge, will be rustic in design, built of native timber and concrete. Its cost will be about $28,000, a comparatively low figure, made possible by the use of local material. Construction is to start this autumn. The lodge will be on the shore of a lake to be created by damming the valley between Irish and Clark mountains. The lodge will be for members, their families and guests. Another building, for members, Blue Stag Lodge, will be erected on another site.

Frank H. Wielandy, former State Fish and Game Commissioner, is president of the league.

GIRL CELLIST THRILLS BERLIN

16-Year-old Russian Plays With Finish and Feeling.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 4.—Berlin musical critics encountered a real thrill at the end of the long concert season by the appearance of 16-year-old Raya Garbousova, a Russian cellist, from Tiflis, in Georgia. Small, frail and physically immature, the girl plays an instrument almost as large as herself with virtuosity, finish and feeling which gives promise of her becoming one of the greatest performers on the violin cello. During the revolution in Russia Raya often had to play with bleeding, frostbitten fingers to help keep her family from starving.

PROMOTERS OF ARTISTS' WILD PARIS REVEL DUPE AMERICANS

Sell Tickets to Tourists Wishing to View Orgy and Then Bar Them at Door.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—The "Bal des Quatz Arts," the wildest students' dancing frolic of Paris, is meeting a high cost of living by playing on its reputation for wickedness. Many Americans, like other foreigners, have contributed to its expenses without getting even a look at the Bacchanalian revel.

The "four arts" ball is an old institution given annually by students of the Ecole des Beaux Arts, and the scantiness of the costumes worn frequently has aroused the police and has caused public agitation for the abolishment of the event. But it still goes on, each year ending with a parade through the streets at dawn that few see and none understand the reason for.

The curiosity of tourists to see the noted ball has encouraged selling of tickets for prices than ran up to 1000 francs for the orgy of last week. At the gate, however, there was a credentials committee that quizzed ticket bearers as to the art school they attend and the names of their instructors. If the answers were unsatisfactory, the candidates for admission were hustled off, sometimes being tossed out on their heads if they protested.

More than once those who have managed to get by the Credentials Committee in past years have been spotted and offered the choice of jumping out of a window or being thrown out. A good deal of extra money has been obtained by the sale of tickets and many of the ticket holders get in, but loud protests on the part of those who have been barred has caused the authorities to advertise the fact that the students had no right to sell tickets.

The strict censorship at the door also has reacted on many students entitled to enter, but whose answers at the door were not convincing to the Credentials Committee.

EDITORIAL IN THE ST. LOUIS STAR, NOVEMBER 22, 1921—
"How does it happen that when an operetta is revived after a long period of somnolence, the entertainment is certain to be clean in its humor and rich in its music—such a piece, for instance, as "Erminie" in St. Louis this week?"

EDITORIAL IN THE ST. LOUIS TIMES, NOVEMBER 23, 1921—
"Delighted by the charm in music, humor and stage investiture as well as literary dressing of an old-time light opera, "Erminie," the public is asking why there cannot be more revivals of this sort.... Yes, it is a relief to turn from the jazziness of jangling plays of today to "Erminie."

THE WORLD'S PET PLAY OF RICH FUN AND GREAT TUNES

"ERMINIE"

AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS COMIC OPERA

PRESENTED BY MUNICIPAL OPERA'S GREATEST CAST, CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

RICHARD SPAMER, IN THE GLOBE-DEMOCRAT, NOVEMBER 22, 1921—
"Did "Erminie" come back? Most decidedly—Yes! Last night a representative audience acclaimed those virtues of light opera that have made the work a classic. Thirty-five years old and not a dull moment. Chuckles and waves of laughter, punctuated here and there by a breathless hush, as when the lovely old lullaby is sung. No antiquated relic is this "Erminie," unwrapped from its cerements for a smile and its old-fashioned simplicity. In the year of 1921 it stands on its feet with any of them—yea, perhaps better than some of them ....A good show "Erminie" and a worth-while revival."

CARLOS F. HURD, IN THE POST-DISPATCH, NOVEMBER 22, 1921—
"Are there any more like "Erminie" in the storehouse of bygone stage treasures? It so, let us get them out and give a needed rest to the architects of jazz entertainment, and to ourselves."

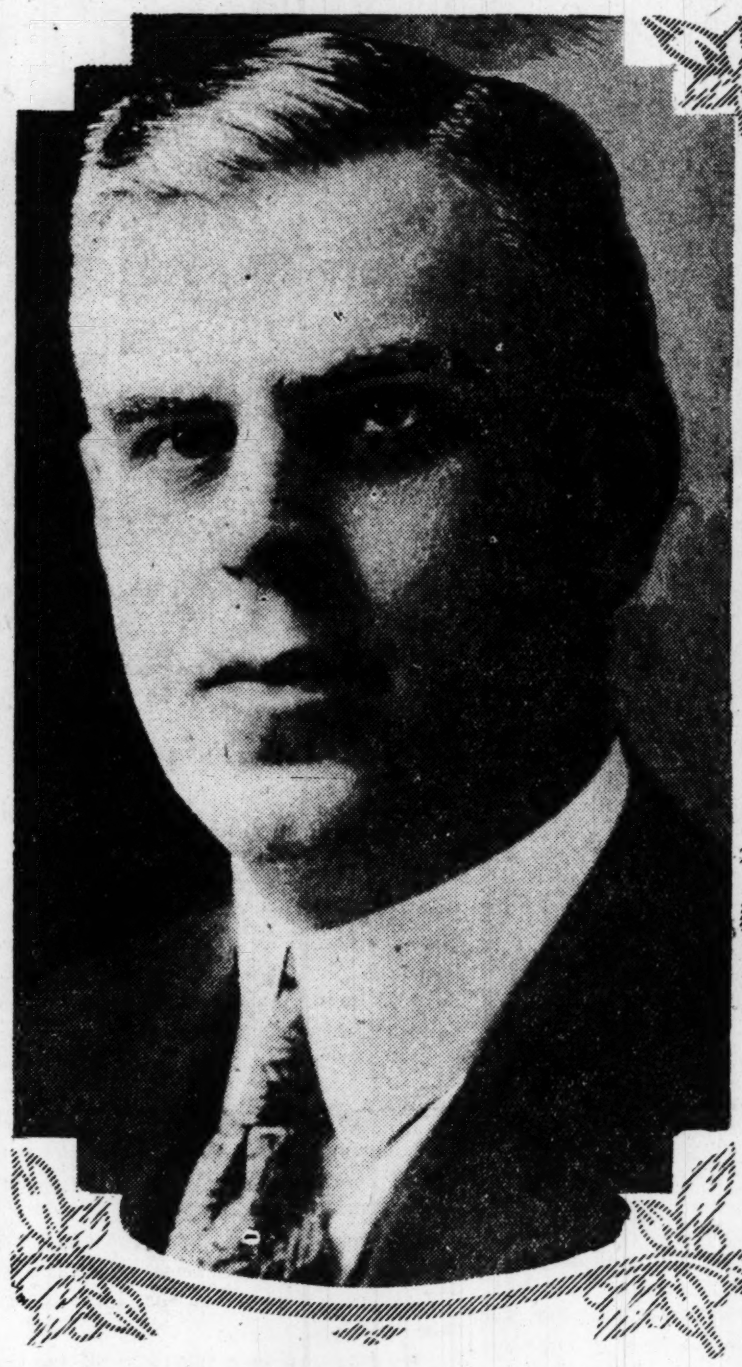
$50,000 MAN—WITH A BIG BASS VOICE—WINS A $30,000,000 WIDOW

Romance of Al Wilson, the Preacher's Son, and Mrs. Dodge of Automobile Fame

This Wilson Had to Work His Way Through College, but He Certainly Could Sing and Everybody Said That Some Day He Would Sing Himself Into Something Good—Last Monday They Were Married and Have Sailed for Europe on Their Honeymoon.

ALFRED G. WILSON.



The present Dodge mansion at Grosse Pointe.

MRS. ALFRED G. WILSON.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., July 4.

THERE was no denying that Al Wilson, the preacher's son, was a good bass singer. Years ago, when the Reverend Samuel N. Wilson was serving unpretentious Presbyterian congregations in Michigan and Indiana, they called young Alfred the boy baritone and his singing supplemented his father's preaching. At college his voice, grown more robust, was his best asset. After college his booming bass was heard in church choirs.

They always said Al Wilson would sing himself somewhere.

Last Monday the poor preacher's son was married to Mrs. Matilda R. Dodge, one of the rich women of the world.

Alfred G. Wilson was not only a good singer. He stood six feet and he was broad-shouldered and handsome and he had an engaging personality and, after college, he prospered and was rated as a successful business man. Counting it all up, nobody could understand how he managed to stay single as long as he did. He was rightly rated a top-notch catch, but at 41, although he had a way with women and had more than once raised great expectations among the matchmakers, he was still free.

Then came the Widow Dodge Somehow, though, nobody expected that romance would come to the preacher's son and the widow of the multi-millionaire automobile manufacturer, not even those who always said that Al Wilson would sing himself into something good.

For one thing, Mrs. Dodge seemed older than Wilson. She wasn't, really, but she seemed so, with two children of her own and three stepchildren and stepchildren's children who called her grandmother, and her gentle and unassuming manner and her interest in church work. She was president of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church and by common consent the president of the W. F. M. S. is not to be thought of in connection with romance.

Alfred G. Wilson, though, was become less the singer of rolling and rollicking songs than he had been, for as Presbyterian deacon he had a certain dignity to uphold, and he saw no reason why he should not fall in love with the Widow Dodge. So it is the romance of the deacon and the president of the W. F. M. S.

Not that all of the women of the First Presbyterian Church are reconciled. There are several who, not mentioning any names and specifically excepting themselves, think Wilson might have chosen differently if he had been properly regardful of the claims of romance. But a man, even such an eligible bachelor as Al Wilson, can only marry one woman and therefore he can't please everybody.

The Preacher's Son

Alfred G. Wilson was born at Lawrenceburg, Ind., where his father happened to be preaching 42 years ago. He grew up as a Presbyterian preacher's son, there and in other places, and by and by was sent to Beloit College, but the expense was too great for his father to meet and he worked vacations in lumber yards to help himself through.

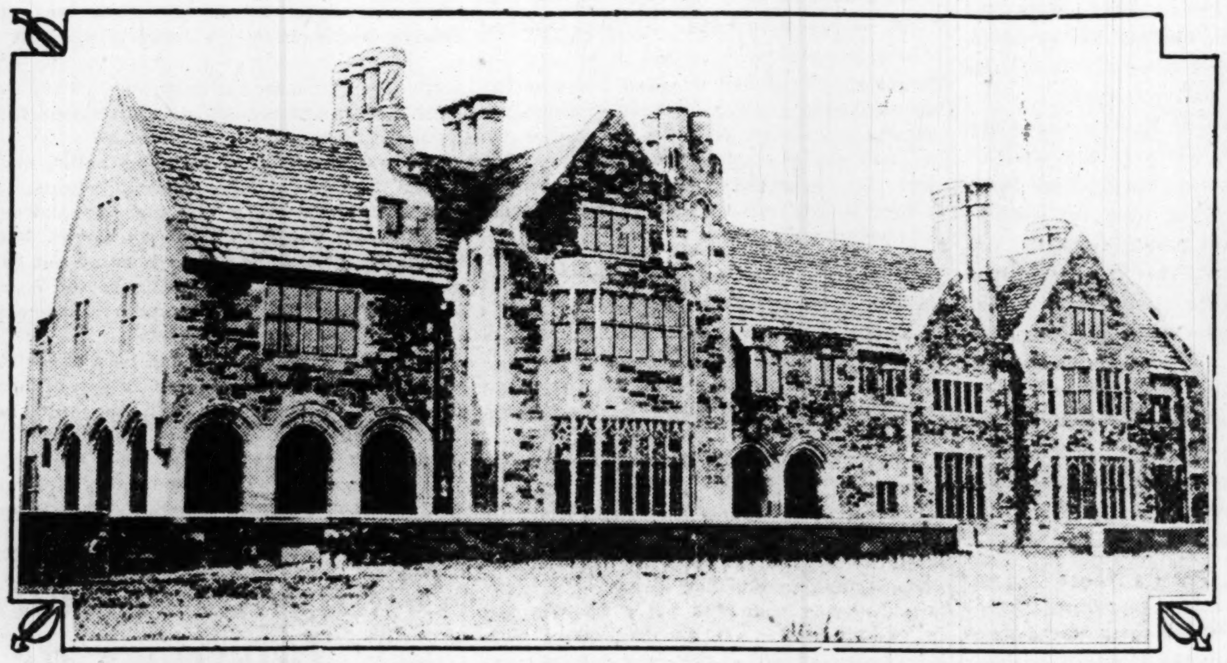
His voice was a help, too. Although, for the most part, he sang for the joy of singing and not for remuneration, his voice brought him recognitions which he might otherwise have lacked. It won him a place in the glee club and in his senior year he was the leader of it. He was the college's best bet as a bass singer. Sometimes, when they were putting on something big, they had to send away for other soloists, but never for a bass. Al Wilson was there with the bass.

His voice came in handy, too, for the Greek wars. Whenever the Beloit Greeks mobilized Al Wilson was there in his tunic, hurling defiance at the enemies of Greece and daring them to come on, which they seldom [illegible]. It was most too much to expect the [illegible] to go up against a voice like that. It is college history that he won a prize for the best extemp. commencement week. And he was good at football and basketball.

He had a head for business, too. He was treasurer of pretty nearly everything that he was connected with, the oratorical societies, Beta Theta Pi and so on.

Became a Salesman

Out of college in 1906 at the age of 23, he went to work for the Mason-Donaldson Lumber Co. at Rhinelander, Wis. He was the kind of a salesman, they say, who went around to the back door when he was figuratively kicked out of the front door. In two years the sales manager took sick and he was made salesmanager and for 10 years he held that position. During the war he served in the spruce division here in Detroit, assembling spruce timber for airplane construction. A year after the war he went with Diebold Bros. & Wilson, lumber dealers here, and a year later he and his brother, Donald, bought out the business. During the post-war period they are said to have made a good deal of money.



Palatial home which John F. Dodge was building when he died is expected to be finished for the Wilsons.

In Detroit, true to his training, Wilson became an active member of the First-Presbyterian Church. Here, as at Rhinelander, where he was identified with the Congregational Church, his big bass voice was heard, and here, as in Rhinelander, he was a bachelor of marked eligibility, so rated by earnest mothers and susceptible daughters, and widows who were more dangerous than either.

There was one widow in particular to whom Wilson had paid rather particular attention. She says now they were, oh, very good friends, but nothing more, you know. Speaking with the authority of sophistication she says Al Wilson was, all things considered, quite the most eligible of all the First Presbyterian bachelors, but they were only friends.

As between Wilson and a younger woman it may have been on his part only the interest which a big bass singer feels in another singer, but they too were very good friends and this young woman is said to have expressed surprise to friends that he did not tell her he was going to marry Mrs. Dodge, seeing that they were such good friends.

Mrs. Dodge, after the death of her husband, John F. Dodge, in January, 1920, had been more than ever devoted to her church work. Until a year ago her acquaintance with Wilson was entirely casual. Then he became the leader of the Forum at the church, which brought him more definitely to her notice.

Met at Church

Mrs. Dodge, for all that she was a grandmother by virtue of being a stepmother, was a year younger than Wilson. She discovered, or so it seemed to her, that he had a serious attitude toward life. His father had retired from the ministry and father and mother were living with him in the Marie Antoinette apartments at 2200 Blaine avenue. His devotion to them was a matter of comment and Mrs. Dodge admired him for that. And, for a bachelor, he was very fond of children. He made over Mrs. Dodge's children. She could not help noticing that and it established a bond of interest between them.

It happened, last Christmas, that they were thrown together at several affairs at the church and came to know each other better and, Mrs. Dodge said the other day, the better that they came to know each other the more they realized that they had much in common.

It was an accident that, more than anything else, gave definiteness to the situation. Mrs. Dodge's little girl was injured about three months ago. Wilson was very kind then and Mrs. Dodge says he was a great comfort to her. The children became very fond of him and she says she came slowly to the realization that they needed him as much as she did.

After that the intimacy grew and at Easter, Mrs. Dodge said, it came upon them suddenly that they were necessary to each other's hapiness. "That's the way it happens when two persons are in love," she said.

It had all been so very discreet that the announcement of the engagement was a surprise even to Mrs. Dodge's stepchildren, John Duval Dodge, Mrs. Wesson Leyburn and Mrs. George Sloane. Not to mention the several women whose interest had been aroused.

The wedding date was not at first made known but it was announced a little later that on Monday, June 29, they would be married. There were expectations that the wedding would be a spectacle in keeping with the wealth of the bride, but Mrs. Dodge promptly set at rest such expectations by saying that the wedding, at her home in Grosse Pointe, would be a simple and quiet ceremony, with the bridegroom's father performing the ceremony and with only the members of the immediate families in attendance.

To Europe for Honeymoon

And so they were married and are off to Europe on their honeymoon. No statement has been made of their plans when they return. There is an expectation, which is also a hope, that with a man to look after things Mrs. Wilson will turn her attention to the completing of the palace which John F. Dodge was building on Lake Shore Drive. It was begun in 1919 and $2,592,000 had been expended upon it when Dodge died and it is estimated that it will cost $1,500,000 to finish it. Mrs. Wilson, however, has not announced what she is going to do about it and it may be that she has not yet decided.

Whether or not she decides to finish the house, there seems no reason to doubt that the Wilsons will be able to keep the wolf from the door. By the will of John F. Dodge, his widow receives one-fifth of the income of his estate. The other four-fifths go to the children.

In addition to the income Mrs. Dodge was given the homestead and farms and all jewelry and personal property and the uncompleted home on Lake Shore Drive. At the time of Dodge's death and the filing of the will, no estimate of the value of the estate was made. The inventory, filed in August, 1922, gave a valuation of $36,892,582.41. The recent sale of the Dodge Bros. interests for $146,000,000 meant about $75,000,000 to the heirs of John F. Dodge.

Mrs. Wilson's present wealth is estimated at $30,000,000; Wilson's at $50,000.

The Dodge Fortune

The Dodge fortune is one of the romances of the automobile industry in Detroit. Sons of a machinist and ironworkers of Niles, Mich., were John and Horace Dodge, John born in 1864 and Horace born in 1868. They learned their father's trade at a bench in his shop. In 1886 the youths came to Detroit and found work at $18 and $20 a week. A few years later they devised a ball-bearing bicycle and in 1897 they formed the Evans & Dodge Bicycle Co. Two years later they sold out for $2500 apiece.

With this capital they, in 1901, opened a machine shop in Detroit, employing 12 workmen. They struggled for several years. Their first big order was for 3000 sets of transmissions for the Olds runabout.

Henry Ford urged them, in aid of quantity production, to manufacture not only transmissions but engines. Then the Ford company was formed. The Dodges took $5000 worth of stock, to be paid for out of their profits on 650 chassis. The Ford engine was perfected and the first Ford cars turned out under the direction of the three partners. Six years later the Ford company increased its capitalization to $2,000,000. The Dodges received one-tenth of the capital stock, or $100,000 each. Nine years later the stock of the Dodges was valued at $36,000,000 upon which they had received dividends of $5,500,000. Ford took over the Dodge holdings in 1920. In the meantime the Dodges had been building up their own business. A few months after the Ford settlement the Dodges, attending an automobile convention in New York, were stricken with influenza and both died. The sale of the Dodge holdings for $146,000,000 is recent history.

Now the wedding bells have rung again and Al Wilson has sung himself into a good home, as prophets foretold, but unless he changes his mind, as he expressed it when they started on their honeymoon, he will be not merely the husband of the former Mrs. Dodge when he returns, for he said he was going to stick to the lumber business.

GRANDDAUGHTER OF "DEVIL ANSE" HATFIELD KILLS HER MAN AND BRINGS IN HER KIL

Elizabeth Dennis Then Telephones to Earl Basham's Wife to Come and Get His Body

Lawless in Her Loves, as Her Grandfather Was in His Hates, Woman Steals Rich Ohio Man From His Wife and Shoots Him When She Fears That He Is Going to Break With Her—She Says, Though, That She Was Trying to Kill Herself and It Was by Mischance That the Bullet Found the Heart of the Man.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 4.

SHE says she is a Hatfield, granddaughter of that "Devil Anse" Hatfield, feud chieftain, whose name was long a terror to his foes in West Virginia. Says it not boastfully or in explanation or extenuation. Simply says it and lets it go at that.

Quite likely, though, it explains a great deal. For she has been as lawless in her loves as her grandfather was in his hates. And it took something unusual, something like the blood of the Hatfields, to enable her to kill her man and bring his body in.

They quarreled at a fishing camp a mile from town, the man and woman whose love was lawless, and she came driving in, with the corpse crumpled in the seat beside her, and went to her home for clothing suitable for a stay in jail, then drove to the Sheriff's office and gave herself up and telephoned to the man's wife to come and get the body.

Elizabeth Dennis in the automobile drove with Basham's body beside her.

Give her all the names she is entitled to and she is Elizabeth Ratliff Hatfield Dennis: She coveted another, that of Basham, and she says Earl Basham had promised to marry her when they were both divorced. They say that Basham was trying to break with her and that was why she killed him; but she says he was true to her and she did not intend to kill him. Instead, she wanted to die herself and give him back to his children, but the bullet that she intended for herself found his heart.

Elizabeth Dennis is in fact twice a Hatfield, for she is not only descended through her mother, from the West Virginia Hatfields, but as Elizabeth Ratliff she was married to Albert Hatfield, only remotely related to her mother's people, if at all.

She was married to this Hatfield in Lexington, Ky., where they both lived, 10 years ago, when she was 15 years old, and they came here to live. A son was born to them, who is now with his grandmother's people near Logan, W. Va. They separated in 1919 and there was a divorce. It was then her lawless romance with Earl Basham began, which now has ended in tragedy.

Earl Basham, then 32 years old, member of a prominent land-owning family, had just missed being a useful citizen of Scioto County. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Basham of the Wait Station Community and the only grandson and heir of T. J. Basham, whose farm lands, requisitioned for city lots as Portsmouth and New Boston grew, had brought him wealth. He had turned over half of his $100,000 estate to Earl who, after he had grown up on a farm and married, had nothing to do but look after the property which provided him with ample income.

A Lawless Love

Basham had fair ability and no bad habits except that he was a man of lawless loves, concerning which he seemed to have no sense of shame. He saw Elizabeth Hatfield and was attracted to her, which was not strange, for she was comely and full-figured. They were friends for a while but drifted apart and in 1923 the woman was married to Hobart Dennis, who had been a school teacher but had turned to more lucrative if less dignified labor in the iron mills. It lasted only eight months. They separated but were not divorced.

Basham lived on a country place six miles east of town but was much in town. A year ago he moved in, taking a house at 1612 Grandview avenue. Two months ago his grandfather died, leaving him the remainder of the $100,000 estate.

His affairs with women were making him notorious. A year ago Joseph Grizzell of New Boston sued him for alienation of his wife's affections. A jury gave a judgment of $6500.

Before and after the alienation suit Basham's association with Elizabeth Dennis was brazen. He had established her in a little house on a quiet street, 1014 Scott avenue, which he furnished for her, and had given her an automobile. He spent as much of his time there as at his own home and they drove about with no pretense of discretion. In season he maintained a fishing camp among the cottonwoods and willows where the Scioto flows into the Ohio, south of town. There he took his wife and children one day and the other woman another day, with complete indifference to public opinion.

What was perfectly obvious to everybody else did not come definitely to the knowledge of Mrs. Basham until, early last spring, she received a letter from a woman, informing her that if she would go to the cottage of Mrs. Dennis at 1014 Scott avenue she would learn where her husband spent his hours when he was away from home. The next time her husband went for a walk in the cool of the evening she followed him and saw him enter the cottage.

Fishing camp where Basham was shot.

Mrs. Basham, often humiliated by her husband's preference for other women and his neglect of her, concerned on account of the three children over the squandering of his money, concluded about six weeks ago that forbearance had ceased to be a virtue and filed suit for divorce, custody of the children and a division of the property. She named "Elizabeth Hatfield" as co-respondent.

They Were Reconciled

There were consultations of the lawyers after the filing of the suit and it had been practically settled that Mrs. Basham, in consideration of a settlement upon herself and the children, would not press the divorce claim.

The Bashams continued living in the same house after the divorce suit was filed and Mrs. Basham says now that the suit seemed to bring Earl to his senses, for he became more attentive to her and treated her better and was more at home and seemed to be trying to break away from the other woman.

Mrs. Dennis seems to have sensed the drift of affairs. With growing jealousy of the man's wife, for whom previously, confident of her hold on Basham, she had evinced a taunting contempt, she made herself increasingly obnoxious, especially by calling Basham on the telephone at his home. And one night she drove up in front of his home, in the automobile he had given her, and sat there honking the horn for him, with the neighbors seeing and hearing, but he did not go out.

Called on Phone

Mrs. Dennis would be in a better position now if she had not yielded to the impulse of calling up Basham's home. Mrs. Basham came to know her voice and now that Mrs. Dennis is charged with murder the testimony of Mrs. Basham that a woman, whose voice she recognized as that of Mrs. Dennis, called up the morning of the day that he was killed and asked for him will bear the interpretation that the killing was planned.

Mrs. Dennis denies that she called up and blames it upon another woman, a former friend of Basham's, who did all that she could to annoy her after Basham transferred his affections to her. But Mrs. Basham says the voice was that of Mrs. Dennis.

That morning, which was Thursday, June 11, Basham took his children to his fishing camp on the river bank. They scampered through the thickets hunting unripe blackberries while he busied himself with his fish lines. At noon he took them home.

In the early afternoon Basham and Mrs. Dennis drove to the camp in her roadster. Where they met and why they went are points that will have a bearing upon the question of whether there was premeditation. Mrs. Dennis does not admit that it is important. Their going out to the camp was so casual. Why, she and Earl were out there pretty nearly every other day. That is, he would take his family out one day and take her out the next. It was just one of their regular trips. John Springer, who sometimes fished with Basham, saw them going and asked to be taken along and they took him.

Quarrel, Then a Shot

When they reached the camp Basham and the woman went into the tent and Springer heard them quarreling. Springer went to bait some lines. Basham came from the tent and stood there talking to Springer.

Mrs. Dennis, Springer says, raised the flap of the tent and came out. She was carrying a pistol loosely in her right hand, pointing downward.

"Take me back to town," she demanded.

"Oh, you don't want to go back to town," said Basham.

He edged toward the woman and by a quick movement caught her arm and tried to twist the weapon out of her hand. She struggled and in the scuffle they fell. Springer, running away through the willows, heard a shot.

* * *

Half an hour later Deputy Sheriff Canter was sitting in Sheriff Dunham's office. A roadster rounded the corner and came to a stop at the curb across the street. Elizabeth Dennis climbed out and crossed the street and entered the office.

"I reckon you'll want to lock me up," she said.

"What for?"

"I have just killed a man."

"Who?"

"Earl Basham. His body's out there in the car.

* * *

Canter found the dead man there, lolling grotesquely in the seat. There was no need to call a doctor. It was too plain that he was dead.

Back in the Sheriff's office, Mrs. Dennis asked if she could use the telephone.

"Who do you want to talk to?" asked Canter.

"To Earl's wife."

Canter was amazed. What would the woman do next? He said "All right, go ahead."

She called up Mrs. Basham.

"I have just killed Earl," she said. "He is down here in the car across from the Sheriff's office. If you want him, come and get him."

She gave then her version of what had happened. It was Earl's gun. She had snatched it from his pocket, intending to kill herself. He had seized her and they had fallen and as she was trying to twist the weapon around so that she could shoot herself it was discharged. Earl had struggled uncertainly to his feet. The gun? Oh, he picked that up, where she had dropped it, and tossed it into the river. Divers have been unable to find it.

Dead Man in Car

"Are you hurt?" she says she asked, and Basham said yes. She was all contrition and concern then, she says, and pressed him with endearments, but he told her they would have to hurry. They climbed into the roadster and Basham, at the wheel, backed and turned, barking a willow in his haste, and drove up the bank to the county road and headed toward the bridge that spans the Scioto. The woman clung to him and kissed him. Before they had gone 100 yards Basham lost control of himself and the car, which wobbled and went off of the road into a cornfield. The woman threw the gear lever and stopped the car. She lifted Basham away from the wheel. Holding him in her arms, she said:

"I love you."

"I love you, too."

"Always?"

"Always."

He slumped in her arms and died.

Mrs. Dennis took his place at the wheel and with one arm around the dead man she drove up the dirt road to the A. and P. highway and across the Scioto bridge into Portsmouth, and through the streets.

She knew that he was dead and that there was no need of taking him to a doctor. She realized she would have to go to jail. She would need a change of clothing. She drove on through the streets to the little cottage on Scott avenue.

Leaving Basham's body propped in the seat of the car she went inside and gathered a few articles into a bag and came out and climbed in beside him and again placed her arm around him and started away. She had forgotten something, though, and after going a short distance she turned and again went into the house.

There was a framed photograph of her which she wanted to send to a friend. She took it with her and drove five or six blocks to a garage and left it there, with instructions for its delivery.

With these chores attended to, she drove to the office of Sheriff Dunham. She parked across the street, kissed the dead face of Basham and went in.

EARL BASHAM.

Mrs. Basham came and found her husband's body there in the car and gave directions for an undertaker to take charge of it.

The autopsy showed that the bullet had pierced the lower point of the man's heart. It seemed incredible that he could have driven the car after receiving his death wound, but the statement that he did so is borne out by several men who were working in the corn field, who saw Mrs. Dennis take the wheel after Basham had driven that far.

As for Mrs. Basham, she had been the wife of this man and he was the father of her children. She had borne with his faults in life. In memory of happier days she would cherish him in death. She received the body at her home and gave it every honor and there was a largely-attended funeral. The Rev. Gerald Culberson, pastor of the First C tian Church, spoke such consolations a could and Earl Basham was laid away i family lot at Wheelersburg Cemetery.

Mrs. Basham, bearing her sorrow a she can, gathers her children about h the Grandview avenue home and tells th things that she can remember about th band and father, trying to forget the b

Shanghai Theaters Serve Business as Well as Pleasur

(From the North China Herald.)

BETWEEN $10,000 and $25,000 enters the tills of Chinese theaters in Shanghai every day. When it is considered that this is somewhere between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 a year, the importance of the Chinese style of entertainment as an industry in the city may be realized. If the admission fees received during a year by all the theaters in all the cities of China could be counted, the total would doubtless run into the scores of millions. The Chinese theater plays an important part in the commercial life of the city as, besides spending the evening there as a pastime, Chinese business men use it as a means of establishing closer acquaintances with customers. The theater in Shanghai has probably undergone more development than that in any other city, where many of the so-called native showhouses are so dissimilar from those of Pekin, or of the other less Westernized cities, that a person from another part of the country would be inclined to call many of the Chinese showplaces in Shanghai foreign.

All of them, however, have not changed to the same degree, or even followed the same line. In Shanghai are three distinct classes or groups of playhouses. One of these is devoted to maintaining the traditions of the old theater, a thing which, in general, it does very well, according to experienced Chinese goers. These present the so-called P plays, which use historical themes, and the chief emphasis on singing. Another takes up more modern stories, selecting that deal with the present day. Sing included by these, but they also em droll situation and repartee. Another scarcely has a counterpart on the f stage. In it stories from the old Peking are acted, but magic effects, like skeleton pearing as apparitions, and victims e from chests, are partly depended upon fo effect.

Bugtown-on-the-Meramec---The True Life Story of an Insect Village

CLAYBANK UNDER CLUBHOUSE PORCH PROVIDES NATURALIST WITH FIVE YEARS' STUDY OF INSECT COMMUNITY

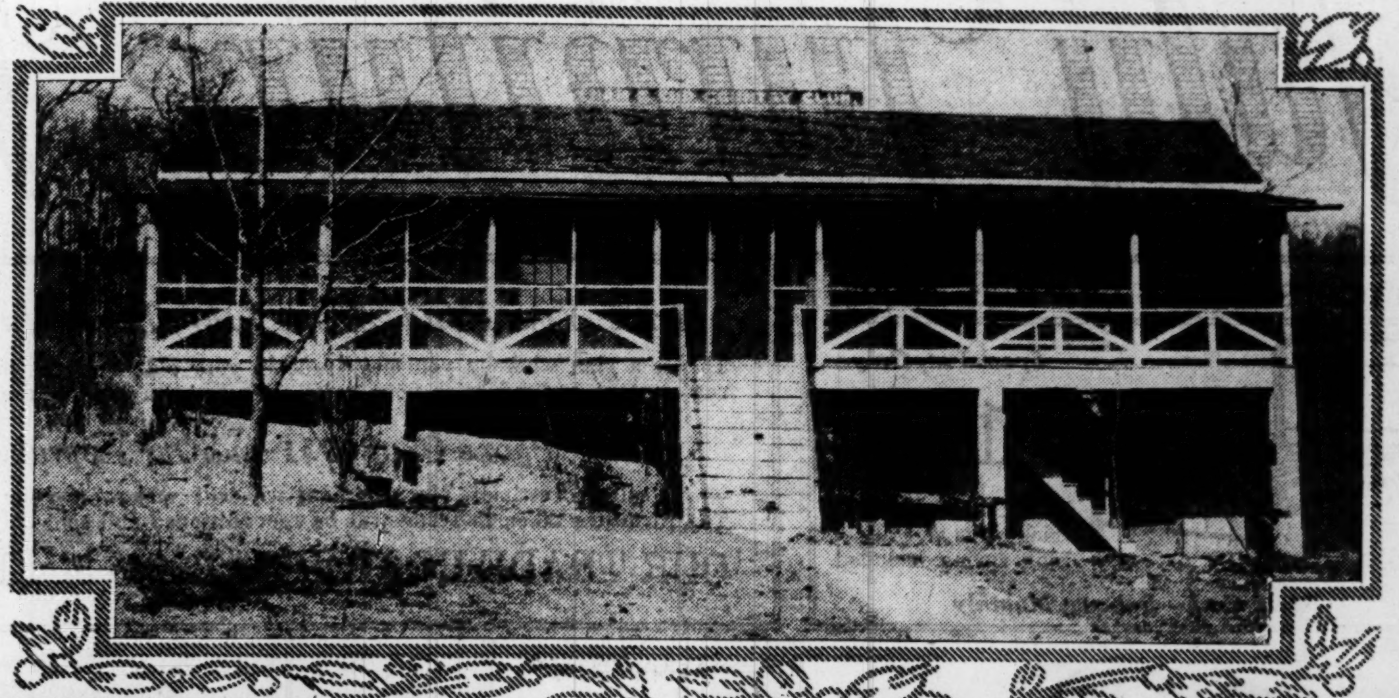
Where Bees Live in Apartment Houses and Wasps Perform Operations on Caterpillars — Phil Rau, the Observer, Learned Enough for a Chapter in a Book From These Creatures—How the Wily Doodle-Bug Traps Its Victims, and How Bees Find Their Way Home, and How Spiders Set Their Snares.

A CLAY BANK piled up by excavators when building the "Ham and Bud" Clubhouse at Wickes, Mo., near the juncture of the Meramec and Mississippi Rivers, is the setting of this story. The first person to find the bank of any interest or value was Phil Rau, the Kirkwood naturalist. Rau happened upon it in 1917 and discovered that the bank had become the scene of teeming insect life. For five years he studied the inter-relations of the various species which had made this mound of dirt their home.

His conclusions, under the title "Ecology of a Clay Bank," form a chapter in a two-volume book: "Experimental and Other Studies in Insect Behavior," which he will publish shortly. From the standpoint of the entomologist, Rau's observations are important evidence in support of the theory that insect life is sociological; that these creatures form communities of a sort, and are dependent on each other. Rau has worked out intricate relationships between the bees, ants, wasps and other bugs which inhabited the bank, showing how the behavior of insects is affected by their environment; how light, heat and plant life play a part in their destinies; and how occurrences affecting one species may affect others.

The following is an attempt to present Rau's observations to the lay reader in a nontechnical and imaginative form.

The clubhouse at Wickes, Mo., where Rau found the clay bank under the porch.



By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN

PERHAPS a black-banded mining bee founded Bugtown-on-the-Meramec. Or maybe it was a doodle-bug. Then again, a lowly earthworm, tossed in the cataclysmic upheaval of an excavator's spade, may have recognized that out of chaos had come a townsite. The historian hesitates, in view of the meager evidence at hand, to award imperishable fame. He might start another Laclede-Chouteau controversy which would embitter the lives of generations of Bugtown families. No. It is far better to sidestep the issue by writing an entomological genesis and declare: "In six shovelfuls a man made Bugtown, and the bugs found it good to look upon, and it was settled."

This handsome metropolis of the bug world was, from the standpoint of its inhabitants, admirably situated. The clay bank which formed the principal sections of the town was soft and could be easily tunneled. The sky, a foot or so above, might have been identified as the under side of the floor of the clubhouse porch. Bugtown's citizens thought it a lovely sky; being wooden it could not rain, and being solid it prevented the boots of human giants from smashing their homes. So many bugs, alas! are either drowned by heavy rains or stepped on. Nor did this sky shut off the sunlight, as might be supposed. The clay bank was near enough to the edge of the porch for the sun to shine on it at least half the day.

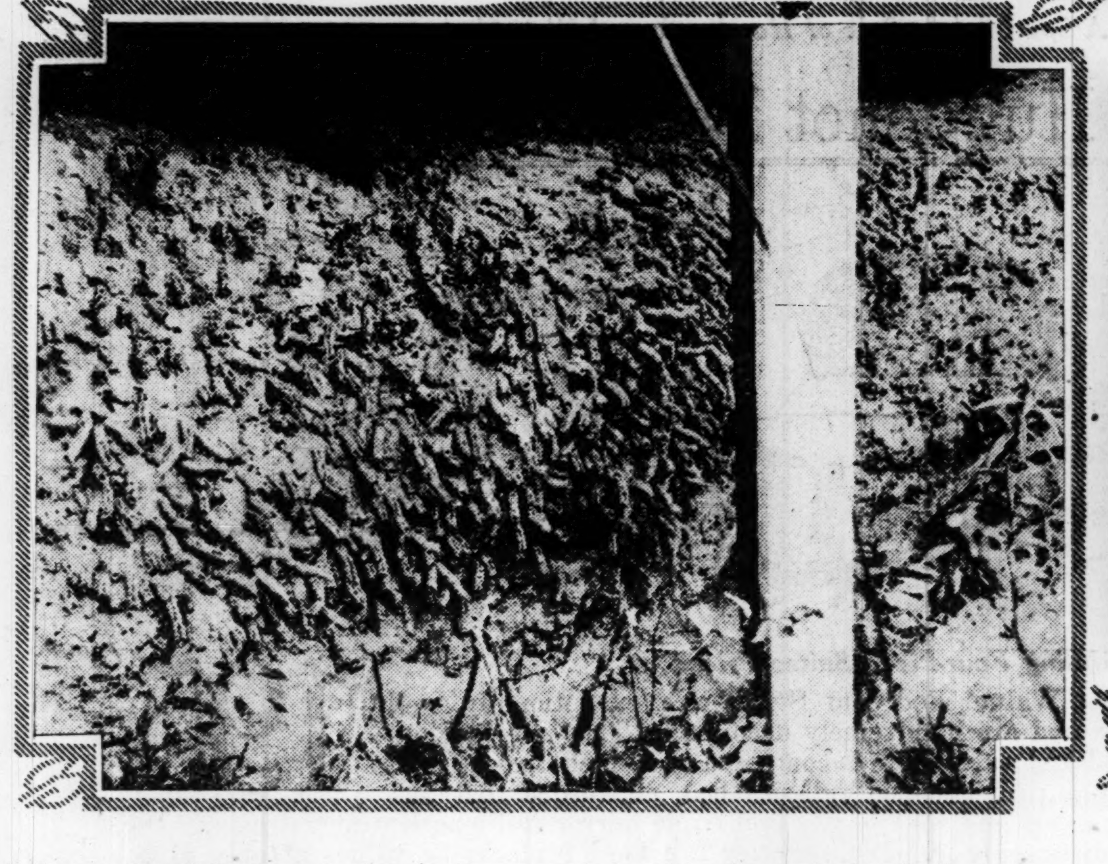
Bugtown possessed ample room for suburban development, too. There were timbers about where ants and carpenter bees could live. Rose bushes and other shrubbery nearby afforded homes for wasps and leaf-cutter bees and grazing grounds for the ants' cows, who should always be referred to as aphids, because it is a nicer name than plant lice. The flowers around Bugtown were abundant, there was always a plentiful water supply, and atmosphere generally attained that tranquil warmth beloved of bugs as well as men. As to the food supply for all inhabitants, it is best not to be too specific. Insects, sad to relate, for the most part, eat each other.

Bugtown Is Settled

Now, the settlement of Bugtown was surprisingly like the settlement of a human village. There were the first families of Bugtown, the best bugs, the pioneers. Seventeen in number, these insect families made their homes in the clay bank and surrounding material. The most important families were those of the bees, wasps, ants and spiders. Next in order came the squatters, or insects that were too lazy to build homes of their own. These insects might be called the first families' poor relations—different varieties of bees, wasps and spiders, which moved into abandoned homes and used them as their own. Then came the parasites, 19 different kinds, which not only moved right into the homes of the best bugs and the squatters, but used them for food. Among the parasites were nine varieties of flies, three kinds of cuckoo bees, one family of beetles and a species of Chalcid fly.

Last among the inhabitants of Bugtown were the visitors, insects that just dropped in for a day or so. Sometimes, like human visitors, they stayed and stayed, liking the place so much they would not leave. But most of them moved on after eating a few of the town's foremost citizens. They were not all insects these visitors. Besides the moths and yellow-jackets and grasshoppers that happened by, more sinister wayfarers stopped at Bugtown. Lizards and toads, a phoebe bird and a red bird, and a snake visited at intervals. They gave the town a cosmopolitan atmosphere, but greatly reduced the birthrate, to say nothing of the sobering effect they had on the community's proudest families. Still, a town must pay in one way or another for a cosmopolitan atmosphere.

Among the families of Bugtown the black-banded and white-banded mining bees were perhaps the most important, if not the most interesting. These bees are morose, selfish individuals which do not make honey. They lived in tunnels in the clay, each female building a house of her own. They were partial to the Colonial type of architecture, insisting on an outside chimney, which served as a door. Each little den had a chimney, except during very dry seasons when the bees could not find water enough to moisten the clay so it could be molded by their tiny feet.



A close-up view of Bugtown, showing the chimneys made by mining bees and other dwellings occupied by the town's inhabitants.

Bees and Flowers

The bees and the flowers seemed in complete accord. The black-banded bees came out of their cells in the springtime just when the persimmons nearby opened their blossoms. They mated and built new homes and died within 30 days. As they died the persimmon blossoms drooped and withered, as if in mystic mourning. The white-banded bees appeared later, about the middle of July, and at the time when a white bind weed of the locality was flowering. They lived as long as the bind weed bloomed, which was usually until October. When the bind weed blooms fell, the bees died.

This was one of the wonders of Bugtown. What force held the bees back until the blossoms on which they were to feed and which they must fertilize, appeared? What unseen hand ended their life cycles when the blossoms vanished? They did not starve to death. Their mating had been accomplished, their nests made, their eggs laid and the young provided for; their work was done when the flowers died.

The Halictus bee family had its claims to distinction, also. It was the only family in Bugtown which lived in apartment houses. These houses were marvels of construction. Each consisted of a long tunnel or corridor. Off this corridor every female bee in the house had a room to herself. Up and down the corridor she would walk, having returned from her work afield, until she found her own room. And each apartment house had a doorway and a doorkeeper. The doorkeeper was a male bee with a triangular-shaped head. The doorway was made just large enough and of a shape to exactly fit his head. To guard the entrance against parasites or other intruders he would stand with his head pushed against the doorway, completely closing it. The bee architects did not make the corridors large enough for two bees to pass at the door. So they constructed a little alcove just off the door. Into this alcove the doorkeeper would back, like a solemn little horse into his stall, and allow the female bees to pass out or in!

The carpenter bees, which made their homes in runways gnawed through the timbers of the porch, proved to human visitors at Bugtown that bees find their way back to their dwellings, not by instinct, but by trial and error, just as human beings under similar circumstances would do. When taken from Bugtown and released they invariably flew aimlessly around until they spotted familiar landmarks. Then they marked their homeward courses by these signs. The life cycle of carpenter bees is short. Youngsters did not make their way back nearly so well as those older ones, the inference being that the older bees were more familiar with the country around the insect village. Old bees, found their way home almost without error. They had learned the lay of the land. In one case 32 bees were liberated at Riverside, a distance of 7.9 miles. Seven returned after various periods of from 6 to 36 hours.

The Ants' Cows

The ants that lived at Bugtown ranked among the intelligentsia, also. They were of the Crematogaster species and lived in a crack in a post in front of the clay bank. This crack they sealed with a waxy substance of their own manufacture. Their prize stunt, however, was to build sheds over their cows. The ants' cows, or plant lice or aphids, lived on shrubbery nearby. They excrete a sweetish milk-like fluid, which is the favorite food of ants. Feeding on plants, their habitat is of necessity restricted to one spot, and theirs is a stationary existence. In order to protect these cows, the ants set to work on sheds which they built of the same waxy substance used in sealing their homes.

In looking over the citizenry of Bugtown one might suppose that the doodle-bugs would be amiable, stupid creatures of no social standing whatever. Yet the Bugtown doodle-bugs, or ant lions, to be more exact and scientific—were sagacious insects, of sly and murderous natures. They lived in open pits dug in the loose sand at the base of the clay bank. All day long they squatted at the bottom of these pits, their hungry jaws open. For what? Ah! Consider for a moment the cunning of a doodle-bug.

An ant races across the sand in a hurry to milk his cow after a day's work, which consists mainly of being busy about nothing. He does not see the doodle-bug's pit, or if he sees it thinks he can skirt the edge with impunity. But not so. The crumbly edge gives way, and he tumbles down the shifting side of the pit. Frantically he tries to climb out. But the grains of sand give way and he loses his hold. Down he falls, straight into the open jaws of the wily doodle-bug. That is why this larva is called an ant lion. He gobbles ants. But his taste is not restricted to ants. If a bee or a spider or a wasp, half dead from old age, chances to fall into the ant lion's trap he will be gobbled.

PHIL RAU.

The anthology of Bugtown steadily grows more murderous as the historian progresses. Caterpillar-hunting wasps formed a large percentage of the population. They lived in burrows in the bank and ranged the vegetation around the clubhouse for their prey.

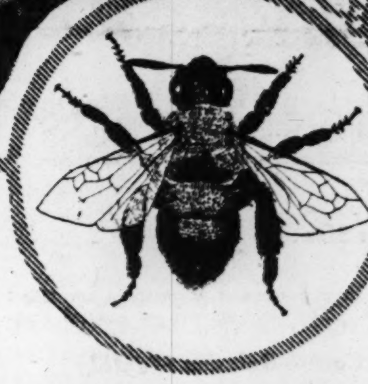
These wasps of Bugtown were unbelievably shrewd hunters. Their problem was to store up caterpillars at home for their young to feed on when hatched. Now caterpillars unless killed outright, squirm when captured. But it is not to the purpose of a wasp to have its prey squirm, nor does a wasp, apparently desire to kill the caterpillar. Dead caterpillars would soon decay and would be rejected by the dainty young wasps. The wasps of Bugtown, accordingly, had a method of handling their game which solved the problem. Mark this:

A Wasp Attacks

In the outskirts of Bugtown a caterpillar solemnly is feeding on the leaf of a weed. Taking observations in the sunlight above, a female wasp sees him. Down she darts, a tiny streak of yellow, straight at her victim. He may see her coming, but is too slow to find cover. In a trice she is on his back, biting in with her jaws just enough for a firm hold. He rolls and squirms. Quite deliberately, she twists her slender body around until she can feel with her needle-like stinger each segment of his body. Tenderly she probes, like a skilled surgeon seeking the vital spot. She is searching for the caterpillar's nerve center, the ganglia, as it is called.

Usually the wasp finds it about the middle segment. When she is sure she runs her probe in deep and injects the fatal poison. Almost at once the caterpillar ceases his struggles. His captor has paralyzed him. She can now carry him off to her den with little trouble. The startling part of the whole performance is that the caterpillar remains almost indefinitely in this state of suspended animation, and keeps fresh until the wasp larvae are ready to eat him.

Sometimes the first thrust is not always entirely successful. The paralysis wears off and the caterpillar squirms. The wasp then will sting him again. Another species in Bugtown, the Fulvipes wasp always prepares for such a happening, for she suspends her egg by a thread from the ceiling of her den where it would not be harmed if the caterpillars wriggled. Her sting is too weak for paralyzing the prey—she slightly pinches the neck.



The mining bee, Anthophora raui, which was found in the clay bank by Rau and named after him by the Smithsonian Institute. Rau has found and described 15 new species of insects during his studies.

In some species the wasp only ligntly stings the prey, but in others the work is so thoroughly done that sometimes the victim dies or only lives long enough to be eaten as fresh meat by the wasplings. At any rate, even if the prey should die before the larva emerges the fluid that is injected with the sting acts as a preservative.

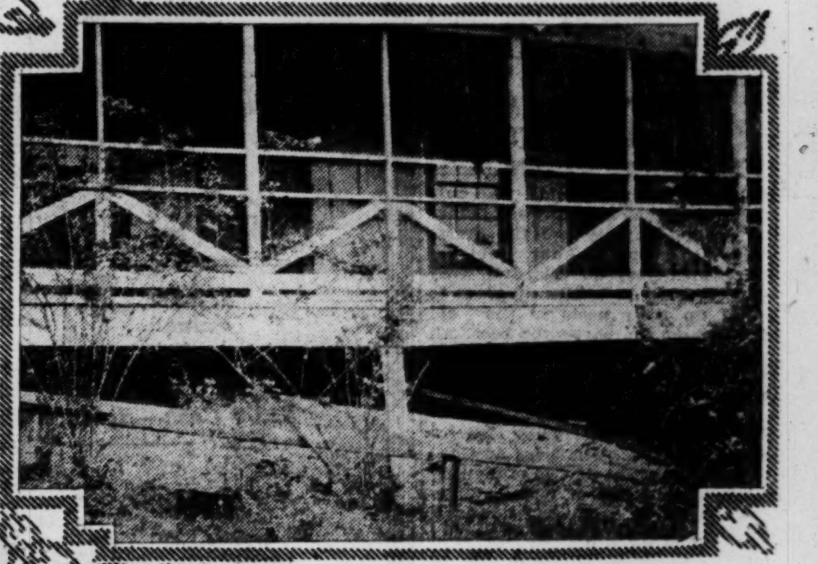
Another wasp family in the settlement, the Pompilid species hunted spiders. Sometimes, when the wasp was small and the spider large, she trimmed off the spider's legs, the better to handle it. Here, likewise, the wasp seemed to go beyond blind instinct for she seldom removed the same number of legs. Every indication was that the wasp trimmed the spider down to a weight she could carry —removing one, two or three legs according to necessity.

It might be said in passing that the Ammophila pictipennis, a species of wasp not found at Bugtown, but related to the families there is so advanced mentally that individuals have been discovered in the act of using tools in their work. Entomologists have observed them using tiny bits of rock to pound down the dirt around the doors of their nests, and in one instance recorded, an Ammophila used the leg of a grasshopper for pounding.

If Bugtown did not attract these superior creatures it did draw a colony of Trypoxylon wasps, which are the only wasp species that live staid, married lives. All other male wasps are rogues, but the Trypoxylon male is a home-loving little soul. His mate leaves him at home to watch the nest while she forages. He has a comical face with big, staring eyes, and this he thrusts into the doorway of the house. He is faithful and trustworthy. If removed from the doorway with forceps and set down some feet away he will scurry back to his door. When the female returns she apparently finds her home by knowing her mate's face. She will walk up to him, touch her antenna to his, as if in greeting, and order him out. He will advance an inch or so, allow her to pass in first and enter afterwards, or else ride in on her back.

The historians of Bugtown might dwell endlessly on the personalities and habits of the insects which lived there. In that mass of clay alive with crawling, hopping and flying things; catacombed with laboriously wrought homes, droning with industry, each species offered causes for wonderment. Spiders, tireless intrigants, laid their cunning snares in streets and alleys. Stick-bugs, those sinister footpads, prowled the rubbish in ambush against the passing of a wasp, a moth or a grasshopper. Kissing-bugs — what deadly kisses they gave—had liasons with wasps or spiders. Cow-bird wasps, burglars every one, broke into homes of other wasps and took them for their own. Chalcids and cuckoo-bees, sneakthieves all, crept into nests while mothers were away and laid their own eggs there.

Such were the inhabitants of Bugtown, workers and parasites, honest citizens and thieves, clever bugs and murderers. Bugtown's story is bigger than its individuals. There is yet the wonderful drama of environment to be told, and the still more wonderful tale of Bugtown as a community.



Another view of the clubhouse porch, showing the relative location of the clay bank, the side of which may be seen.

Temperature was the greatest factor in the life of the insect village. From October until the last of May the clay bank was dormant. Not a creature stirred. It took two weeks of an average temperature of 73½ degrees to bring the early emerging species from their cells. The late kind did not emerge until two weeks of 78 degree heat had warmed the clay. Then began the terrific struggle of these insect families for a place in the sun.

The black-banded bees, having a short life cycle, were able to hold their homes in the sunny portions of the bank against the parasites who also liked the sunshine. But the white-banded bees, living longer, were preyed upon when they sought to establish a place in the sun and, finally, were driven back to darkened sections of the bank. Both species showed, too, that they can work only in warmth and only in the sunshine. On cloudy, cool days they remained almost dormant. From the official annals of Bugtown let us quote enough to see how the weather affected its life.

"Aug. 30. The rain fell until 2 p. m. yesterday. After that hour no insects were abroad. The night was rather cold and today it was 10 o'clock before the first insect appeared about the bank. A black cricket poked his head out of one of the bee holes where he had spent the night. Soon several cricket-hunting wasps were scraping away the soil about their nests. A few specimens each of caterpillar wasps, Monobia wasps, carpenter bees and one each of Trypoxylon wasp, grass-carrying wasp and three white-banded bees were at work at their various duties of nest building. These were all observed at 11:30 a. m. and all seemed unusually industrious, as if to make up for the lost time in yesterday's rain. As it neared noon, the white-banded bees appeared in greater numbers, and the parasitic bee-fly made its appearance. That the sunshine was a factor in bringing out the bees was evidenced by the fact that only from the cells warmed by direct sunlight had the bees crept out to work. The mothers from the nests in sunny sites were the first to be active in bringing in loads of pollen while those nests not so favored showed no external signs of life.

Autumn Brings Death

October 3. Today, most of the individuals to be seen certainly give one the impression that they have outlived their allotted time. Three white-banded bees linger helplessly about, as if they have been overlooked by death and do not know how to conduct themselves in the land of the living where they no longer belong. Indeed, no activity is now possible for them, because the flowers from which they have gathered pollen are long since withered. Two caterpillar wasp mothers are feebly finishing the closure of their nests. Two or three Monobia mud-wasps are seen on the rafters above the bank, stunned and Protestant Episcopal Churches to Honor Signers of Declaration of Independence.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Plans for the placing of memorials in Washington Cathedral to the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and to the framers of the Constitution of the United States, will be announced today in many Protestant Episcopal churches throughout the country in connection with observance of "national Cathedral Sunday."

The Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Washington, has sent the following message to be read from the pulpits of the churches assisting in this undertaking:

"On July 4 when our thoughts turn to the founding of this nation under the Providence of Almighty God, working through a small group of men of deep religious conviction, I wish to bring to your attention our aspiration to some day place in Washington Cathedral adequate symbols of the faith of the founders of our country.

"No doubt you are aware that of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence, 34, or two-thirds, were by birth, baptism or family connected with the Episcopal Church. To my mind it is more than an accidental coincidence that two-thirds of the men who signed the Constitution of the United States at the close of that memorable convention in 1787 were similarly connected with our church.

"With the exception of Washington, Franklin and Jefferson, and perhaps a few others, no memorials to the combined churchmanship and statesmanship of these men have yet been erected in the capital of the nation they helped create."

THE TRUE LIFE STORY OF AN INSECT VILLAGE

half-dead with the cold. The only inhabitants showing any semblance of normal activity are the grass-carrying wasps. Four mothers have been busy all this dull, gray day carrying in blades of grass to build up their nests in the old burrows of the carpenter bees. All the creatures of the bank are now practically ready for their long winter's sleep."

Insects are affected, then by heat and sunshine. They also respond to light. The bees at Bugtown, flying home in daylight found their nests at once. When they came in at dusk, however, they spend moments hovering about the bark uncertain as to their nests. Often they made mistakes. It has been demonstrated, likewise, that bees find flowers more by the sense of sight than by odor. Experiments with colored paper disks on one of which honey was placed have proven that bees could pick out by color the disk containing the honey.

To further carry out the idea that the insects of Bugtown responded to their environment the historian should mention how the vegetation around the bank supplied small beetles, larvae and caterpillars to the antlions and spiders. The grass-carrier wasp used this growth in her nest-building, grasshoppers and crickets hunted by Bugtown wasps fed on this vegetation, and the spiders of Bugtown foraged in it for vegetable-eating insects. The persimmon flowers and white bind weed blossoms, as has been told, supplied the bees with pollen and nectar.

Thrown together in this community the weather and environment affected every inhabitant of Bugtown to a greater or less degree. But it was the inter-relation of the behavior of the insects at Bugtown that made them social beings.

The law of Bugtown was to eat and to be eaten. Without this balance in nature the Chalcid flies would have exterminated the black-banded and white-banded mining bees. But the Chalcids were in turn eaten by the spiders. The spiders were hunted by species of wasps, and in turn trapped other wasps. Kissing-bugs took their toll of the mining-wasps and other wasps fell into antlions' units and were devoured. Ants invaded the nests of other wasps to eat their young. Thus the wasps, which might have become dominant were held in a balance. So it went. When, for a time, it seemed as if some species would crowd all others out of their places in the sun, enemies arose to check it. Toads, lizards and birds raided Bugtown. Rains caught hundreds of species and drowned them. Or they were slain in fights with one another.

There was little of beauty in the life of Bugtown. Only the sun dances of the wasps, lovely sarabands against the sky, and the journeyings of the bees to dew-wet buds shed glory on that desperate struggle. The insects of the village were born to work, and mate, and build nests, and fight and die. To eat and to be eaten.

But they did not live to themselves alone. That was the one great lesson of Bugtown. Each species seemed to live its own life, to avoid association with any other species. Yet, inevitably they affected each other and the lot of Bugtown became the common lot of all. From doodle-bug to mining-bee a thread of union ran. "A man made Bugtown, and the insects found it good to look upon and it was settled." Yet, with pioneer came parasite, with the hunted came the hunter. No bee kingdom nor ant kingdom nor wasp kingdom arose to exterminate lesser insects and sway the scene. Each species had its part in the life of Bugtown, as if molded into a balance, a balance so delicate that only a social organization could have maintained it.

PROPERTY BOUGHT FOR ADDITION TO BROWN BUILDING

Paul Brown Buys Benton Hotel on Pine Street—Arcade to Olive Street May Be Erected.

MAY, STERN & CO. GETS 99-YEAR LEASE

Also Buys Structure It Has Occupied for 20 Years—Negotiations on for Large Buildings.

By Berry Moore.

The Benton Hotel property at 19 Pine street has been bought by Paul Brown, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., who recently acquired the Benoist Building, a six-story office structure at the northeast corner of Ninth and Pine streets.

Both transactions, which included the ground were handled by Isaac T. Cook & Co.

These purchases will provide for a Pine street addition to the Paul Brown Building, under construction on the site of the old Odd Fellows Building, at the southeast corner of Ninth and Olive streets, and will give Brown control in fee simple of approximately the entire west half of this block, with a frontage of 127 feet six inches on Olive and 232 feet on Ninth, and 7 feet on Pine street.

May Build Arcade.

Presumption is that the Pine street property primarily has been acquired for an arcade from Olive to Pine streets.

Isaac T. Cook & Co. has the management of the Arcade Building, and will be in charge of the new Paul Brown Building. Speculation is being indulged in as to whether the two buildings will have inter-communication.

Real estate circles are also speculating as to whether Brown may buy the Arcade Building.

The Benton Hotel property has a frontage of 57 feet on Pine street with a depth of 116 feet. It belonged to Fred D. Michaels. Michaels formerly owned the leasehold of the Laclede Hotel building and this, recently bought by a syndicate headed by Stanley Epstein.

May, Stern & Co. Gets Lease.

The May, Stern & Co., through its subsidiary, the Millard Realty Co., has acquired a 99-year lease of the site occupied by its building at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Olive streets, with a cash consideration for the building. The property has a frontage of 100 feet on the south side of Olive street and a frontage of 123 feet on the east side of Twelfth boulevard. It is owned by Theodosia W. Pleadwell of Washington, D. C., and Henrietta Wallace of New York.

The furniture company has occupied the building, an eight-story structure, for the last 20 years. Negotiations were handled by the rnet & Zeibig Trust.

The business section of the real estate market is in a buoyant frame of mind, with negotiations pending carrying large building plans.

ST. LOUIS SYNDICATE BUYS FLORIDA TOWN FOR $1,890,000

The Hickman Land Co. reports the sale of the town of Cedar Keys and Lukens, Fla., to a St. Louis syndicate. The price paid for it was $1,890,000. The Greater Tampa Investment represented the owners and will act as trustee for the St. Louis syndicate.

Cedar Keys is a deep water harbor of the west coast and it is believed by those familiar with the facts that it is to become the gateway to the coast. Plans are being completed for the building of the east coast trunk line and a State highway which will save from eight to nine hours' time by rail to St. Petersburg and Tampa.

TONY HURLEMAN ERECTS 19 BRICK BUNGALOWS

Tony Hurleman's building program so far this season consists of 19 modern brick bungalows located as follows: Six on Knox avenue south of Southwest avenue, up-to-the-minute bungalows on Watson boulevard between Arsenal street and Southwest avenue, nine complete homes on Sulphur avenue north of Arsenal street. Among those already sold are four on Knox avenue, six on Sulphur avenue and all on Watson boulevard. These buildings are of the finest construction, the best material available being used.

FRIDAY MUSICALES AT "THE MANSION"

Concerts to Be Given to Develop Residential Section on Davis Place.

A continuation of the Friday night musicales at "The Mansion" in Davis Place is announced by Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney and the Davis Realty Co., under whose auspices the concerts are given. A complete schedule of programs has been announced for every Friday evening up to and including July 31.

The presentation of high-class musical entertainment in connection with the development of a residential section is proving to be very popular in St. Louis. Already nine of these Friday night musicales have been given. In addition, concerts are given every Sunday afternoon and evening by the Anton Sextette.

The nightly entertainments are given on the veranda of "The Mansion" in Davis Place. "The Mansion" has been decorated and furnished by Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, and presents an interesting exhibit because of the unusual size of the rooms.

Interest continues to center in the modern duplex houses which are being featured in Davis Place. They are two-family dwellings built to resemble single residences. Each family is completely shut off from the other although the two homes are under one roof.

ENGLISH TYPE HOME BEING BUILT ON M'KNIGHT ROAD

The residence being erected for Alvan J. Goodbar of the firm of Goodbar, Tittman, Chapman & Gilster, located on the McKnight road, is of English type, a rambling country house commonly found in the rural districts of England.

The first floor is of plaster and the second and third floors, dark brown hand-split shingles. The house contains a large living room, dining room, pantry, kitchen and sun room on the first floor and five bedrooms and three baths on the second floor. The garage is in a wing under the main roof of the house.

WORK ON PATTONVILLE SCHOOL TO BE STARTED THIS WEEK

Work on the Fee Fee grade school building at St. Charles and Fee Fee roads, in Pattonville, will be starte dthis week, when ground will be broken. The building will have six class rooms on the first floor and an auditorium with a seating capacity of 250 persons on the second floor. It is expected to be completed for the opening of the fall term of school next September.

The structure, of Italian design, will be of stucco and brick. M. Boulicault is the architect.

CONSTRUCTION WORK ON NEW APARTMENT TO BEGIN SOON

Construction will be begun next week on the Monticello apartment building for which a site has been acquired at 4535 Lindell boulevard. The new building will be seven stories in height and will comprise 56 suites. It will represent the last word in buildings of this type.

The builder is John T. Cravens, who acquired the site through the Franciscus Realty Co.

Arrangements have been made with the Straus Brothers company to finance the structure, the cost of which is estimated at $550,000.

FOR ADDITIONAL REAL ESTATE NEWS, SEE PAGE 10.

ALL BUT SIX BUILDINGS ERECTED IN MARS PLACE SOLD

C. E. Cravens, sales manager of Wagoner-Grant-Bell Co., says he has sold all, with the exception of six buildings, that have been erected in the Mars place apartment district.

The Mars Realty Co., owner of the property, has constructed approximately 60 buildings in the district and appointed the Wagner-Grant-Bell Co. exclusive agents.

The president of the Mars company has decided to erect 12 more buildings and to keep the remaining 1400 feet available for builders who desire different types of architecture.

Cravens also reports two more leases have been affected for the new Wiltshire Apartment.

TWO WEST END RESIDENCES SOLD BY E. L. BAKEWELL

Dr. Lillian Arendale, through Edward L. Bakewell, has purchased 4404 West Pine boulevard, the former residence of Nathan Frank. The reported consideration was $19,000.

Bakewell also sold 7139 Pershing avenue, an eight-room residence, to Thomas M. Hawken for $19,990; 150 feet of ground on the north side of Cass avenue, just east of Jefferson avenue, for Oswald Trove to the Walsh-Coffey Mirror and Beveling Co., which company is now having plans drawn for the erection of their new factory building on this site.

$250,000 REALTY DEAL IN WEST END

Property on Delmar From Westgate to Melvin Acquired by Frank M. Rich.

The week's outstanding transaction in the West End embraced the southeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Melvin avenue and the southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Westgate avenue, including the entire frontage on the south side of Delmar boulevard from Westgate to Melvin avenue, which was acquired by Frank M. Rich. Reported consideration was $250,000.

The purchase, which is known as the Smith Block, consists of two-story buildings, comprising stores and apartments, with annual rentals aggregating $20,000.

The deal was engineered by Elmore Cave & Co., in connection with Herman Zurchel, the latter acting for the purchaser, with the Cytron Mortgage Co., financing the operation.

M. H. Rodemyer & Co., whose offices are in the Title Guaranty Building, have been appointed agents for the block, both as to sale and rentals.

This block is in one of the most active business parts of Delmar boulevard, and is regarded as one of the best on the thoroughfare west of Skinker road.

PLANS FOR INTERIOR OF BELL TELEPHONE BUILDING

Detailed plans for interior treatment and equipment of the new Bell Telephone headquarters building at Tenth, Eleventh, Chestnut and Pine streets, reveal numerous unusual refinements. A feature of particular interest is the underfloor duct system of telephone wires, making it possible to tap a telephone connection every five feet in any of the offices. Other wiring in the offices will be concealed in accordance with the latest practice.

Another unusual feature of the building is the dual provision for supplying heat and power. Two separate sources of electric service, one of the alternating type and one of the direct type, will be available. If one fails, the other will take up the service without interruption. The power system will utilize a 13,000-volt current, stepped down by transformers.

The boilers are equipped to burn either coal or oil and exceptionally large coal bunkers are a part of the equipment.

Throughout the structure, extensive fire alarm and watchmen's signal systems are to be installed. Every provision for the safety of Bell Telephone occupants and outside tenants is being made.

MONEY TO BE DROPPED FROM PLANES AT SOUTHWEST PARK

The dropping of money by airplanes, stunt flying by local aviators, a parachute jump and free refreshments will be some of the attractions given by the entertainment of visitors at Southwest Park, the Schollmeyer subdivision located at Watson road and Marquette avenue, this afternoon beginning at 2 p. m., according to A. R. Schollmeyer. Lieut. A. J. Smith of the 138th Regiment will be in charge of the flying circuit. Schollmeyer has announced purses containing various amounts of money will be thrown into the crowds from the planes as they fly over the grounds and the contents will belong to those who make the catches.

Robert A. Newsham, sales manager for Schollmeyer Development Co., lists the sale of lots to the following persons: Frank A. Gannon, secretary and treasurer of the United Railways; Edward Stauder and M. Arheiger of the same company.

Southwest Park is one of the largest developments in this end of the city.

A. H. SULLIVAN REMODELS HOUSE 100 YEARS OLD

Possibilities offered by ancient structures for modern homes is shown in the country residence of A. H. Sullivan, president of the A. H. Sullivan Foundry Materials Co., at the southeast corner of Geyer and Big Bend roads, Kirkwood.

This house, more than 100 years old, has been remodeled. The house is a stone building of 10 rooms, with floors of two-inch ash. The interior work is of walnut and the doors are of white pine. A picture of this house is shown on this page.

Joy Home

We would be pleased to have you inspect a beautiful English-designed home that we have just completed. This home is furnished by E. E. Schnoldt & Co. It has a side entrance hall, large living room with open fireplace, nice-sized dining room and one of those handy Joy kitchens and a breakfast room on the first floor; second floor, one master bedroom and two others and two baths. There also is a toilet and lavatory on the first floor. This home has hot-water heat and an attached garage which is heated.

This home is located on Parkhurst terrace, which runs south of Swon, between Gray and Jefferson av., the most convenient neighborhood in Webster, and I think the prettiest.

This home will be open for inspection from 9 to 9 every day until sold, so if you can't come to see it today, come some day or evening during the week

You Are Invited—

To spend Sunday (today) at "The MANSION," the exhibition home in Davis Place on Clayton Road. It is one of the coolest spots in St. Louis. The huge lawn is covered with shade trees and there are many things to interest you. "The MANSION," with its magnificent grounds, is being maintained through the Summer for the entertainment of the St. Louis public. An orchestra plays afternoon and evening on Sundays. You may bring your lunch and eat it on the lawn. Inside "The MANSION" is one of the finest exhibits of home furnishing ever arranged in the city. You may also inspect the new modern duplex houses that are under construction. They are the talk of St. Louis. You and your friends are invited to drive out today.

"THE MANSION"

An Exhibit of DECORATIONS and FURNISHINGS

The living room (28x36) and the dining room (22x36) of "The MANSION," one of the historic homes of St. Louis, has been completely furnished along modern, artistic lines. These are the largest rooms ever furnished for exhibition purposes in St. Louis. Two other rooms contain unusual effects in wall decorations. Thousands have seen and admired this exhibit. You are invited to see it today.

ST. LOUIS

—An Awakened Giant

The morning after St. Louis passed the $87,000,000.00 Bond Issue, St. Louis awakened to a new problem, that of preparing for a sudden increase in population.

A recent survey of the home building situation in the leading fifty cities of the United States shows that we are nearly three years behind normal building. That accounts for the fact that in March, 1925, St. Louis led nearly all American cities in an increase over 1924.

The St. Louis Star declared editorially that the St. Louis metropolitan district today has a population of over 1,100,000. "The City has outgrown its boundary line and the excess population is going out into the county," declares the Star.

A booklet "Our Billion Dollar Building Program," prepared by the Davis Realty Company, the third edition of which is just off the press, states that 250,000 new homes will be needed in St. Louis in the next 8 years.

St. Louis is not a pygmy city, unexpectedly shouldered with an unusual task. It is a giant thoroughly awakened to a new opportunity for testing its strength. Davis Place, the new residential development in the West End, will stand out with the Bell Telephone building and the bond issue projects as one of the great accomplishments in 1925.

Jesse L. Bowling, Architect

What They Are Building in DAVIS PLACE

The new type of Duplex home, a two-family dwelling which resembles a single residence, is being featured in Davis Place. Each family has separate entrance, drive, garage, heating plant, etc. Two homes under one roof, completely divided by a soundproof wall. Exterior plans must be approved by the trustees. Houses cannot be over 2½ stories and must have at least two bedrooms and bath on the second floor. May be owned jointly by two families, or one half occupied by owner and the other half rented. You can buy one-half of a Duplex for $15,000.00 and up, including ground ($30,000.00 complete). Over $300,000.00 in Duplex construction now under way.

The Week's Entertainment at "The MANSION"

Today's Concerts

The Anton Sextette, a group of well known artists personally directed by Mr. P. G. Anton, will give a popular program of favorite selections from 3 to 9 P. M. today. This is one of St. Louis' favorite orchestras. Comfortable chairs for everyone on the lawn and verandas. Special parking space for 1000 cars. Thousands have enjoyed these Sunday concerts and you will too.

Friday Night Musicale

Every Friday night is music night at "The MANSION." In response to a popular demand the ORPHEUS MIXED QUARTETTE will appear in concert Friday evening, July 10th at 8:30 P. M. The following well known St. Louis artists comprise the quartette. Thomas L. Spahn, Baritone; Clarence J. Bloemker, Tenor; Mrs. Karl Kimmel, Soprano and Mrs Maud Covington, Contralto.

California

CALIFORNIA farmers make more money on small farms in San Joaquin Valley, California, where you can work outdoors all the year. Splendid opportunities for men of moderate means; 20 and 40 acre farms produce alfalfa abundantly; dairying, hogs and poultry make good returns; staple varieties of fruits yields dependable profits; combination of these means a well-balanced farm, with good income throughout the year; winterless California offers much to the man looking for a country where he can get the most out of life; climate delightful; long growing seasons; co-operative marketing associations afford profitable outlets for all produce. A small one-family farm, cutting out high labor costs, insures success; no winter handicaps. San Joaquin Valley illustrated folder mailed free on request. C. L. ATTENTION, YOUNG MEN!

The real opportunity for the man under 50 years old to establish an independent income is in the Paper Shell Pecan Industry and as you probably know there is no place better adapted for this than in Southwest Texas because it is the natural home of the pecan. Can supply you tracts in Southwest Texas fully adapted to putting in pecan groves in sizes from 25 acres up. If you have a little surplus money you could do no better than to consider seriously investing in some land in Texas suitable for pecans.

To those interested will be pleased to hear from.

Also have large and small colonization tracts in Southwest Texas, available in tracts 5000 to 200,000 acres; priced right. F. A. COX, P. O. Box 1230, San Antonio, Tex.

In Malavres' pocket was found a picture of himself. On the back of the picture was written: "He who loses wealth loses nothing; he who loses health loses everything. Burn my body."

Bride's Brother Proxy For Bridegroom in Texas Wedding

Date Had Been Set Months Ago, but Illness Forced Change in Plans.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 4.—With the bride's brother, Eduardo Villela, representing the absent bridegroom by proxy, Miss Maria Guadalupe Villela of San Antonio was married in San Fernando Cathedral to Oscar Yaquiam of Mexico City.

The wedding date had been set months ago, but Yaquiam, a surgeon in the Mexican army, was detained in Mexico by the illness of his mother. Arrangements were made for the ceremony to take place as planned, with the bride's brother taking the vows for the absent bridegroom.

The proxy was arranged according to civil law, and when the necessary papers arrived here the plan was sanctioned by the Catholic Church.

Accompanied by her brother, Mrs. Yaquiam left today for San Luis Potosi, Mexico, where her husband will meet her.

WRITES HIS OBITUARY AND DIES

Oldest Attorney in St. Joseph Was of Mayflower Stock.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 4.—Henry Kirke White, oldest attorney in St. Joseph, who died here yesterday, wrote his own obituary shortly before his death, leaving blank spaces for the hour and the day in which death occurred. In a foot note at the bottom he wrote: "If the above be too long, less important sentences may be eliminated. I desire no additions. In the changes which time brings about, it may be necessary to change portions of the opening and last paragraphs."

White was 85 and was admitted to the Missouri bar more than 50 years ago. For years he had been the attorney for the St. Joseph School District and until a short time before death he attended meetings of the board. He was a direct decendant of the Mayflower White family. He graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1860 and Columbia College law school in 1862. He was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi and Phi Beta Kappa societies.

He requested that the St. Joseph Bar Association pass no resolutions concerning his death.

TO RAISE MEMORIAL FUND

Organization to Make Drive in Name of Late Louis A. Coolidge.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—A memorial fund, named for the late Louis A. Coolidge of Massachusetts, has been founded by the Sentinels of the Republic, of which he was head, to carry on the organization's announced program of preserving the fundamental principles of the Federal Constitution. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has been made chairman of the Memorial Fund Committee, whose other members include Secretary John W. Weeks, Howard Elliott and Major-General J. G. Harbord. An effort will be made to raise $200,000.

Under Louis Coolidge's direction the Sentinels of the Republic took an active part in the fight against the child labor amendment. The platform of the organization declares for preservation of constitutional principles by curbing encroachment on States' rights by combating socialism and by preventing multiplication of bureaus in Washington.

UNION PRESIDENT ATTACKED

Belleville Man Driving in Car Beaten by Three Men.

Edward Kiegley of Belleville, president of the St. Clair County Janitors' Union, reported to Belleville police yesterday that he was attacked by three men who stopped him early yesterday as he was driving on Lake drive, near East St. Louis. He is being treated at his home for facial cuts and bruises.

Kiegley told police the men stopped him and, after a brief conversation, struck him with their fists. They escaped when other automobiles approached. Kiegley obtained the license number of the machine and a warrant was obtained for the person to whom it was issued, said to be a resident of Harrisburg, Ill. He has not been arrested. Kiegley could ascribe no motive for the attack.

COAL MINE IS REPORTED FLOODED

Canyon Near Hay Junction in Which Fatalities Occurred Swept by 20-Foot Wall of Water.

By the Associated Press.

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., July 4.—Six persons were drowned at Hay Junction, twelve miles north of here late yesterday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding was caught in a flood resulting from a cloud burst.

The dead: Mrs. S. A. Fertig and her three children, Louis, 5; Robert, 3, and Leo, 2; Miss Sarah Casagranda, and Ben Andretta.

S. A. Fertig, driver of the automobile escaped. The dead are all residents of Winton, a Union Pacific coal camp near here.

One of the Union Pacific Co. coal mines was reported flooded and there is reported to be six feet of water standing on the Union Pacific branch line tracks.

The cloud burst came without warning and within a few minutes the little creek in the canyon at Hay Junction, in which the automobile was caught, was swept by a wall of water, said by witnesses to be 20 feet in height.

Rescuers began work as soon as the flood had partly subsided and found the body of Fertig under the car. Later the remaining five bodies were taken from the water.

Desert Cloudburst Damages Transcontinental Highway.

By the Associated Press.

BARSTOW, Cal., July 4.—A desert cloudburst four miles east of here yesterday sent a torrent of water across the transcontinental motor highway that picked up Tom Murphy's closed car and carried it 500 yards off the road to a railroad embankment.

Murphy, a merchant of Ludlow, Cal., on his way to Los Angeles, clambered to the top of his automobile and remained there until other motorists discovered his plight and threw a rope to him from the railroad tracks. With the aid of the rope he swam the swift torrent to safety. The highway was badly damaged.

OWNEDS OF MONKS MOUND ACCEPT $52,119 FOR TRACT

Appeal to Condemnation Suit for Illinois Park Site to Be Withdrawn.

Frederick Ramey and others owners of the 144.6 acres of land, comprising the historic Monks Mound, which was recently condemned for sale by a jury in the County Court at Belleville on proceedings instituted by the Illinois Department of Public Works and Buildings, yesterday accepted the $52,119 which was awarded by the jury in its verdict.

The money was accepted after the land owners had announced they would withdraw their appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court. The land acquired by the State will be used for the creation of a new State park, under a bill introduced in the Illinois Legislature by Representative Thomas Feketa of East St. Louis. The money was paid by County Treasurer Ross Adams of Belleville.

GERMAN METHANOL DANGEROUS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 4.—German methanol, whose importation is cutting in on the field of America's wood distillation industry, is dangerous to life under some conditions, according to a statement of Prof. Reid Hunt of the medical school of Harvard University, as reported by the American Chemical Society.

Use of synthetic methanol as a beverage or as an adulterant "will be followed by the same disastrous effects to life and vision as have characterized such uses of wood alcohol," this report indicated.

LONDON, July 4.—Final de onstrations of peace between L Oxford and Asquith, formerly He bert H. Asquith, and David Llo George were made last night a dinner of the Eighty Club. The ganization is composed of str Asquithians, who formed it as a sult of the war-time Liberal br which at times has threatened separate permanently the follow of the then Prime Minister, Lle George, and those of his pre cessor, Asquith.

Lord Oxford referred to Llo George as possessing the meth both of a seer and of a gladia through his happy endowment temperament, sleepless interest unfailing sympathy with the ne of the common people.

Lloyd George referred to "characteristic warm and gener tributes of Lord Oxford."

After this handsome hatch burying both liberal leaders pa on to discussing what is to be d to revive their party.

Lord Oxford consoled those pr ent with the reflection that at le twice previously the Liberal pa has been in domestic trouble eq to that of the present.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech c tained a veiled challenge to Pri Minister Stanley Baldwin to re troduce the issue of protection England. Lloyd George said th up to the present time Mr. Bal win had "simply mouthed sen mentalism as the head of a Go ernment 'sloss.'"

G. A. C.—Inquire of the moving picture magazine regarding the moving picture actor in question.

CONSTANT READER. — The cottonwood tree would not attract lightning any more than any other tree.

L. J. B.—President Coolidge received a vote of 190,871 in the City of New York in the 1924 election and Alfred Smith, Governor, received 326,753.

G. W. S.—Write to Gustav von Brecht, Vice Consul (Argentina) 1201 Cass Av., St. Louis, for the information regarding the Argentine.

INFO.—The Federal Life Insurance policies which are now being issued through the Post-Dispatch do not cover occupational risks; therefore if you are employed as a driver of a taxicab, you would not be entitled to insurance if you were killed or injured in any way while on duty. For further information regarding the offer of insurance, apply to room 714 Post-Dispatch Building.

MICKEY.—Perhaps your dog has ringworms, a parasite entirely different from the mange mite. It is contagious and appears on different parts of the body in circular patches bare of hair and affects usually the face, neck, forelegs and body, which cause slight itching. Try the following: Apply lightly every day mange medicine, undiluted to the bare spots. Every four days bathe the entire body in a hot bath, using a good flea soap. Skin diseases are always benefited by a course of iron and arsenic pills which can be obtained through your druggist. Ringworm and sarcoptic mange, called scabia in man, are often transmitted to humans. If this treatment does not help the dog you had better take it to a dog hospital, many of which are listed in the classified section of the telephone directory.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

SUBSCRIBER. — Usually the property is not sold for taxes until five years have elapsed. You can write to the Collector and ask him regarding a sale in a shorter time.

WALTER.—You can compel them to return the papers, if they still have them. However, if they did mail them to your old address, all you can do is to have the postoffice authorities trace them.

JASMINE—You have a perfect right to open your windows. (2) If the filling has broken your basement window, your neighbor will have to fix it.

AN EVERYDAY READER.—In Illinois he can have not more than 20 squirrels in his possession. However, it is unlawful to buy, sell or barter, or offer to buy, sell or barter, any squirrels.

O. S.—You will have to sell the property if they offer you cash for your equity in it. The purchase money receipt provides that they shall assume the deed of trust and they have a right to insist on doing this, instead of taking it up.

A COUNTRY READER.— Mr. B will have to pay the full amount due on the note. However, he can sue A and recover what he has had to pay. As far as we can see the bank did not violate any law in this transaction.

IGNORANT. — (1) If she married him after Sept. 22, 1922, she will remain an American citizen, no matter where she resides. (2) If there was a war, the man might be liable to military service both in his country of origin and in the United States. His wife's position would not be affected, but her property might be. (3) He can use his first papers and get his final papers in another State. To get his final papers he must have lived in the State where he is applying for them, for at least one year, and in the United States for at least five years, and his first papers must be not less than 2 years old nor more than 7 years old. (4) Children born in the United States are American citizens regardless of the nationality of their father. However, they may also be nationals of their father's country, under its laws.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

F. D.—Repeat your question, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

M. B.—In asking your question you do not state what disease the person is suffering from.

ROXIE.—There is no safe lazy way to reduce excess fat. Diet and regular persistent exercise is the only safe procedure. Do not take drugs excepting under a physician's supervision.

PAULINE E. H. — We do not know of anything, applied, which will remove the hair permanently. To remove the hair the hair bulb, or root, must be destroyed. The electric needle will do this and permanently remove any hair.

JOSEPH.—If unable to pay we advise you to enter the City Hospital for complete physical examination and necessary treatment, you probably have an arthritis, but this may not be all of your trouble.

MABEL. — We advise regular, persistent massage for the cheeks and chin. Local application will do no good. Plastic surgery should only be resorted to under exceptional circumstances. Improve the general health if possible.

LAURA. — Do not attempt to self-treat yourself in such a condition as yours, at least until you know what is the matter with you. Have a complete physical examination made. If unable to pay for this you can secure it at one of the free clinics or at the City Hospital.

MAJORIE B.—The use of hair removers does stimulate the growth of the hair and tends to make it come in thicker. (2) The use of peroxide does not stimulate the growth. (3) The hair of the head might not turn gray after the use of peroxide, but continual use would likely cause injury.

A LONELY ONE.—For bladder trouble, first have the urine examined. The following may be tried: Liq. potassae, 4 drams; tinct. hyoscyami, 3 drams; tinct. opii camph., 4 drams; Muc. Acaciae, 1½ ounces; aq. menth. pip., enough added to make 4 ounces. Two teaspoonfuls in water after meals. If necessary this dose may be increased gradually to three or four teaspoonfuls.

THE WIENSTROER FAMILY.

During 1924 the Post-Dispatch printed 37,091 Situation "Wants"—7452 more than the THREE other St. Louis newspapers combined.

CARD OF THANKS

To all our friends and relatives we wish to extend our heartfelt gratitude and sincerest thanks for their kind condolence and the beautiful floral offerings tendered in the time of sadness and bereavement caused by the death of our beloved husband and father, John H. Hynes. Especially we wish to thank Rev. C. C. Stahmann for prayers and kind words of consolation rendered, the pallbearers for their assistance and William Ambruster Undertaking Co. for their efficient and friendly services.

MRS. J. H. HYNES AND FAMILY. (c)

We desire herewith to express our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends and to the employes of the Pullman Car Co. for their sympathy in our sad bereavement in the death of our dear father and father-in-law and my dear brother, Charles Henry Bohn, and for the beautiful floral offerings. Especially we thank the Rev. William Hackman for his kind words of consolation.

MR. AND MRS. W. BORGELD AND MRS. MARY BELL.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear husband, Peter Geiger, who entered into rest July 5, 1918. Sadly missed by WIFE.

In sweet memory of a dear and faithful mother, Antonia Werner, who passed fearlessly into the great beyond July 4, 1919.
Sadly missed by ANNE.

In loving memory of my dear daughter, Josephine Finnegan Hesse, who departed this life July 7th, 1923.
Sadly missed by her
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, August Jablonsky, who departed this life one year ago, July 3.
Where the sunshine loves to linger
And the raindrops gently fall,
Sleeping there so peaceful,
Waiting for us all.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

In memory of my dearly beloved father, Charles A. Johnson, who departed this life three years ago, June 30, 1922.
Where the sunshine loves to linger,
And the raindrops quietly fall;
Sleeping there so peacefully,
Waiting for us all.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTER ETHEL.
East St. Louis, Ill., June 30, 1925.

In loving remembrance of our beloved daughter, Clara Flinn, who departed this life seven years ago, July 4, 1918.
Just a line of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory fond and true,
Just a token of love, devotion,
That our hearts still long for you.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER, BROTHER.

In memory of Edith Mary Hammerschmidt, who died six years ago today, July 5.
I see your little smiling face,
Before me all the time;
And I am so sure that you are here
I stop and look around.
But when I turn to take your hand
No Edith can be found.
God grant you eternal rest and let perpetual light shine upon you. Sadly missed by mother, father, brothers and sisters.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear wife and our mother, Minnie Kress, who departed this life July 9, 1924.
We saw you suffer, heard your sighs,
With aching heart and weeping eyes.
We saw you sinking hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power.
In silence you suffered, with patience you bore,
Till God called you home to suffer no more.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND DAUGHTERS.

In loving memory of our daughter and wife, Marie Schweinsberger (nee Huhn).
The golden sun is shining
Upon Marie's grave;
One we loved so dearly,
Tried so hard to save.
When we lost Marie
We lost our dearest pal.
We loved and missed her,
And forever shall.
So rest in peace, dear Marie;
Your place in heavenly bower.
The day when we meet
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, HUSBAND AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In loving memory of our dear son, Johnny Kiy, who departed this life one year ago, July 3, 1924.
We love him, but God loves him more—
He sweetly called him to the shining shore.
The golden gates were open,
The gentle voice said come,
With an unspoken farewell he sweetly entered home.
Sadly missed by father, mother, sister and all who loved him. (c)

In sad but loving memory of our dearly beloved son and brother,
FRANCIS P. HAWKINS,
who departed this life July 3, 1917.
Oh, vacant is the fireside chair,
The smile that is no longer there,
From door and hall, from porch and lawn,
The echo of that voice is gone,
And we who linger only know
How much was lost eight years ago.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHER, SISTER-IN-LAW AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving memory of dear daughter and sister, Mrs. Rose Ferry, who departed this life June 30, 1916.
The golden sun is shining upon our Rose's grave;
One we loved so dearly and tried so hard to stay;
And when we lost our Rose, we lost our dearest pal;
We loved you and we miss you and forever shall.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND SISTER.

In loving remembrance of my dear wife and our beloved mother, Louise Ashauer (nee Stuenkel), who departed this life 1 year ago July 6, 1924:
You left us when your loving heart,
With earnest hopes was beating high.
Too soon it seemed for us to part,
To soon, Alas, for you to die.
Life's battle fought, the victory won,
To nobler toils, pass to pass on.
Sadly missed by family
CHARLES ASHAUER, husband,
MATHILDA AND ADELE, daughters.

In loving remembrance of our dear son, Peter Mehlberg, who departed this life two years ago, July 6, 1923.
The golden sun is shining
Upon our dear boy's grave,
The one we loved so dearly
And tried so hard to save.
And when we lost our dear boy
We lost our dearest pal.
We love you and we miss you
And forever shall.
So rest in peace, dear son,
You're safe in heaven's bower.
The day when we shall meet you
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In saddest memory of our dearly beloved wife, mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Julia McCormick (nee Dowling), who departed this life three years ago, July 4, 1922.
Surrounded by friends we are lonesome;
In the midst of our pleasures we are blue—
A smile on our face—still our heart aches,
Aching and longing for you.
There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
There are wounds that cannot be healed,
There are sorrows down deep in the human heart
That cannot be half revealed.
Anniversary requiem high mass at 8 a. m., July 6, at St. Matthew's Church.
Sadly missed by the family. (c)

In loving memory of our dear daughter and mother, Edna M. Baer (nee Rueseche), who departed this life three years ago, July 1, 1922. Sadly missed by parents, husband, son, sister and brothers and cousins and the many friends that loved her.
Our home is no home,
Our daughter is not there.
The angels have taken her out of our care.
Dark is her room, empty her chair;
She has gone to her home, peaceful and fair.
A daughter true and kind,
No dearer friend on earth we'd find;
Therefore God grant her eternal rest.
Do not ask us if we miss her—
Oh, there's such a vacant place.
Oft we think we hear her footsteps
Or we see her smiling face.
We miss you here; we miss you there,
Oh, daughter, we miss you everywhere.

LARGE CLOAK CONCERN

Desires service of salesman well acquainted with trade visiting market. Permanent position, good salary. Application strictly confidential. Box A-80.

A Permanent $10,000 Connection.

For a man who has a record for consistent production in Specialty Selling.

Have you a good record selling advertising specialties, books, correspondence courses, service, securities or office mechanical equipment?

Are you accustomed to calling on chief executives and closing contracts in one interview?

Would you be interested in a permanent connection with a well rated, nationally known concern—with a business that has no sumps or off-seasons; an organization that has over 30,000 clients, many thousands of whom renew their contracts with us year after year, and through its extensive program of expansion has promoted over 20 salesmen to executive positions in the past two years?

If you are interested in joining such an organization and will prove your qualifications, we will give you a contract for an exclusive central west territory with full commissions on renewal contracts. With our support we can insure your getting into immediate production and big earnings.

We are serving thousands of the country's leading executives who endorse our plan which enables them to cut down their waste and increase their production at lowered operating costs.

Over 75 salesmen who have been with us from one ot six years earn over $8000 every year—our average man earns over $10,000 and every one of our executives has successfully sold our service.

We will interview by appointment only, so in writing state age, weight, height and selling experience for last three years, or phone Mr. P. W. Medley, care of Statler Hotel, St. Louis, Monday.

Weber Motor Car Company

Smashes All Records in Used Car Sales

Month after month we have broken all previous records in the sale of USED CARS. Again in JUNE we SOLD and DELIVERED MORE USED CARS than were EVER SOLD in any one month in the HISTORY OF OUR COMPANY. 130 BUYERS were made HAPPY by DRIVING away one of our USED CARS. THERE'S a REASON! We could not SELL USED CARS MONTH after MONTH, year after year as we have done if we did not give our CUSTOMERS a SQUARE DEAL. Our ONE PRICE plan enables the buyer who KNOWS VERY LITTLE about the value of USED CARS to buy just as CHEAPLY as the SHREWDEST BUYER in ST. LOUIS. Our FIVE-DAY TRIAL plan enables the buyer to GET A CAR that will PLEASE HIM. If the buyer of one of our USED CARS is not pleased with a car he buys from us, he can drive it for five days and any time during the five-day trial he can return it to us and all he has paid will be applied on the purchase price of any other car we have in stock, either NEW or USED. Nothing can be fairer than that. We have our lot illuminated so that our USED CARS can be inspected after night as well as if it were day, and you can still be in the OPEN AIR and not in a HOT, STUFFY SALESROOM. We have over 115 from which to make your selection. STUDEBAKERS in the Big-6, Special-6 and Light-6 in all models. OTHER STANDARD MAKES in TOURINGS, ROADSTERS, SEDANS and COUPES. FORDS from 1922 to 1925, all models. TERMS TO PLEASE YOU. OPEN DAY—NIGHT—SUNDAY. A SAFE PLACE TO BUY. ONE PRICE. FIVE-DAY TRIAL.

Ruth Fischer, Fat and 40, Sneers at Everything as Red Cohorts Cry "Phooy"

Leader of German Communist Party in Reichstag Stages Best Show in Town With Her Curses and Gyrations.

SAMUEL SPEWACK.

Berlin Correspondent of Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, July 4.—The German Reichstag is the best show in town at the moment. The cries of "phooy, phooy" from the opposition benches are best in years, while the "hear, hears" and the "sehr richtigs" show careful rehearsal. And Ruth Fischer is at her best.

Ruth Fischer is fat, forty and leader of the German Communist Party. She overflows in all directions, and when she addresses the house she has a vaudevillian shimmy that is unique. She belies the fiction that fat folk are good natured. Her bitterness knows no bounds. She would be a pessimist in Russia. She spends her life proving to herself and others how rotten the others can be. She has a sneer that would sink a thousand battleships. When she laughs you wonder why.

She Thrives On Hate.

Some one with rare originality once called her the Red Joan of Arc. If you can picture the fat lady of the circus inspiring the hungry masses to revolt then the description is apt. Apparently Ruth Fischer thrives on hate, although it is said she also appreciates good cooking. The number of revolutionists who do is amazing, but that is another and more pleasant story. This is concerened only with the wherefore of Ruth Fischer.

Her band of Red sneerers are in an enviable position. They are against everything. They have nothing to do with the Government and consequently everything the Government does is wrong.

Ruth Fischer sits on the extreme left of the House, interrupting all comers with a well-chosen cry of "Phooy!" When she is merely a super, she dresses in white, the symbol of womanly purity. But when she is booked as one of the party speakers, she chooses blue silk, a symbol of something or other. Her band consists of young men in velvet suits and black shirts, older men with shaved heads, and curious hunched little agitators who can't read without their glasses, and frequently with them. They supply the "hear, hears" as she talks, and the hoch, hochs to the soviet republic, and the down, downs with the Hindenburg monarchy, and the Socialists and the Catholics and the Democrats and the People's party and the Nationalists and the Fascisti and the capitalistic system and all the little what-nots that constitute German political being.

Over in the Government benches sits Herr Stresemann, and in the Nationalist division Admiral von Tirpitz, and slightly to the right Gen. von Ludendorff. To these Ruth Fischer addresses herself. To Stresemann she says:

"I suppose M. Briand will give you something for your good looks."

Now, Herr Stresemann is not a handsome man and he laughs good-naturedly. But Ruth Fischer is not satisfied with this. She goes on to accuse Herr Stresemann of enslaving the German people to high finance, and the Foreign Minister shouts irately: "But that's nonsense." It is only then she warms to her task. "Nonsense? It is not nonsense." Which ends the argument, and she proceeds to flay the Socialists, the Catholics, the Democrats and pauses to speak Gen. Ludendorff and sneer at the Admiral of the divided whiskers, and there are loud cries of—"Phooy!"

She Sits at the Telephone.

Do you know that the Dawes plan is Germany's curse? And that Bulgaria is shooting proletarians? And that France will not only trample upon Germany, but unite with it in a war upon Russia? And Poland is doing something perfectly horrible. And Czecho-Slovakia—you wouldn't believe it. And Britain—unmentionable. And America—words fail her. And Albania—shocking. But Russia—ah, Russia—some day the revolution will come to Germany. Workers of the world, uniite. You have nothing to lose but your lives, while Ruth Fischer sits at the telephone, not all alone, waiting for the valiant proletariat to capture the Wilhelm Strausse.

Shaved-headed gentlemen with dueling scars listen to her speech and smile. But their smile is somewhat uncertain. For they fear Ruth Fischer. She has no party organization. Moscow has cut the German communists adrift. The German worker has deserted the extremists for the Socialists. Yet they fear her. They fear her more than they do the suave Breitscheid, the Socialist leader. They fear her because they are afraid she may do what she says she will.

Democracy is based upon uncertainty. Dictatorship knows no quibbling. That is why the Parliamentarians fear the positive Miss Fischer. She can forge passports, travel under an assumed name, engage in conspiracies.

She can libel statesmen and nations, in and out of the Reichstag. And they fear her the more. They fear the fanatic in her. Yet they have nothing to fear. German communism is bankrupt. It had its opportunity and it lost it. Even Zinoviev conceded as much.

But there she stands, a little fat woman in blue, cursing the things that are shouting against time. And the little band of Red sneerers come to her rescue with loud cries of "Phooy!"

Some Urge Bare Feet.

There is a gentleman in Berlin who advocates bare feet as the saviors of humanity. There are not enough such gentlemen. If there were, they, too, would be in the Reichstag, and if they were emphatic enough the Democrats would tremble again.

You can picture the shoe manufacturers sitting in secret conclave planning the great fight on the barefooted bolsheviks. No after-dinner speech would be complete without the assurance that the nation was founded on shoes, and if civilization is to survive, so must shoes.

But Ruth Fischer's day is done. Two years ago she hesitated. She did not summon the revolution. She was content to let the Reds of Hamburg revolt all by themselves to the tune of 100 dead. Moscow became angry. The communist support was cut to one-third. She still is feared. But if she is at all honest, she must sneer at herself. She, too, once entertained a doubt.

She has been married four times.

CHANGES IN EPISCOPAL PRAYER BOOK ADVISED

Shorter Commandments and Omission of Obey From Wedding Ceremony Included.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Removal of "obey" from the marriage service; a shortened form of the Ten Commandments; elimination of the rubric, which forbids the use of the burial service over suicides, and omission from the Good Friday prayer invoking mercy, all reference to Jews, Turks and infidels are recommendations contained in the fourth report of the Commission on Prayer Book Revision of the Episcopal Church. Approval of the recommendations will be asked by the triennial general convention to be held at New Orleans next October.

One of the inspiring causes for the revision of the Book of Common Prayer, said Rt. Rev. Charles Lewis Slattery, coadjutor Bishop of Massachusetts and chairman of the revision commission, is a purpose to put the Episcopal Church in touch with present day life.

Mutual Obedience.

"We are coming to look upon the rights of men and women as equal," said Bishop Slattery, explaining the dropping of "obey" from the marriage service. "The pledge of the man, therefore, should be the same as the pledge of the woman. The life which is entered into in marriage is a life of mutual consideration and obedience, and not submission of one to the other on one side only." The change is not lowering the marriage vow, but rather raising it, he added.

The proposed change in the form of the commandments is recommended "so that the mind and heart will be reached more directly by the shortened form." It is pointed out that the use of the longer or shorter form will be optional with the clergy.

Regarding the burial service for suicides, Bishop Slattery said: "The burial office has been given more of a Christian hope and confidence. There is difficulty in deciding whether a person who commits suicide is responsible for his act. In many cases we feel sure that the person is not responsible for his act, and that the act is part of a serious mental disease. A hard and fast rule which bars all such persons from the privilege of the burial rite, adding grief to the sorrow of the surviving relatives, seems not true to the spirit of Christ."

The Good Friday collect, which invokes "mercy on all Jews, Turks, infidels and heretics," and which has given offense to the Jews, will read, if the convention gives its final approval, "have mercy upon all who know Thee not as Thou art revealed in the gospel of Thy Son," etc.

Provides Prayer for Dead.

Another revision of the prayer book to which significance attaches is that prayers for the departed are provided for in the revised burial service.

Prior to 1916 there was in the prayer book no prayer for the departed, although many regarded the latter portion of the prayer of the church militant in the communion office as impliedly a petition of this sort. In 1916, however, with the World War waging and world-wide prayers being offered for those who were falling in battle, a new prayer "For [illegible] Days" was agreed upon [illegible] impressive debate by the [illegible] convention meeting in [illegible] This prayer, the use of [illegible] made merely permissive, [illegible] fied in accordance with [illegible] visions of the church [illegible] in 1919, whereby the [illegible] prayers for the departed [illegible] ognized. PINCHOT ASSAILS DRY ENFORCEMENT UNDER MELLON

Governor Asserts Secretary of Treasury Has Failed to Carry Out Duties of His Office.

HOPES ANDREWS WILL GET RESULTS

Pennsylvania Executive Asserts Responsibility for Defiance of Law Rests Partly on Citizens.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 4.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon "has refused to carry out the duties of his office," in the enforcement of the prohibition law, Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania declared in an address before the convention of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor tonight.

"The bootleggers are bold," Gov. Pinchot said, "because they know that the Government of the United States has never yet determined to put an end to their criminal traffic. They know, you know, and I know that the Treasury Department could have set its foot down at any time and removed this scandal from the good name of the United States.

"Secretary Mellon has for four years had the power and the money, and by driving politics out of the enforcement service he could at any time have had the men. He has refused to carry out the duties of his office, and far too many of the good people of the United States have openly or tacitly supported him in that refusal, because they figured that Mellon was good for business.

Had Whisky Interests.

"Secretary Mellon, for the better part of a generation a whisky distiller and whisky distributor and only within the last few weeks divested of his interest in millions of dollars worth of whisky, was chosen to enforce this law and accepted the responsibility for enforcing this law. The result, and the natural result, is known to every man and woman who cares to think.

"I hope most earnestly that the appointment of Gen. Andrews as head of the law enforcement service of the Treasury Department means that this abominable situation, this scandal which by the shameful failure of the Government itself has outgrown every measure, is about to be taken in hand honestly, vigorously, and with the intention of getting results. When that happens, the day of the bootlegger will rapidly draw to its close."

The responsibility for "open defiance of law" also rests partly on "the citizens who have tolerated it when they could have stopped it, for in such matters the people have all the power," Gov. Pinchot said.

"Defiance of Will of People."

"The criminal elements of our population," according to the Governor, "are banded together from one end of this country to the other to pour poison into the mouths of our people, to instill disrespect of the law in the souls of our people, and to hold up the hands of every anarchist, bolshevist or other enemy of our institutions. No such widespread defiance of the will of the people has ever been known in America, and no such flood of poverty, crime, disease and death has ever before flowed from such defiance."

Gov. Pinchot also discussed the giant power problem, saying "we are at the beginning of a new electrical civilization which will be as different from that of steam as the age of steam was from the ages which went before it." He warned that giant power would mean a monopoly, of which there must be "effective public control."

The Governor in opening his speech attacked "those people who believe rightly and whose personal lives are blameless" but who refuse to fight for their beliefs. "A huge part of the blame for the evils which exist in our body politic rests squarely on the church-going people," who, in Roosevelt's phrase "mean well feebly," the Governor said.

New York Minister Heard.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, minister of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York City referred to the Christian Endeavor movement as "the most important coeducational enterprise for youth in this generation." Dr. Boling said that the message of Christian Endeavor to the world is, "Have faith in youth." Continuing, he said:

"Stop slandering youth! Let the adult generation first set its own physical and moral and spiritual house in order. Live decently before youth. Give time and attention to him and have faith in him. This is the message of Christian Endeavor to the world!

"Have faith in youth, for youth is instinctively loyal, loyal to God and Jesus Christ. He is instinctively religious; loyal to his country, for he is instinctively patriotic; loyal to all of life, for he is supremely alive. A finer, cleaner, more normal lot of young men and women no generation has ever produced. In my whole life as a minister I have never known young people to fail when appealed to on the plane of sincerity and honor."

IRISH INDUSTRIES ARE BEING BUILT UP UNDER MINISTER OF COMMERCE

Railroads United in One System, Money Lent to Traders, River Shannon to Be Harnessed for Power.

By WILLIAM H. BRAYDEN.
Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Dailys News.
(Copyright, 1925.)

DUBLIN, Ireland, June 5.—Till the establishment of the Free State Ireland had no voice in framing an economic policy. While Ireland remained part of Great Britain it was subject to British economic policy. That policy was framed with sole regard to British interests. This was freely admitted by British political economists, and regarded as an essential necessity. W. A. S. Hewins, one of the most eminent of British economists, put it in one sentence when he said: "When we discuss the probable effects of a change in British policy we rarely, if ever, take account of Ireland."

The problem of British economic policy towards Ireland was very simple. The object was to encourage Ireland to raise cattle and turn out dairy products—commodities which Great Britain required to an extent far in excess of her own possible production—and to discourage the establishment in Ireland of manufacturing industries. Ireland's role was to supply England with food and receive in exchange British manufactured goods.

The result is that today more than three-fourths of Ireland's production is purely agricultural and that Ireland is one of the largest consumers of England's manufactures. Such industries as exist in the Free State, with the exception of the manufacture of whisky and porter, are in a depressed condition. Unemployment is widespread and industries have been obliged either to close down altogether or work on short time.

Ministry of Industry Created.

Needless to say thoughtful Irishmen were alive to the disadvantages of having their commercial interests wholly committed to British hands. In the early days of Sinn Fein, long before there was any thought of armed revolution, the leaders of the movement concentrated on this point. Arthur Griffith in one after another of his newspapers—a new one started when the old was suppressed—poured forth articles on Ireland's economic needs and the natural resources with which they could be met. As long as British rule remained, efforts at substantial reform were hopeless. But when the Free State came into being the time had arrived for profiting by the lessons of Griffith and his colleagues. And one of the first acts of the new state was to establish a Ministry of Industry and Commerce. This is now the busiest of all the Free State Government departments.

The Ministry of Industry and Commerce combines all the functions discharged in Britain by the Board of Trade, the Overseas Department and the Ministry of Labor. Its purpose is to develop industry and commerce in the Free State by every means in its power. It supplies manufacturers and traders with all available commercial intelligence and keeps them informed of all possible home and foreign markets for their produce. In conjunction with the Ministry for External Affairs it has appointed trade representatives to a number of important capitals abroad and arranges trade conventions with foreign Governments. It lends money to Irish traders to enable them to develop their businesses. It administers the companies acts and the shipping and canal acts. It controls unemployment insurance and one of the most important of its activities—it does its best as a mediator in settling strikes.

The matter of transportation in Ireland has always been a vexed question. Irish railways were run and rates were fixed largely in British interests. It was often cheaper to carry goods from an English manufacturing center into the heart of Ireland than to send from one Irish town to another. There were 40 or more railways in the country, each with a separate staff and board of directors. The various lines displayed an embarrassing independence of one another. The time tables seemed often designed to make connections as difficult as possible, and passengers changing from one line to another often found that the trains they meant to catch had departed.

Some of the big lines were excellent and they were mostly allied with one or another of the great British companies and shared in their rivalries. Reform of the Irish railway system was a pressing need. The Free State at once appointed a commission of inquiry which, after an exhaustive hearing of evidence, recommended nationalization of all the lines.

Railways United.

It was a policy that had been advocated. It was favored by the labor party. But the government was not prepared for so huge an undertaking and doubted its wisdom. It thought a better result could be obtained otherwise and decided on a policy of compulsory unification. This, it was supposed, would give them the advantages of nationalization without its responsibilities and risks.

The 40 separate boards of directors were swept away. Superfluous officials were pensioned off or compensated for loss of office. There is now only one railway company in the Free State—the Great Southern Railway. The rolling stocks have been pooled. The shareholders in the various companies had to exchange their stock at a price fixed by the government's railway tribunal for stock in the unified company.

The benefits of the change were soon most apparent on the poorer lines whose services were improved. Passengers saw with pleasure carriages from the good in use on the poorer lines.

The railway tribunal did not stop at unifying the lines. It compelled a general reduction of 12½ per cent in the rates charged. Undoubtedly there has been greatly increased efficiency. But the company complains of the cost. At the moment the unified line is being run at a weekly loss estimated at £15,000. This, of course, cannot last.

One way of diminishing the loss is to reduce the workers' wages, which remain at a figure far in excess of that prevailing before the war and in excess of the wages paid in Great Britain and in Northern Ireland. The workers resist reduction and a court of arbitration, composed of all parties, has made on the subject almost as many divergent reports as there are parties represented. The Minister of Industry and Commerce, Patrick MacGilligan, will have all his work cut out to solve the difficulty without an interruption in the railway service.

MacGilligan is a new type of minister. He replaced Joseph MacGrath, who was first appointed to the office and who resigned because of political differences with the Government. MacGrath was one of the fighters in the revolt. When negotiation was opened with the British he was one of the emissaries sent by Eamonn de Valera to Lloyd George. He supported the treaty, but he came to the conclusion after a time that the results of the revolution were not satisfactory, that too much was made of the old enemies of self-government and too little of the men who had accomplished the revolution.

An Able Minister.

MacGilligan is an entirely different type of Minister. His sympathies always lay with the Sinn Fein movement. He is a university man and in the Dail represents the National University. He knows Greek. When he was appointed members of the Business Men's party criticised the appointment on the ground that he could know nothing of business. It was no advantage to know Greek. There seemed nothing forceful about his personality. His first speeches in the Dail were timid and halting. His frail figure and general air of intelecualism gave no promise of a successful parliamentary career and the first impression was that President Cosgrave in putting him in charge of the industry of the state and bringing him into the Cabinet had made an error of judgment.

But though that is less than a year ago, MacGilligan is now one of the foremost men in the dail. In public estimation and in the estimation of the Dail, including its business members, he ranks next after the President and the Vice President. His timidity was all on the surface. Beneath was a character as rigid as steel. His manner on all nonessential matters is conciliatory and accommodating. But where important policy is concerned he has his way. If his office does not kill him he will be one of the Free State's most valuable assets. He comes from Derry and speaks with the characteristic accent of the North.

His chief assistant in the cital work of his department assuredly belongs by birth and tradition to the old regime. It is usually unsafe in Ireland to assume that a man shares the opinions of his father. Of himself the Hon. Gordon Campbell, chief official of the Ministry of Industry and Commerce, has no political history. His father, Lord Glenavy, chairman of the Senate, was better known as Sir James Campbell, the fidus Achates of Lord Carson in his Ulster campaign. Perhaps this may account for Joseph MacGrath's dislike of the Free State's permanent officials.

But there is no denying Gordon Campbell's competence. He was not taken over from the British regime. But during the European war, when Britain collected for the public service all the ablest men it could find, it used Gordon Campbell in one of the numerous departments of its war activities, and he made a name for himself as a man of exceptional talent in dealing with great affairs. He is indeed, strong enough to steer a weak minister. But nobody could steer MacGilligan in any other direction than the one he wanted to go. The co-operation of these two men is a combination well suited to the heavy job of resurrecting Irish industry.

To Harness the River Shannon.

If the Ministry of Industry and Commerce confined itself to the work immediately belonging to it, it would have, one would imagine, enough to absorb all its energies. It has in addition entered on a project of the most grandiose character, long in the region of unattainable dreams. Ireland has little or no coal. It cannot hope to build up, and does not desire to build up, an industrial organism like that of England. But it has water power. The idea of MacGilligan, now being brought to fruition, is to utilize the water power of the River Shannon to supply cheap electricity to every part of the country and so help in the creation of many small industries.

One branch of Irish production has a special department to itself. The sea, like the land, has a Ministry of its own. The Ministry of Fisheries is concerned not only with sea fishing but with fishing for amusement or profit in the Irish rivers. Fionan Lynch, Minister of Fisheries, has promoted acts in Parliament to regulate the industry. The administration of sea fisheries has been much improved. Irish fishermen have suffered much in the past from the inroads of foreign fishermen. The Free State has made use of its new powers to approach the French Government on the matter and the French Ministry of Marine has been induced to issue instructions warning French fishermen against fishing in the territorial waters of the Free State. This forms a precedent which, it is thought, may be useful in restricting the raids of British trawlers on the Free State's inshore fisheries.

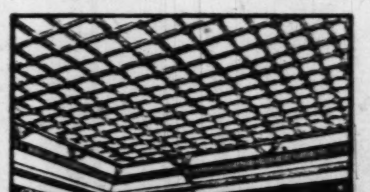
and easy to keep always clean

For Many Building Purposes SHEET STEEL

Insures Greater Safety—Better Appearance —Great Economy



Steel ceilings are made in many artistic patterns and finishes. They are permanent, fire-resisting and have only to be wiped off with a damp cloth to be continuously clean and attractive.

Steel is in general use for cornices, canopies and ornamental work, because of its strength and staunchness with light weight, and its resistance to fire.

Steel garages can be quickly erected at moderate cost, are strong, can be safely locked, and their fire-resistant qualities provide secure protection for the car.

A steel roof, properly grounded, insures safety from lightning. For the farmer, sheet steel has many advantages, for roofing and siding houses, barns and outbuildings; for bins, tanks, barn and ventilating equipment and for rat-proofing.

BATTLESHIPS and ocean liners, speeding trains and automobiles, all are made safe and strong by steel. Ponderous bridges, towering buildings, great engineering works, have skeletons of steel. Where safety, strength and durability are essentials, steel is used.

And this same wonderful material—strong, tough, pliable—in the form of sheet steel, lends itself to a wide range of service, in manufacturing, in building construction, in industrial applications and in office, store and home. Sheet steel is always available, moderate in cost, easy to handle, easy to form and fabricate.

The Material of Universal Adaptability

Steel roofing provides sure protection from weather and from fire. It is economical and easily applied and gives long service. It is made in many forms, for all requirements and architectural effects. For cornices, skylights, canopies, ventilators, spouting and other construction uses, the strength of sheet steel, with its light weight and resistance to fire and wear, makes it the most logical material.

For industrial applications — conveyors, driers, stacks, tanks, heating and ventilating installations and material handling equipment—sheet steel is preferred and used by leading engineers.

Beauty of Appearance

During the last few years manufacturers who make things from sheet steel have learned the art of applying to this durable material beautiful coatings and enamels in great variety. Steel furniture, for example, is just as beautiful as the finest grained woods. So are steel doors, window casings and frames, radiator covers and humidifiers. In almost any application of sheet steel, you can now have artistic and charming appearance as well as the strength and resistance to wear that naturally follow the use of steel.

Our Booklet: "The Service of Sheet Steel to the Public," will bring you many interesting and valuable facts about sheet steel and its uses. Write for it. We will gladly send you a copy free.

Ring Lardner's Letter to the Editor

I set down in the dark and see how many songs I could remember.

TO THE EDITOR:

All I know is what I read in the papers and we ain't been getting none lately on acct. of the lady news dealer at Great Neck having a peculiar idear that you ought to pay for them once in a wile, so this wk. will half to try and satisfy you with a few of my personal experiences in regards to matters that concerns only myself and what I lovingly refer to as my Long Island public and I realize it may not maybe be interesting to you so don't stay away from church or lodge to read this article.

Well in the first place it seems they was another benefit show the other day for the Authors league of America which I am one of them through a slight misunderstanding but any way this show was to be put on at a place called Jackson Heights which you can't avoid passing it when you drive in to N. Y. city from where we live and the boys in charge put up big posters all over Long Island saying who was going to be in the show and my name was amongst same and between you and dear reader I hadn't never been consulted and don't never appear in shows except a little pantomime once in a wile during the few minutes it take me every 3d. day to shave.

So I didn't pay no tension only to wonder what and the he—ll and at noon time on the day the show was coming off the phone rung and her who I always think of as the madam answered the phone and it was George Creel, formally of Kansas City on the other end of the wire and my madam talked to him civilly on acct. of he being Blanche Bates' husband and he exclaimed that he was in charge of the show and wanted to know if I would be sure and show up. So the madam said why my husband ain't never been informed that he was to take part in no show and Mr. Creel said we realize that and the reason we are calling him up so late is because we figured that if we took him by surprise he might consent to take part. Well it was a well thought out scream and the only trouble with it was that by that time I was in Philadelphia spearing hazel nuts so I guest the show must of been a flop, at lease I have seen several people since that was in attendants and they all looked just the same as ever.

Another big event down our way was the opening of the Lakeville golf club which after you have paid the initiation fee to same, why you don't half to worry no more about where you are going to go for the summer because you ain't going no place. The Lakeville club has got a club house as big as the Yale bowl and if you go in the front entrance and from there to the caddy house to get your clubs, that counts for nine holes and you only half to play nine more.

In regards to the golf course I was only over it once but managed to make a few changes in it though as a rule I left the fairways alone. They have got a great time saving device on the first hole. On most golf courses when you slice your drive off of the first tee it takes a long wile to find out where did it go to. On this course they have imported one of the Great Lakes to catch these kind of drives and you can keep on playing without no doubt in your mind in regards to the whereabouts of your tee shot.

The first gleam of hope for a golfer of my caliber occurs at the fourth hole which seems to be the first hole that wasn't laid out by Nurmi. I come within two strokes of making a birdie on this hole and speaking about birdies, why I and the funny looking golfer I was playing with was disgusting the question of why do they talk about birdies and eagles and if so, why don't the delve further into the archives of the Audubon society and pick out some nicknames for the kind of golfers we are.

Like for inst. suppose they's a hole that the par for same is 4 and you make a 5. You might call that a parakeet which in Brazil means par (par) akeet (not quite). If the hole is a par 4 and you take 12 shots without getting towards it and finally you pick your ball up, that would be called a hoot owl on the grounds that if you kept on you might make it during the night.

That is about all the news except that the other evening it sprinkled which means that the electric lights went out and so did the telephone and of course that happened to be the night when I was planning to read a few chapters of the old testament to say nothing about expecting a call from the White House but instead of that had to set down to the piano and see how many songs I could remember.

And oh yes I recd. another one of these chain letters which says if you will keep up the chain you will have good luck and it met its final resting place in my house namely the waste basket. Let them send me a letter that guarantees good news and I will act different towards it. I don't need no luck.

When the Lid Comes Off at Deauville

A season of unparalleled gayety is in prospect at France's gayest summer resort, following the election of a Mayor whose platform favored complete liberty of action.

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

OFFICIALLY the season at Deauville does not begin until Aug. 1. And it lasts but 25 days. But lighthearted, heavy-bankrolled visitors who arrive in July will find the lid off in anticipation of their arrival. For there is a new Mayor of the famous seaside rendezvous of fromage and frivol who has inaugurated a reign of love and liberty.

Not that Deauville has ever felt the heavy hand of Puritan restraint—far from that! But the natives, and especially the proprietors of the hotels and casinos that retail exclusiveness to the thick billfold want an even bigger season this year than ever before. No interference with the visitor in the pursuit of pleasure will be tolerated. Henri Letellier will see to that.

Henri Letellier, millionaire sportsman, inheritor of the Paris Journal and one of the most popular men in France, is now Mayor of Deauville. When he was nominated for that office a few weeks ago, M. Letellier, who is not only a connoisseur but a liberal patron of the best in feminine beauty in the world, formulated a platform. Unlike the platforms of our Republican and Democratic parties, it had only three planks:

Any girl can wear any kind of a bathing suit she likes.

The sky will be the limit for gambling.

All closing laws to be abolished.

The result was the virtually unanimous election of M. Henri Letellier.

Of course it was matter of fact in Deauville that if they could persuade the great Letellier to run no one else would have a look-in. For this tall, sallow Parisian is the head of the Deauville Holding Co., the company that operates the Casino and the two leading hotels, the Normandy and the Royale. True, Eugene Cornuche is usually spoken of as the King of Deauville, being the active head of the big enterprises there. But M. Letellier is the kingmaker. It was Letellier who furnished Cornuche, once a humble dishwasher, with the funds to build the hotels, casinos, shops, etc., that make Deauville what it is today. For years the kingmaker was content to remain in the background. M. Cornuche reigned supreme, at least as far as the average visitor was concerned. But this season there won't be any question who is the real monarch. He will be Letellier. All honors and perquisites of that exalted station will go to him.

IF the coming season—I refer to the official 25 days in August—is to be gayer than any previous season, Deauville's visitors will have to take notice of Henri Letellier's platform. For if bathing suits—those worn by the dear fair sex, of course—are any smaller than those I have seen in seasons past they will have to be virtually invisible.

Bathing suits—in name at least—have always been required. But as M. Letellier has announced that "any kind" of a suit can be worn it is certain that some young women from Paris will "think up" suits that even Mother Eve never dreamed about.

It must be stated, however, that bathers at Deauville—even the males—wear peignoirs. So, even an almost invisible bathing suit is pretty well covered on the beach. Still, Americans do not travel 3000 miles to Deauville for nothing. As in America, nifty bathing suits in France are designed to be seen rather than for utilitarian purposes. So if you are starting for Deauville and have anything the matter with your eyes, I'd suggest that you visit a good oculist right away. If you miss anything along the beach it will be your own fault.

Even in advance of the real opening of the season I saw Maud Loty, one of the most eccentric of Parisian actresses, bathing with a novel leg ornament made from a gold band beaten into a form of a snake, and which was coiled just above her knee. Her fuzzy hair was gathered in at the sides and stood straight up on top of her head, the coiffure resembling nothing so much as the headdress affected by the women of some African tribes.

M. Letellier's announcement that the sky will be the limit for gambling will interest comparatively few persons. For the vast majority of visitors at Deauville risk only a few thousand francs. It is only certain great captains of industry, a few big theatrical specialists and stock gamblers whose play runs into the hundreds of thousands and even millions. And they number less than a hundred, even including the few Oriental potentates and lesser royalties who visit the Casino during the height of the season.

M. Letellier's new decree that all closing laws shall be abolished seems somewhat superfluous. For, although the public gambling rooms of the Casino shut down when the last few players decide to call it a night, the private rooms are open as long as any one has money to play.

WHAT the King of Deauville doubtless means is that everything will be wide open—a fact that will be reassuring to those who have not known the resort in the past.

At any rate, everything is in readiness for the greatest season Deauville has ever expected. I have not enumerated its racing, its opera, its yachting, or any of its other well-known attractions. For this year its "Reign of Love and Liberty" will be its drawing card.

And as M. Lettellier is still a widower—it will be recalled that his name was once linked with that of Peggy Hopkins Joyce—there may yet be an American Queen of Deauville.

King Henri I—or Mayor Letellier, if you prefer—some years ago married a beautiful American girl, Peggy Gillespie, who died shortly afterward. In fact, it was a deathbed wedding, as the girl was in the last stages of tuberculosis. He is very susceptible to feminine charms, and it must be remembered that he is a Frenchman. So it may be an even greater season for Deauville than M. Henri imagines at the moment.

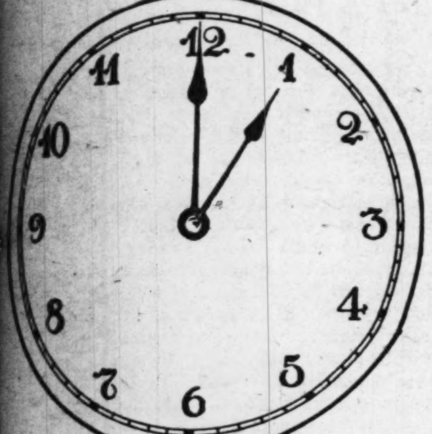
Where Time Truly Is Money



In this unique Nebraska community the dollar is unknown; labor is paid for by credits of hours and minutes; a woman who gave birth to a baby was paid 365 days for her contribution to the general welfare; when a member wants a pair of shoes or any other commodity, he goes to the store and draws on his time credit; this system makes pockets of all hands robber-proof, and other advantages are claimed for it by the founder.

By T. R. PORTER.

A CURIOUS community, in which money is of no value and cuts no figure, has just been found in the Benson suburb of Omaha. Members of the community in the Nebraska metropolis, when talking amongst themselves, never use the word "dollar." They use "hour" instead. Instead of cents, minutes are the units of value.

In dealing with "the outside," as those who are not members of the community are called, the members talk dollars, but never amongst themselves.

The community keeps everything in common. It has a store all its own. It is a regular "country store" and deals in everything, from thread to marbles, to breakfast food, to gasoline. When "the inside" buy, they pay in "minutes." When "the oustide" buys, it pays in cents.

The name of the community is the "Commonwealth Co-Operators." It has been in existence four years. Its leader, originator and guiding star is C. C. Mickey.

Religion does not enter into the community at all. That is, the community has no required religious beliefs. Its members can belong to any church, or to no church, just as they please. The organization is purely an economic one, with a plan which its members say will become eventually the accepted plan of the world, banishing want, poverty, strife, theft, crime, war and everything else that is not desirable.

THE earnings of the entire community, when it works "outside," goes into the common treasury. And the individual who performed the labor, collected the money and handed it over to the community fund, is given credit for so many hours of work, regardless of the amount of money received and turned over.

One of the members is a piano tuner. If he tunes only one piano in a day, and does the work in an hour, he turns in the money and gets credit for just one hour's work.

If 15-year-old Richard Hale, son of one of the members, pulls weeds for a farmer for three hours, he is credited with three hours' work, or three times as much as the piano tuner was paid.

If Cliff Larson, one of the storekeepers, keeps the store open 10 hours, he is credited with that number of units. But if Evelyn Hale, 17, washes dishes half a day, she gets credit at the same rate as Cliff Larson.

Furthermore, when Mrs. J. W. Hale, wife of a member, became a mother and added another name to the rolls, she was credited with 365 days' work.

The credits are all kept in the store and when a member wants a pair of shoes or a suit of clothes he draws on his credit. If he wants something which the store does not handle, he draws out enough "hours," but in a case of this kind he is paid money instead of credits. Nobody in the community has any fear of holdup men. Time can't be stolen.

Newcomers into the community put all their property into the common treasury. Should they desire to leave at any time they can get the equivalent in real money. But the community never has had a desertion, according to Mickey.

Single male members live in a common house. Married couples have individual houses. As soon as the community can finance the proposition, it proposes to build a large community house, with a common kitchen and dining hall. But for the present individual homes are maintained for the different families.

"Our plan is one Thomas Jefferson dreamed about, but did not know how to put in effect," says Manager Mickey.

The community has an automobile, used in common. Gasoline is paid for by the individual at the community store by use of his credits.

"By our system," says Mickey, "a woman or a child of working age is as economically independent as a man. We consider housework and children's tasks just as important as those of a banker—if we had a banker.

OUR system will do away with all war and human strife, will stop panics, labor troubles and discontent. There will be nothing to squabble about. Everything will be on a plane of equality. There is no incentive to dishonesty or crookedness, strife or charity.

"Socialism presents a theory of government, but it does not give specific formula for applying the doctrines to individual living. So I worked out this plan of substituting hours for dollars. We issue labor checks in hours and minutes. Then we fix a time value on food and commodities and take time coupons in payment for them.

"A loaf of bread takes 10 minutes in the making. At our store a loaf of bread costs 10 minutes in credits."

"Some people say our plan won't work. But it is working and has been working for four years. Everybody on 'the inside' is content and pleased, and, after all, we on 'the inside' are the ones by which we should be measured."

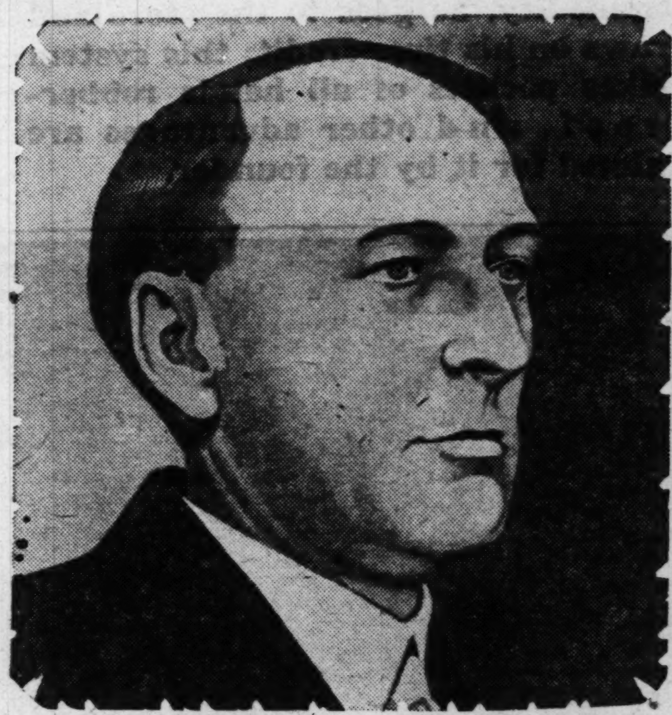
HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Does This New Extract Control It?

By A. W. King



DR. W. J. MACDONALD.

HIGH blood pressure, which has been called "the terror of middle age," is the domain of the latest interesting discovery to be reported in the medical world. An extract from calf's liver, as yet nameless and of unknown chemical constituents, is declared to have a miraculous effect in reducing high blood pressure, or hypertension. The discovery was announced at a recent meeting of the Ontario (Canada) Medical Association by Dr. W. J. Macdonald, general practitioner and surgeon of St. Catherine's, Ontario. The results which he described, as having followed injections of the new substance, created a sensation among the 600 doctors and surgeons present.

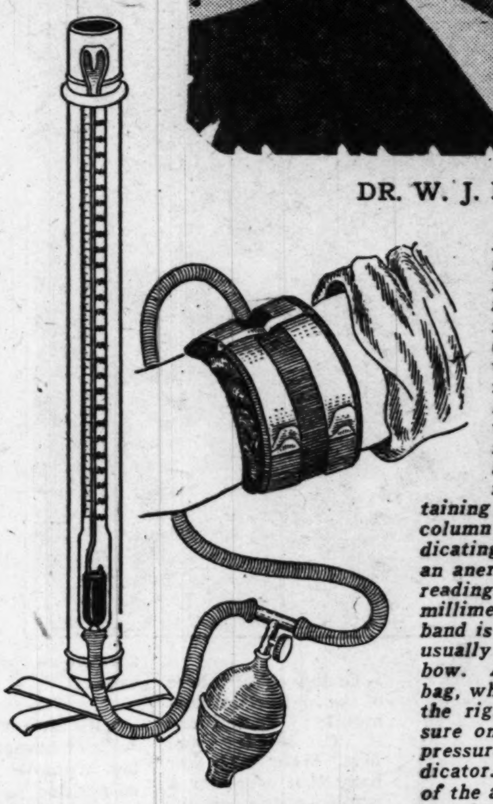
In the cases of 32 out of 33 patients treated, said Dr. Macdonald, the extract was successful in reducing high blood pressure to practically normal. The possibilities of such a discovery are obvious when one remembers that the apparatus for measuring blood pressure—the arm bandage, air pump and gauge—has become common in doctors' offices, and that few diagnoses of adults are considered complete without such a test.

Some of the physicians at Toronto regard Dr. Macdonald's achievement as of the utmost importance, since it bears upon a malady which is all too common in this era of hurry and scurry, bustle, strain and nervous tension. These Canadians believe that the discovery will have a place right next to that of insulin in modern scientific research. But others feel that much more time must elapse before final pronouncement can be made.

The average age of Dr. Macdonald's patients was 61. Some of them had blood pressure, systolic (that is, when the heart contracts, sending out the blood) of more than 200 millimeters. They now are being kept normal, under 150 mm., with one dose of the extract a week. Similarly, diastolic pressure (that is, when the heart expands, or its "intake" stroke) was reduced from an average of 114 mm. to 86.

The ages of the 33 patients ranged from 45 to 67 years. The average known duration of their hypertension had been six years. Before injections of the new extract the average range of systolic pressure was 204 mm. and after injection it was 142 mm., an average fall in systolic pressure amounting to 62 mm. Before injection the average range of the diastolic pressure was 114 mm. and after injection it was 86 mm., an average fall in diastolic pressure amounting to 28 mm.

In 25 of the cases there apparently were no bad after effects, but in eight cases the injections were followed by "reactions." In these minority cases the blood pressure registered a fall, just as it did in the others, but accompanying the fall there were in varying degrees "chill, rise in temperature lasting several hours, nervousness, loss of appetite and weakness." The eight cases constitute a problem which must be solved before the new treatment can be called a success.



Blood pressure usually is measured with an instrument called the sphygmomanometer. It consists of a nonelastic arm-band or cuff (of leather or of stout cloth) within which is contained a flat but distensible rubber bag. The bag is connected with an air-pump, usually a rubber bulb, and with a pressure indicator. The latter may be an upright tube containing mercury, the height of the column of mercury in millimeters indicating the pressure. More often, an aneroid indicator is used, but the reading of the pressure is in terms of millimeters of mercury. The arm-band is fixed firmly around a limb—usually the arm just above the elbow. Air is then pumped into the bag, which, against the resistance ot the rigid arm-band, exerts its pressure on the arm, the amount of the pressure being registered by the indicator. Obviously, the soft tissues of the arm will yield to this pressure and, among other structures, the large artery in the arm (the brachial artery) will be compressed. When the pressure in the cuff rises to a level equal to that existing within the artery, the vessel will collapse and the flow of blood through it will be shut off. Simultaneously, the pulse at the wrist will disappear. Thus, by reading the indicator, is obtained the "maximal sytolic pressure." By deflation of the cuff, and noting when the pressure in the cuff is just equal to that maintained in the artery between successive pulse waves, is obtained the measure of the "minimal or diastolic pressure." The difference between the two is called the "pulse pressure."

IT IS recalled that in the early experiments with insulin very serious "reactions" occurred with some patients, but these alarming after effects were eliminated by subsequent refinements of manufacture and treatment. However, insulin still remains a dangerous remedy except when given by a competent physician.

Several other points of similarity exist between Dr. Macdonald's nameless extract and insulin. Insulin is secured from the pancreas, the new extract from the liver. Insulin reduces blood sugar in marvelous fashion, the liver extract reduces blood pressure with equal celerity. In both extracts the treatment is by injection. Before insulin became available, diet was the only treatment for diabetes. And in many diseases with high blood pressure for a symptom, such as hardening of the arteries and apoplexy, medicine hitherto has been powerless to reduce the distressing symptom.

Dr. Macdonald originally was interested in cancer research and made his discovery as to blood pressure more or less accidentally. While studying cancer at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., he investigated the secretory properties of the liver, which is the largest gland in the body and yields bile. He learned that there is a striking similarity between the chemistry of the blood in human sufferers from cancer and in those afflicted with certain diseases in which the liver is involved.

Dr. Macdonald reasoned that there might be an internal secretion of the liver—an extract produced by the gland and flowing not from a duct but directly into the blood stream from its cell of origin. To isolate this extract was his ambition. Extracts were made of liver tissue in the hope that the unknown secretion could be isolated. When the extract was given hypodermically to dogs whose livers had been removed, a remarkable fall of blood pressure immediately followed.

Thereupon the cancer research was dropped for the time to investigate the bearing of this discovery upon the problem of high blood pressure. Extracts of the liver were injected into normal animals with like reduction in hypertension. Then Dr. Macdonald decided to test his experimental results on human beings.

BY COINCIDENCE, the biochemist who separated the active principle of the liver extract for Dr. Macdonald's test is another Macdonald, but not related to the experimenter. He is Dr. W. M. Macdonald, a recent graduate of the University of Toronto and biochemist at the McGregor-Mowbray clinic in Hamilton.

"Dr. Macdonald came to us with a problem, one chief condition of which was secrecy," said Dr. W. M. Macdonald. "For several months we sought to separate an active principle from the extract and finally were successful in doing so."

"What is this active principle?"

"As far as we know it is a new chemical substance. The physiological effects of this substance in reducing blood pressure cannot be duplicated by any other known substance."

"What does the separation of this active principle mean to medical science?"

"It means proper measurement of the dosage, a greater degree of purity and, therefore, safety and stability of the product. In its present form it will keep its potency indefinitely, and it gives an opportunity for chemists to identify the substance as a chemical entity and therefore, later, its possible synthesis."

In describing the treatment and its effects Dr. W. J. Macdonald said the extract was administered once a day until blood pressure was reduced to normal. Thereafter the extract was administered only two or three times a week, according to individual requirements.

"In cases where the pressure was reduced to normal, and all treatment was stopped," he said, "the pressure has slowly gone back, but rarely to the former level. When treatment is resumed, the pressure comes down in less time and with a smaller dose."

DR. MACDONALD has been at work on the problem of reducing high blood pressure for two and one-half years. Today he virtually has given up what was a large practice in St. Catherine's to devote all his time to the perfection of the new treatment in the physiological laboratories of the University of Toronto.

The view of the conservatives is expressed as follows by Prof. J. J. McLeod, head of the Toronto physiological laboratories, who shared with Dr. Frederick G. Banting the Nobel prize for the discovery of insulin, and under whom Dr. Macdonald now is working:

"Dr. Macdonald's observations are certainly encouraging. He wishes to make certain that his extract is harmless before going further with it. The facilities of the university are at his disposal."

Dr. Banting himself spoke more decisively, after he had listened to Dr. Macdonald's paper at the convention.

"This is great stuff," he remarked to [illegible] nearby.

St. Louis physicians know of the reported discovery only through newspaper dispatches. The announcement is so recent that nothing about the matter has appeared yet in the medical journals. Doctors here will await further details with keen interest.

They point out, however, that high blood pressure is not a disease but a symptom, associated with various pathological conditions. Alleviation of the symptom does not imply improvement in the underlying causes, although possibly it may arrest the damage which high blood pressure does to the overworked heart and to the strained arteries and capillaries.

Local medical men agree that cases of hypertension must be dealt with under a doctor's care. They state also that lowering of the blood pressure "is a dangerous thing for the public to fool with." An extract of any tissue, when partially digested and injected, causes a fall of blood pressure, and sometimes to a dangerous degree. The phenomenon is well known as "peptone shock." St. Louis doctors express satisfaction that the present experiments are in competent hands at Toronto.

A warning paragraph is to be found in the book, "Blood Pressure: Cause, Effect and Remedy," by Dr. Lewellys F. Barker and Dr. Norman B. Cole, published last year by Appleton. The authors say of high blood pressure:

"It is a symptom that appears after certain changes in the structure and in the functions of the body have occurred, some of which we have been able to trace

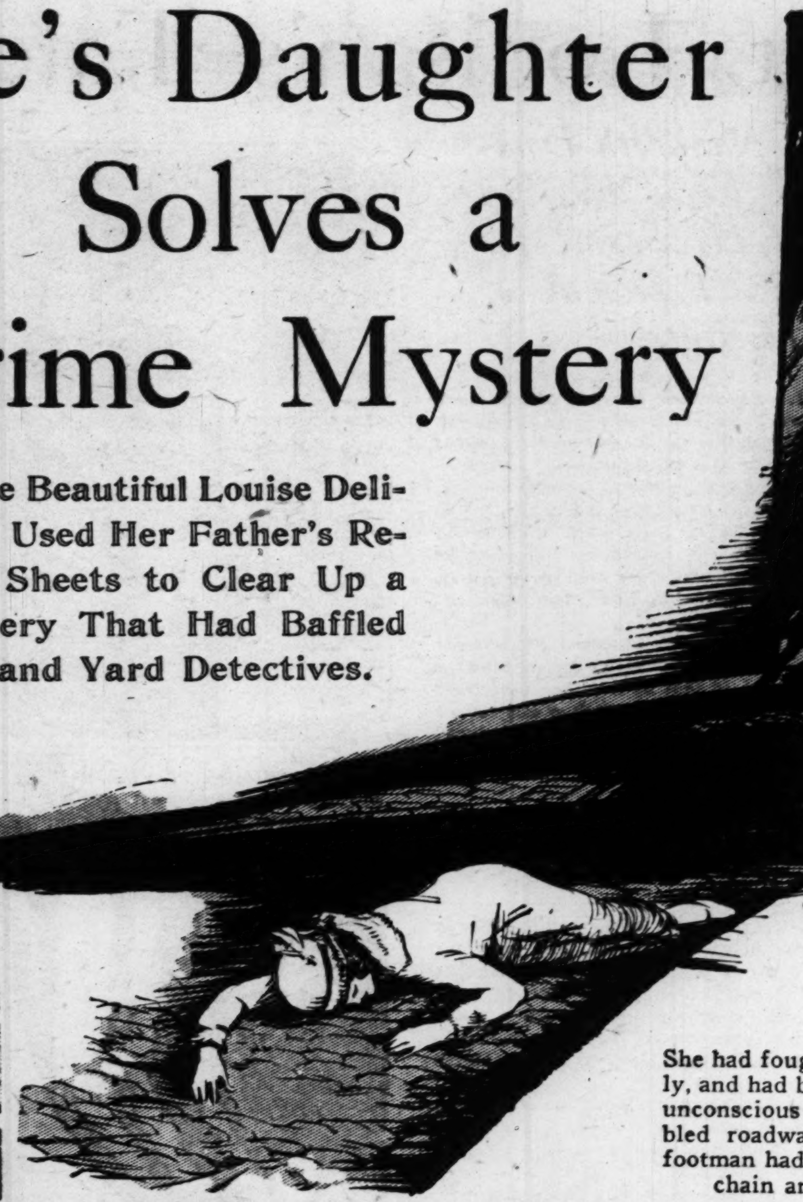
A Detective's Daughter Solves a Crime Mystery

How the Beautiful Louise Delivaire Used Her Father's Report Sheets to Clear Up a Robbery That Had Baffled Scotland Yard Detectives.



She had fought stubbornly, and had been left half unconscious on the cobbled roadway when the footman had torn off her chain and gone.

By ELEANORE BROWNE,
(Noted Authority on Crime and Criminals.)

FOR many generations the collection of gem-incrusted snuff boxes in the Grosvenor Square home of Sir Henry Ladd, a General of the British Army, has been an interesting sight to lovers of the treasure of a past period. The ancestors of Gen. Ladd enjoyed their snuff, and, being famous British soldiers, kings and potentates took pleasure in presenting them the finest examples to be had of the art of jewelers in the snuff box way.

When it was reported to Scotland Yard that the entire collection, including diamond set souvenirs from the Sultan of Turkey and ruby strewn boxes from the Khedive of Egypt, had been mysteriously stolen, there was something of a sensation at the Yard, and, indeed, throughout London.

Gen. Ladd was greatly perturbed. Being one of England's wealthiest men, he was not concerned by the value of the thieves' loot, but only with the sentimental connection between his famous snuff boxes and his ancestors. He begged the officials of the Yard to do their utmost to recover the collection.

Unfortunately the Yard inspectors could not explain the robbery. The snuff boxes were kept in a glass case, securely locked, in the drawing room of the Grosvenor Square mansion. There are many servants in the Ladd establishment. It was considered virtually impossible for any marauder to break into the house at night, as, after a fashion peculiar to London, the lower windows of the house are protected by iron bars.

But a clever thief had broken in and had rifled the glass case, even opening its locks with false keys, and had escaped without leaving a clew behind him.

Although the boxes were of silver and gold the police knew well that the thieves would tear out the gems, many of them extremely valuable, and sell them separately with small danger of identification. Yet they were anxious to recover not only the gems but the boxes themselves, intact. The collection was valued by the General at more than $250,000, with an actual sale value of, perhaps, half that amount.

Louise Delivaire, the detective's daughter who solved one of the most baffling robberies on record in Scotland Yard.

For more than a year the police of many European capitals kept sharp watch upon pawnshops and small jewelers. The stones with which the boxes were ornamented were, all of them, cut in the manner of old time lapidaries, not as diamonds and rubies are shaped today. It was hoped the thieves would dispose of their plunder to one "fence" and that they would thus be thrown onto the market. This would lead, inevitably, to their being traced. But nothing of the sort happened. The snuff boxes, like the thieves, disappeared completely.

Then, when the year had passed, a girl, daughter of a detective attached to the Police Bureau of Brussels, Belgium, appeared at the bureau headquarters, where her father was attached, and shyly asked if she might have an interview with the Commissioner. It was Deputy Commissioner Lenz, a famous international policeman who received her. "My father does not know that I have come to you," the girl explained when she had told the Deputy Commissioner that she was Louise Delivaire, daughter of one of his detectives. "He would not approve if he knew it, but I have information and I want to do something of which my father will be proud."

LOUISE then told of having been knocked down, in a narrow Brussels street, while on her way to her home close by from the church where she went daily at vespers time. On this night there had been someone at home for supper, and she took the short cut—through the evil dark passage way. Around her neck she wore a cheap gold chain with an imitation gem hanging from it as a pendant. The flash of the chain and the glitter of the stone attracted a prowling thief who treated her brutally. She had fought stubbornly, and had been left half unconscious on the cobbled roadway when the footman had torn off her chain and gone. When she was sufficiently recovered to scramble to her feet she saw something that glistened lying near. She picked it up. It was a box of ancient design and set with what she first thought were imitation stones like her own.

She carried home the box, thinking to give it to her father as a clew. While she was examining it she remembered, quite suddenly, of reading in the monthly bulletins distributed to the police of Belgium of the continued hunt for the gem-set snuff boxes that had disappeared from the home of a London General. Feverishly she brought out from her father's cabinet all his monthly bulletins and there, among them, she found a full story of the theft in London, and a description of the dozens of snuff boxes, reprinted a short time before as a reminder to detectives throughout Europe.

Josef Leban, trapped by a pretty girl's flattery into confessing his part in robbing the home of Gen. Sir Henry Ladd.

In the descriptions she easily identified the box she had found in the alley—dropped, she was sure, by the robber who had attacked her. She kept the secret of her find until she could, herself, go before the Deputy Commissioner.

When Commissioner Lenz was convinced by looking at the records that one of Gen. Ladd's boxes had been found, the daughter of his detective made the startling proposition that she be allowed to go out on the trail of the rest. She confessed that for more than a year she had taken from her father's cabinet all his official reports and bulletins, all his confidential histories of the crimes throughout Europe in which the Belgian police were concerned, and had read them with the fascination most young people find in detective stories.

She had listened to her father's many stories of great detective feats and, she declared to the Deputy Commissioner, she wanted to begin, right then, being a real detective. If the Deputy Commissioner would consent she would ask her father to help her. She had, she said, a certain plan that had to do with the hunting down of the missing snuff boxes, and she was sure, if the Commissioner would approve, her father would proudly help her with it.

AFTER a long conference, and much stubborn pleading upon the part of Louise, the Deputy Commissioner consented to the extraordinary proposal. Not, of course, without sending a seasoned man down into the narrow street, which the police knew to be a hiding place of underworld characters, to see if the footpad could be by any means identified. The police agent failed of his mission.

Louise's father was at first angry. But after a talk with the Deputy Commissioner, to whom Louise had confided much of her secret plan, he was amused—and gave his help.

It was then that the girl reminded her father that she knew, from his private notebooks, the whereabouts and the identity of more than one of those underworld characters who, at the peril of death, trade information about their companions to the police in return for protection for themselves.

The police of all European cities have lists of these underworld spies and traitors, and almost every detective of experience has one or two of them especially attached to himself. Louise's father had a list of several on whom he could, in some cases, rely. Among them were "marques," or women, who as a rule, are hardened criminals and the consorts of thieves, but who are faithful to one man if treacherous to all others.

"If you will let me go to one of these, a young one, who may be a little pretty, perhaps, I will try out my plan." Louise explained. "It is that perhaps I can persuade her to help me become a real detective by discovering for me who in the under-

A St. Louisan's Tale of the Christ

Jesus of Nazareth Dominates a New Novel by Edmund H. Sears, for 34 Years Principal of Mary Institute.

EDMUND H. SEARS, who retired recently after 34 years as principal of Mary Institute, St. Louis, is the author of a new novel entitled "Zatthu—A Tale of Ancient Galilee," issued by the Cornhill Publishing Co. It is a historical romance, laid in the stirring days of Christ, and Mr. Sears' ripe scholarship is evident in the rich detail with which he brings to life a period of long ago. Moreover, he tells a first-class story of adventure and brave hearts. Yet the great figure of the Galilean dominates the whole book.

Mr. Sears gave up his work at Mary Institute, a day school for girls, conducted under the charter of Washington University, so that he might enjoy leisure for travel and writing. He is the author of two earlier books, "Political Growth in the Nineteenth Century" (1900), and a novel, "The Son of the Prefect" (1915). "Zatthu" is dedicated to Mrs. Sears.

GERHARD SISTERS PORTRAIT

THISOA, daughter of a wealthy Greek merchant at Capernaum, had gone for a walk. In one of the more open parts of the city her way was blocked by a throng of people. She heard a voice which pronounced solemn warnings while the crowd listened in breathless silence.

Suspecting that the speaker must be the man whose words just then were stirring all Galilee, Thisoa asked of a woman who stood next to her:

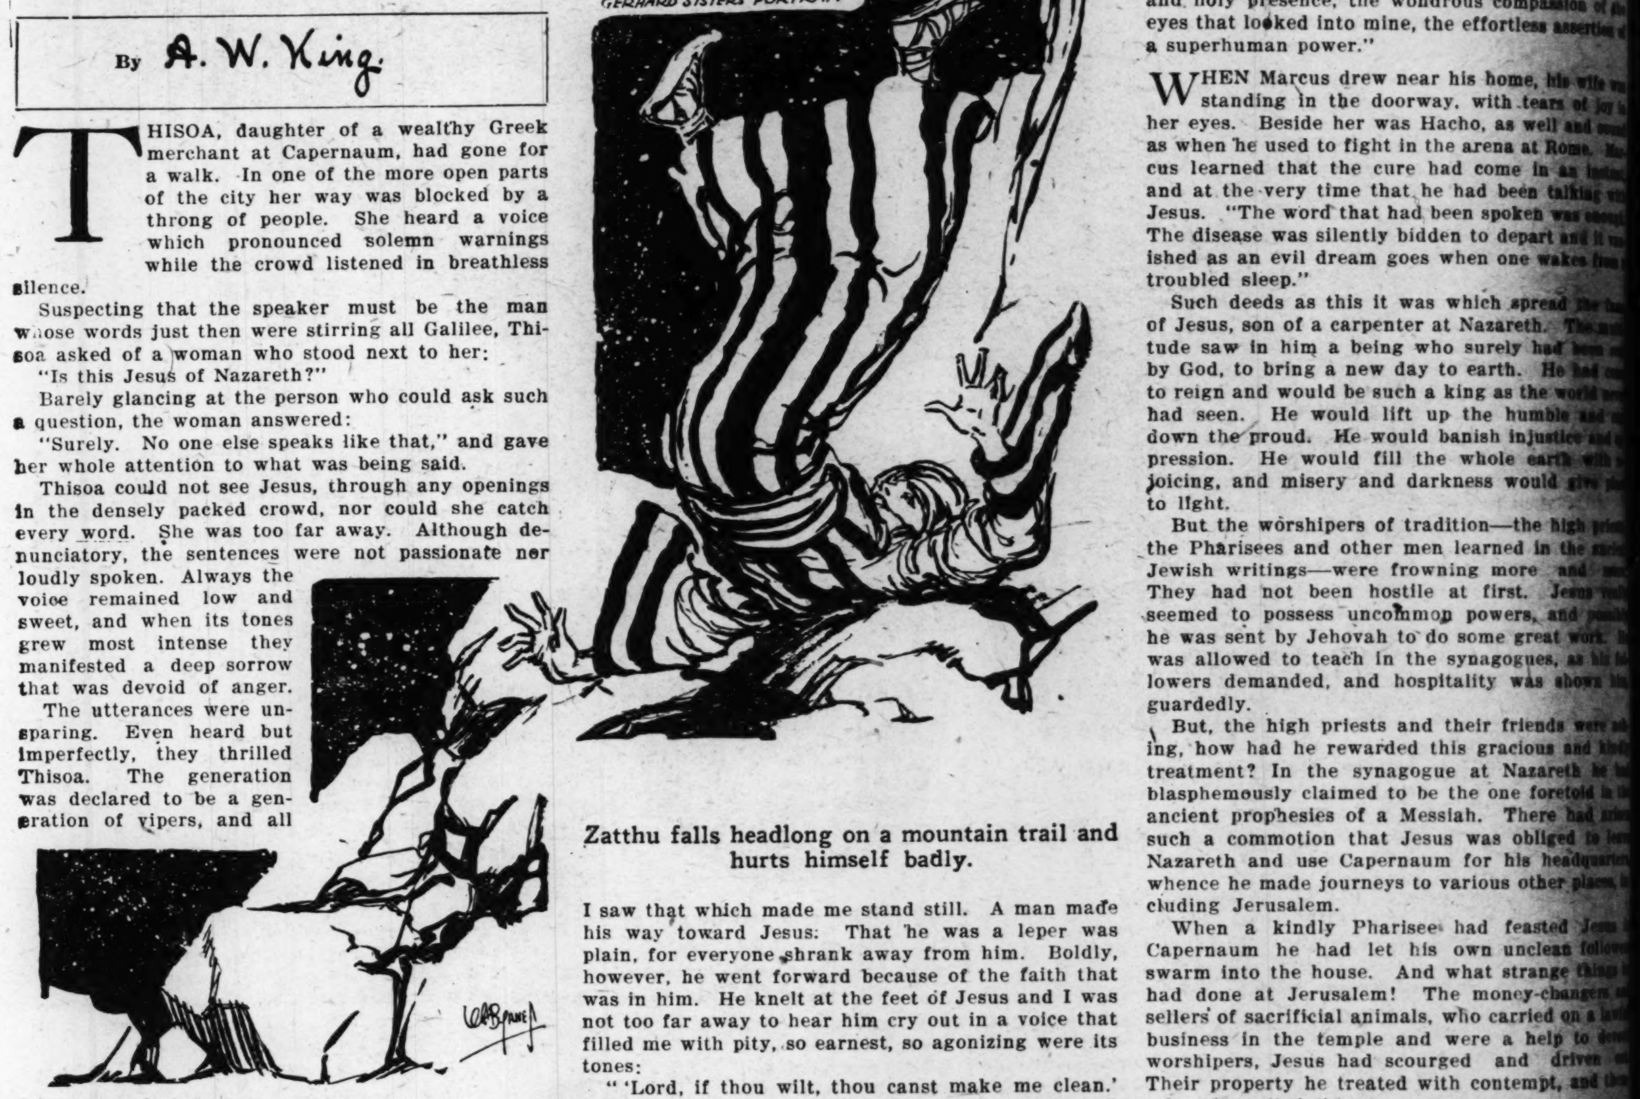
"Is this Jesus of Nazareth?"

Barely glancing at the person who could ask such a question, the woman answered:

"Surely. No one else speaks like that," and gave her whole attention to what was being said.

Thisoa could not see Jesus, through any openings in the densely packed crowd, nor could she catch every word. She was too far away. Although denunciatory, the sentences were not passionate nor loudly spoken. Always the voice remained low and sweet, and when its tones grew most intense they manifested a deep sorrow that was devoid of anger.

The utterances were unsparing. Even heard but imperfectly, they thrilled Thisoa. The generation was declared to be a generation of vipers, and all were warned that they would have to give an account of every word that they might speak. To a question, put by somebody in the crowd, came the instant answer that only an evil generation sought after a sign.



Zatthu falls headlong on a mountain trail and hurts himself badly.

The address came to an end and the throng dispersed, without Thisoa's having been able to get a clear view of Jesus. But she returned home very much impressed with the personality of the carpenter's son who was winning the love of the common people and the hatred of the high priests, Pharisees and most of the leaders among the Jews.

Indeed, the whole province of Galilee was in a ferment. The enthusiasm of the multitude for this new teacher is only hinted at in the Gospels, but Mr. Sears has made it one of the striking points of his narrative. Wherever Jesus spoke, people congregated to be healed in body and soul. They followed him along the roads as he went to and fro on his ministry. It became necessary, when Jesus would rest, for him and his disciples to withdraw to some secluded spot.

TERSE descriptions of episodes in the New Testament are told at greater length by eyewitnesses. Marcus the centurion, Roman commander at Capernaum, describes the healing of his servant. Hacho, who had been stricken with a creeping palsy that paralyzed one limb after another. Marcus had married a Jewish wife and become a convert to her religion. As a last resort in Hacho's illness they decided to invoke the aid of the healer to whom such marvelous cures were credited. Marcus finds Jesus in the outskirts of the city.

"As usual," says the centurion, "he was attended by a few of the curious as well as by those whom he has chosen to follow him. Joy was in my heart. I was about to quicken my step and make my plea for Hacho as soon as I was near enough to him, when I saw that which made me stand still. A man made his way toward Jesus: That he was a leper was plain, for everyone shrank away from him. Boldly, however, he went forward because of the faith that was in him. He knelt at the feet of Jesus and I was not too far away to hear him cry out in a voice that filled me with pity, so earnest, so agonizing were its tones:

"'Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.'

"And through the still air, while a hush as of death was upon all those that stood around, I heard the clear, calm words of Jesus:

"'I will; be thou clean.'

"He stretched out his hand. The healing came. It came in an instant, for the man rose at once and lifted his hands toward heaven to give thanks to God. But as if the thing he had done was nothing, Jesus started on again and came toward me with a calm, majestic tread.

"I did not go to meet him. I stood still. For I was awed. I was overwhelmed with feelings I know not how to describe. Who was this Jesus and whence had he this strange power? Surely, from no one but Jehovah. The voice that created heaven and earth was speaking through this lofty man. I must obey it. Yes, I, raised to authority by Rome, must bow to an authority far mightier than that of Rome. So as Jesus drew near to me I felt myself to be but as a child.

"It was not till he was close to me that I spoke. Then I looked into his eyes—ah! how tender and mild they were!—and cried:

"'Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.'

"With a wonderful look of compassion he answered at once:

"'I will come and heal him.'

"And then it was that my sense of the man's holiness grew overpowering, bewildering. I, a man who ordered others, was in the presence of one who was fit to rule the whole world by the power that was given him from above. And so I answered, scarce knowing what I said:

"'I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof; but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed. For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me; and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.'

"A look that might of wonderment came into his eyes as I said these words, and he turned to those about him and said:

"'Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.'

"Then looking at me, he added, 'Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee.'

"Then he went on his way, while I stood still as if a spell was upon me till he and his followers had all passed by. For some moments I stood watching them, the errand that had brought me there altogether forgotten. I could only think of that calm and holy presence, the wondrous compassion of the eyes that looked into mine, the effortless assertion of a superhuman power."

WHEN Marcus drew near his home, his wife was standing in the doorway, with tears of joy in her eyes. Beside her was Hacho, as well and sound as when he used to fight in the arena at Rome. Marcus learned that the cure had come in an instant, and at the very time that he had been talking with Jesus. "The word that had been spoken was enough. The disease was silently bidden to depart and it vanished as an evil dream goes when one wakes from a troubled sleep."

Such deeds as this it was which spread the fame of Jesus, son of a carpenter at Nazareth. The multitude saw in him a being who surely had been sent by God, to bring a new day to earth. He had come to reign and would be such a king as the world never had seen. He would lift up the humble and put down the proud. He would banish injustice and oppression. He would fill the whole earth with rejoicing, and misery and darkness would give place to light.

But the worshipers of tradition—the high priests, the Pharisees and other men learned in the sacred Jewish writings—were frowning more and more. They had not been hostile at first. Jesus really seemed to possess uncommon powers, and possibly he was sent by Jehovah to do some great work. He was allowed to teach in the synagogues, as his followers demanded, and hospitality was shown him guardedly.

But, the high priests and their friends were asking, how had he rewarded this gracious and kindly treatment? In the synagogue at Nazareth he had blasphemously claimed to be the one foretold in the ancient prophesies of a Messiah. There had arisen such a commotion that Jesus was obliged to leave Nazareth and use Capernaum for his headquarters, whence he made journeys to various other places, including Jerusalem.

When a kindly Pharisee had feasted Jesus in Capernaum he had let his own unclean followers swarm into the house. And what strange things he had done at Jerusalem! The money-changers and sellers of sacrificial animals, who carried on a lawful business in the temple and were a help to devout worshipers, Jesus had scourged and driven out. Their property he treated with contempt, and themselves he called thieves.

For the [illegible] by Moses this Jesus showed little respe[illegible] had even healed on the Sabbath. By s[illegible]de the observances of the law he gave the wor[illegible]sible examples to his ignorant and easy-going followers. Surely redemption could come to Israel only through men who had studied the Sacred Books and knew how to interpret them. But these were the men whom he neglected and even openly called hypocrites.

Every day he was making it more plain that he had not been called by Jehovah. His miracles were worked by magic and sorcery. His power must be given him by the Evil One. He was a menace to the true worship of Jehovah. The more he won the hearts of the people the more menacing he became. He must be watched. Possibly he would have to be suppressed.

NOT only was all of Galilee in a ferment, but the excitement was spreading. And along with the religious disturbances there chanced to come a profound political unrest. Judea was a hotbed of sedition. The rebellious spirit of Judea was the hotter because, soon after the death of Herod the Great, it and Samaria had been made Roman provinces, under the rule of Pontius Pilate. Galilee, Perea and the district beyond the Jordan still were ruled by sons of Herod, not a popular dynasty but better than the oppressive Roman rule.

The Hebrews looked back with pride and longing to the glorious days when God had shown them peculiar favors, when they had been a free and victorious nation, with mighty prophets and leaders. Now they were degraded by a race which worshiped graven images. To restore the ancient glory of Israel was a passion smoldering in the Hebrew mind, and to kindle that smoldering fire into the flame of rebellion was the self-imposed task of Zatthu.

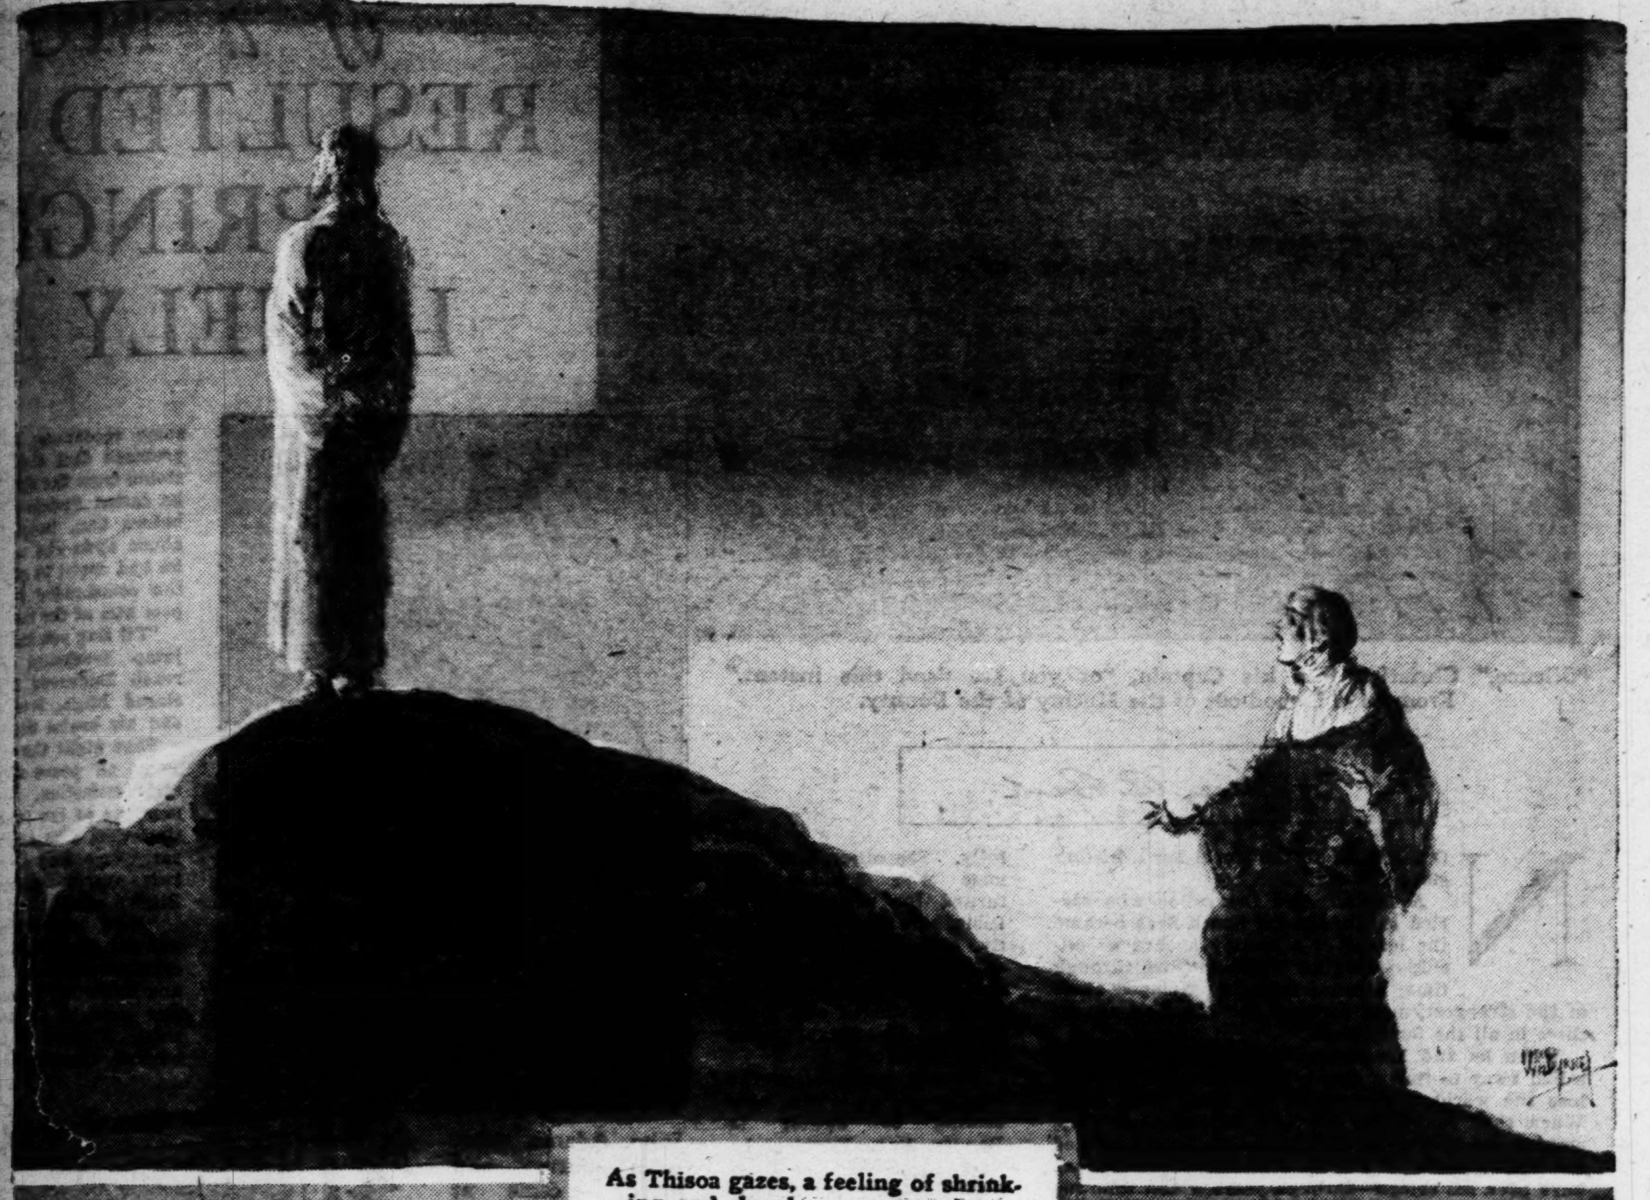
s the self-imposed task of Zatthu.



As Thisoa gazes, a feeling of shrinking and dread comes over her.

Zatthu, hero of Mr. Sears' novel, is not a historical character. But the author in a foreword says that he truthfully embodies the spirit of sedition which made the Jews unceasingly restive under Roman rule and finally led them into their disastrous revolt in the reign of Vespasian.

A Pharisee of distinguished family, and 25 years old, Zatthu has dedicated his life to the freeing of his country. Fearlessly but warily he carries on the work, exhorting his countrymen to remember their great days, to unite and, with Jehovah's aid, to throw off the yoke of the oppressors. Early in the story he is arrested and taken before Pontius Pilate, and later makes an exciting escape from prison.

To a large extent, Mr. Sears' romance is the tale of Zatthu's adventures as he tries to foment rebellion and evade the Roman authorities. There are pictures of life in olden Palestine. It becomes evident that Zatthu, in his burning zeal, believes that he himself is the leader chosen by Jehovah to free the Jews.

ZATTHU and his two traveling companions rescue a merchant who has been attacked on the road by robbers. The merchant is Aristarchus of Capernaum, father of Thisoa. Aristarchus insists upon taking the three fugitives home with him for a visit. Several times thereafter, with the Romans at his heels and crucifixion the penalty of capture, Zatthu finds concealment and safety in the stately home of the Greek merchant. A romance develops between Zatthu and Thisoa.

Zatthu finds it easier to elude the Romans than to arouse his countrymen. And the chief obstacle in his way is the growing fame of Jesus, whom Zatthu regards as an impostor.

"The people are so easily won over by false teachers," mourns Zatthu. "They went in crowds after John the Baptist. Now they are following this son of a carpenter because they think he can cure their diseases. It makes me unhappy. How can they be made to follow their true leaders against Rome when they listen to the voices of vulgar fanatics?"

A typical experience occurred at a little place near Lake Gennesaret. To the assembled villagers Zatthu made an eloquent speech, but they were not responsive.

"You talk well," said an aged, white-haired man, "but you don't cure our diseases."

"That is not what Jehovah called me to do," replied Zatthu. "My work is to free Israel."

"Moses did both," commented another elderly man.

"That," said Zatthu, "was in the days long ago, when Jehovah was continually showing signs and wonders to Israel."

"Jesus of Nazareth shows them now."

"Yes, he cures all of our ailments."

"And he'll be our Moses, too."

These statements came in quick succession from different speakers and the last one roused a general echo. From all parts of the assemblage came the outcry:

"Jesus of Nazareth is our Moses! Jesus of Nazareth is our Moses!"

THESE words sent a chill to Zatthu's heart. Chagrined and saddened, he waited for the clamor to cease. Then he inquired when Jesus had been at the village and called for someone to come forward who could call Jehovah to witness that he had been cured by the carpenter's son. A sturdy, middle-aged man with an intelligent, honest face stepped out of the crowd.

"Jesus was here last month," he said. "It was the tenth day of the month. I remember it well, for on that day he cured my blindness and made me see."

"How long had you been blind?"

"I was born blind."

"Yes, he was born blind," said several corroborating voices, while the man stood proudly erect and looked up at Zatthu.

Convinced that he spoke the truth, Zatthu gazed at him sorrowfully for a moment and then stretched out his arms and said to the gathering before him:

"Go your ways, my children. You are sheep without a shepherd. It is through the power of Beelzebub that this Jesus heals you. He will never come to you again. He is no Moses. He will never lift the yoke of Rome from your necks. In time you will see this. But go your ways now. Your deliverance will not come until your hearts are changed."

Although the Hebrews take less and less interest in Zatthu's ceaseless work for a rising against their oppressors, the Romans' interest in him increases. Several Roman soldiers have been slain in affrays with Zatthu and his followers. This turbulent, dangerous Jew must be captured and executed. Efforts to apprehend Zatthu are redoubled. He lives the life of a sorely hunted man, with the pack continually drawing closer.

Finally he and a companion take refuge in a robbers' camp. But such a price is on Zatthu's head by this time that even the outcast robbers are tempted, and some of them plot to deliver Zatthu to the Romans. Warned in time, the two men escape. But, while they travel at night, Zatthu falls headlong on a mountain trail and hurts himself badly. He receives good medical attention, but fever sets in and his condition grows steadily worse. For he is a heart-broken man. He has failed. He is not the chosen of Jehovah. When Zatthu is dying a messenger carries the sad news to Thisoa. And she decides to implore the aid of Jesus.

To get relief from the wearing devotion of the multitude which followed him, some of them from reverence and some of them from curiosity, Jesus and his disciples that day crossed the Sea of Galilee to the less-frequented shore across from Capernaum. There Thisoa finds the disciples, but Jesus has gone apart from them. Peter, of strong, harsh features, says with a frown that his master is worn and tired with seeing so many, and that the newcomers must not trouble him. Peter will not show them where Jesus is. But John, kind in manner and soft in voice, with a gentle insistence which easily overrules the sturdy Peter, interferes. He will show Thisoa where Jesus may be seen.

At the crest of the hill, and half turned from her, Thisoa beholds the carpenter's son. He is looking across the Sea of Galilee, or Lake of Gennesaret, and the sun is sending its last rays full upon his face. The whole figure is flooded with the crimson light as with a glory. Thisoa is filled with awe. Who is this man who stands gazing with rapt vision into the western sky? Has he been raised up by the Hebrews' God to purge the whole world of evil? Is this man now holding communion with God, the creator of the earth and all its children?

AS THISOA gazes a feeling of shrinking and dread comes over her. This presence is too holy and sacred to be disturbed. Jesus wished to be alone. He is hearing messages from heaven. It is not for her to interrupt them with her human voice. But while she stands awed and silent, Jesus grows aware that she is near and turns toward her. His face is in full view and it shines with a light that is not of earth. She is seized with dismay. How will he rebuke her for thus intruding upon a solitude which no human eyes should have seen!

He comes toward her and the transfiguring light fades from his countenance, but is not succeeded by a frown. The eyes that meet hers express such a depth of tenderness that a flood of emotion rushes over her spirit. She falls at his feet and sobs convulsively. At once a hand is placed gently upon her head, and a wonderful feeling of calm steals over her. She is able to speak, but only says a few brief words. She does not need to tell her story. She does not need to name any names. Jesus knows all things. He understands. Still kneeling, she raises her arms imploringly and cries:

"Oh, save him! He is nigh to death."

And now the eyes that had gazed into hers look far away. Their expression is deeply serious, almost troubled. The figure that had stood so calmly majestic before her now seems to breathe forth effort and will. Thisoa watches breathlessly. Has she asked too much? Is Zatthu no longer living? Or is he so far away that the healing current cannot flow into him as it did into Marcus' servant, Hacho? But she is not long in suspense. Quickly that wonderful look of more than human compassion returns to the face of Jesus. With his hand he signs to her that she is to arise, and says:

"He is healed."

And so it was. The crowning humiliation had come to poor Zatthu. The chief impediment to his undertaking, the impostor, had snatched him from the grave. But an account of the manly way in which he bore himself, and a vivid reconstruction of the later scenes in the career of Jesus, including the crucifixion, should be read at length in Mr. Sears' fine historical novel.

The STRANG RUE TA of a MUT THAT RESULTED in NEW RA
SPRINGIN UP on a
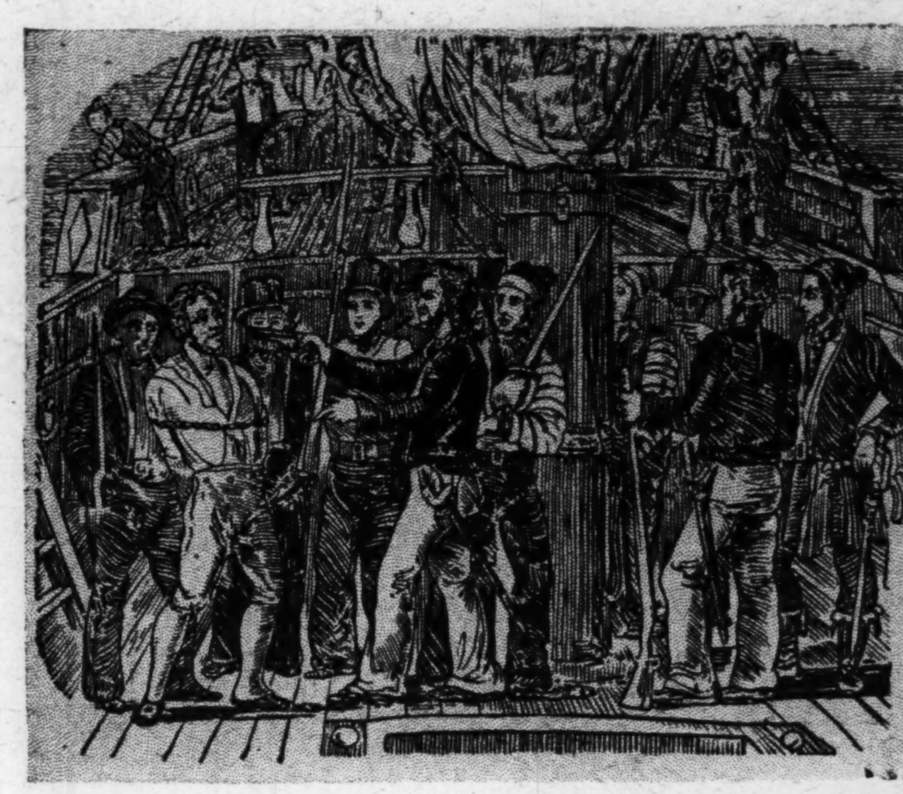
LONELY D ERT ISL



"Silence," Christian told his Captain, "or you are dead this instant." From an old wood-cut of the Mutiny of the Bounty.

By Harry R. Burke

NO BOOK in all the world has a history more strange.

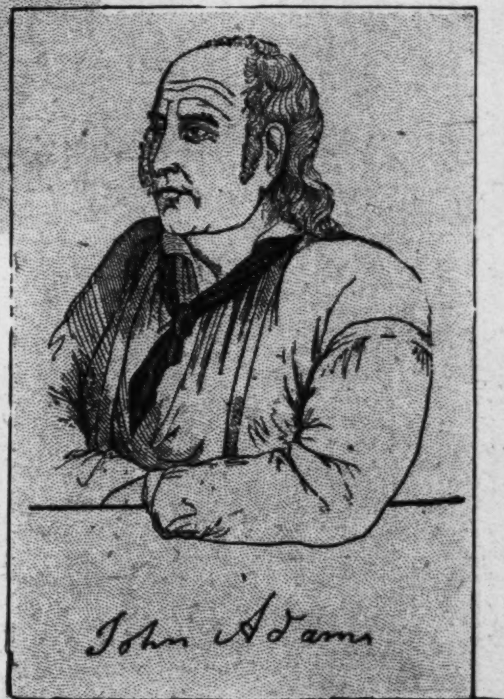
A Bible. And the sailor who carried it into the far South Seas became the leader of a mutiny aboard a hell-ship—a mutiny which will live through time, because from it developed some of the strangest, most perilous and bloodiest adventures in all the Seven Seas.

When he and his comrades stole their ship and sailed away to find a desert island where they could lose the world, they carried the Bible with them. When they found the isle and burned their ship, sinking the hull to leave no trace, its owner carried the Book ashore. It was his companion—and it may have been his solace—through years which followed in a delirium of hatred, jealousy, lust, rapine and murder.

They were nine—those English mutineers who sailed from Tahiti with the Bounty. But in their party were seven Tahitan men, 10 native women and a girl. Singly, and in groups, the mutineers met violent deaths, murdered by natives or by their fellows until but two remained. One of them died peacefully. The other, a sailorman who could read, turned for solace to the Bible. He evolved a primitive form of Christian worship. He became the patriarch of the descendants of those mutineers and murderers. He taught them from the Word.

Twenty years after the mutiny an American ship coming to anchor in Bonnty Bay, Pitcairn Island, was greeted by Polynesian natives speaking excellent English—the beautiful English of the King James version of the Bible.

Until today, almost 150 years after the mutiny of the Bounty, the descendants of the mutineers live on Pitcairn Island, devout, simple, primitive lives. The Book from which their patriarch, John Adams, taught them was presented recently to the New York Public Library. Yellowed by time are its pages, but still it remains perhaps the most interesting book in all the world.



John Adams, who, from mutiny and murder, came at last to the Bible and converted the descendants of murderers and savages.

Thursday October Christian, son of the leader of the mutiny and his Tahitan wife. He lived to be above 90 years old.

The Bounty was a hell-ship. She was a ship-rigged vessel, with three masts and square sails, a narrow, quaint, unwieldy craft as ships are today, and George III of England authorized her to sail to carry breadfruit trees from Tahiti to the West Indies that food might be cheap among British colonists there. Lieut. William Bligh, who had sailed with Capt. Cook, was put in command.

FAVORITISM may have got the man his place. He had relatives high in British naval circles. He was courageous and a fine navigator. Also he was brutally hot-tempered, unjust and sullenly resentful. Perhaps he was not above what today the world calls petty graft. His first trouble with his men came about when he sent to his home at Deptford, where she outfitted, two cheeses from the Bounty's stores. Later, at sea, the casks were opened and the cheeses were missed. Bligh accused his men of stealing them and withheld an equal amount of food from their ration. The story of the Bounty under his command is a record of bickerings with and accusations against his officers and crew—usually over supplies of food. Even with his sailing master and his surgeon he fell out. Fletcher Christian, master's mate, was especially a victim of Bligh's temper.

"That—Capt. Bligh—that is the thing; I am in hell—I am in hell!" Fletcher Christian told the commander as he put him over the side and sailed the Bounty away on the morning of the mutiny, April 28, 1777.

To escape from a hell-ship was foremost in the minds of the Bounty's men, and indeed in three hours their desire brought about the mutiny. Among the crew were fine characters, such as Midshipman Peter Heywood and Jim Morrison, boatswain's mate, but cost of them were rough, licentious men.

No wonder, then, there was trouble at Tahiti, where the ship lay seven months. The men made friends with the natives and the friends brought food. Bligh confiscated it. Some of the sailors deserted and were recaptured. Others plotted to wreck the ship as she lay in the harbor and indeed had her hawser cut almost in two that the wind might drive her on the beach so they could end their cruise.

But they made sail at last, the Bounty's hold and her cabins laden with breadfruit saplings, on the morning of April 26, 1788. And they were scarcely a day out when Bligh missed, or pretended to miss, some cocoanuts; and they left Tahiti's paradise they took 10 native women, a girl of 15, and seven native men.

Bligh's story aroused England and the Pandora was sent to search the South Seas for the mutineers. When she reached Tahiti, Morrison and Heywood were first aboard her. They were put in irons. The others were rounded up ashore and brought aboard. Capt. Edwards, commanding the Pandora, ordered sentinels to shoot to kill if they heard them speaking to each other in Tahitan. He built a house on the quarterdeck, a hell-hole—11 feet by 18—where his 14 prisoners were confined. Its only entrance was on top. Two nine-inch holes supplied the scant air.

Unbelievably brutal was his treatment of these men. In Endeavor Strait the Pandora went upon the barrier reef and there was 9 feet of water in her hold. Three prisoners were freed to man the pumps. The others released themselves but again were ironed in handcuffs and leg irons and sentinels were ordered to shoot them if they moved.

The breakers pounded the ship unmercifully and she filled and her pumps failed. An order was given to lower her boats. The prisoners in irons protested.

"Fire upon the rascals!"

"For God's sake," cried Morrison; "no one here is moving!"

Edwards ordered his men to chop away the boom and make a raft. A topmast snapped in the wind, gave way, fell into the waist of the ship and killed a sailor. The Pandora heaved and rocked and strained, groaning as she battered away upon the rocks. No ship could live in such a pounding. The crew was ordered into boats.

"Don't forget us here, for God's sake don't forget us!" Morrison called; and James Moulter, boatswain's mate, opened the grill at the top of the Pandora's box and knocked the leg irons off of some of the men.

"Leave the scuttle open," pleaded Morrison.

"I'll set you free or we'll all go down together," Moulter cried above the groaning of the ship, and the Pandora gave a sally, and from the boats was heard the cry of "There she goes!"

AND so she sank. How they did it her prisoners did not know, but all but four of them won free and plunged out from her side as she settled. Thirty of the Pandora's crew were lost.

In three boats the survivors, 99 men, set forth across the Coral Sea and, rowing in the heat of a September sun, they kept alive on the weight of two musket balls of bread and a gill of water for their daily ration. After 16 days they, too, reached Keopang. But that, again, is another story.

CHRISTIAN had sailed the Bounty east and south 1500 miles and he sighted Pitcairn Island, of which no doubt he knew. It is only a speck in the South Pacific, an island of four miles by six, with precipices dropping sheer into the sea from mountainous heights. A tiny and difficult harbor they found, and they landed there.

Palms grew from the water's edge. Near the shore were breadfruit trees and higher flourished the dark-leaved feis, or mountain plantains. There were banyan trees with mighty roots pendulant from their branches.

The mutineers ravaged the ship of all that they might use, even to Christian's Bible. Then they ran her on the rocks and burned and sunk her hull—"spurlos versenkt." They built themselves a village of thatched huts. They divided the island into nine tracts, one to each mutineer. With Tahitan women as their wives they established families. The men who had come along as friends they treacherously enslaved.

High among the mountains Christian found a cave which he fitted up for a home and a refuge; nor would he, until many months had passed, sleep with the others in the village.

There were now upon the island nine men, each with his native wife—Fletcher Christian, John Mills, Isaac Martin, William Brown, John Williams, William McKoy, Matthew Quintall, Edward Young and John Adams. Two years passed. Christian, grown moody, gloomy and saturnine, had made himself a sort of dictator. Every man among the whites knew his neighbor's faults and hated his neighbor.

Came a day when the wife of John Williams, while seeking bird's eggs among the cliffs, fell into the sea and was drowned. Williams insisted upon being given another wife. He appropriated to himself the companion of a native. And the Tahitans, weary of slavery and hating the treacherous friends who had enslaved them, plotted to kill the whites. . . .

"Why does black man sharpen ax?
To kill white man."

Thus the women sang that day to their wailing native tunes. And thus was the plot discovered.

Now indeed were the Tahitans enslaved. So onerous was their burden that even the women deter-

OH, YOU ROBBER!

By JEROME BEATTY

BENNY KRUEGER was forced to admit defeat. He couldn't figure it out.

Here was Tim Patterson, grinning; grinning from the good ear to the cauliflowered one, for—so far as Benny could figure—utterly no reason under the sun. The youngest and yet the sourest-souled umpire in either league, noted as the possessor of the countenance of a senile pointer dog suffering from chronic indigestion, was smiling like a widow of 55 who had just been asked to go buggy riding with the president of the First National Bank.

Tim was arriving in New York from Boston. The casual observer might consider this fact to be a contributory cause.

But Tim was a National League baseball umpire. Benny was his partner. For a National League umpire a transfer from Boston to New York puts one in much the same position as the man who was sitting in a comfortable chair and leaped up and bumped his head against a nail in a rafter.

Tim and Benny had just finished a pleasant session at Braves Field, and now they were going into a series expecting to incur with laudable impartiality the hatred of all players with whom they came in contact. Yet Tim Patterson gurgled with glee and flaunted shamelessly a new red necktie.

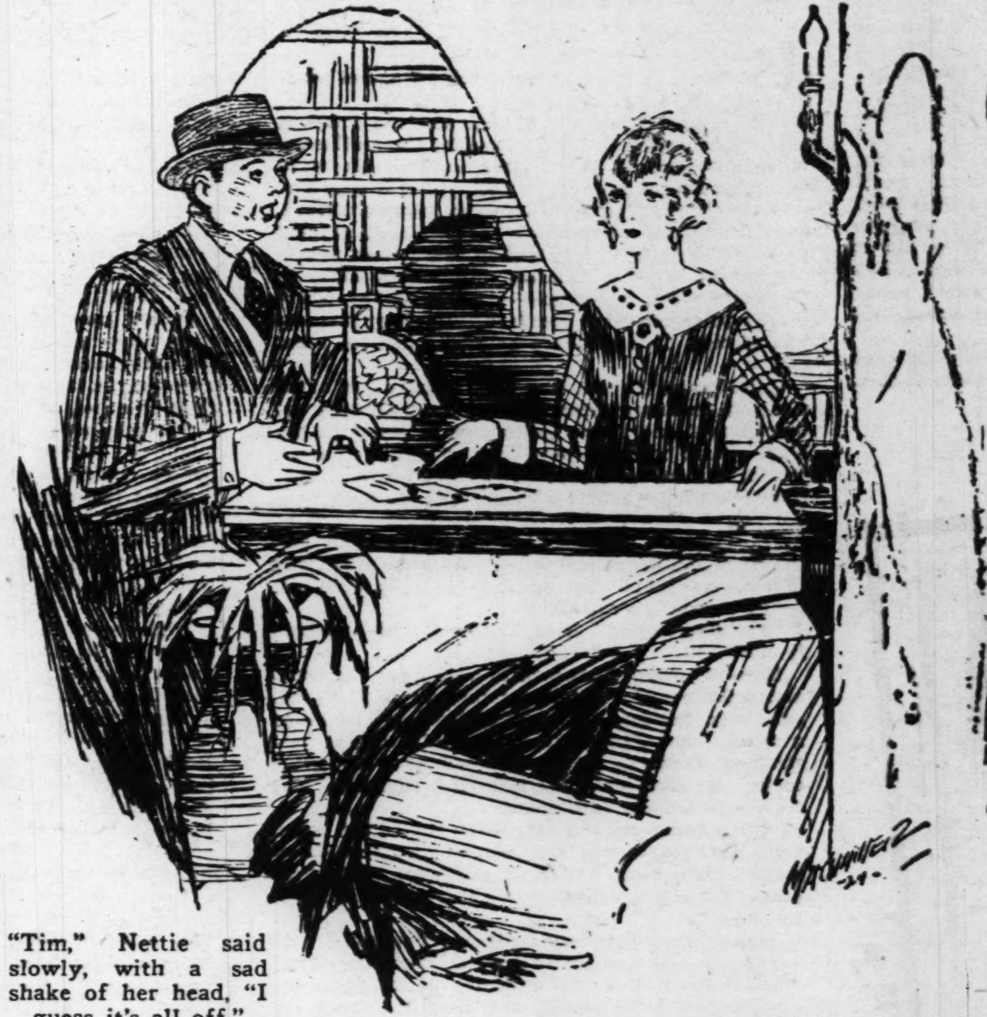
It was autumn. But the weather was so warm that straw hats were still in evidence.

Here, on a September morning, Tim and Benny were rolling into the Grand Central Station to take charge of a series between those natural enemies, the Cubs and the Giants. On the morrow there were to be two games, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Irritated by early rising, the two clubs would be no harder to handle than a pack of sharks.

Tim Patterson was chuckling to himself. To Benny this strange spirit of exultation seemed in particularly bad taste. Benny had considered from all angles the approaching assignment at the Polo Grounds and he was low in mind.

"What's the idea?" he asked over and over again. There had been no adequate answer. Just as the train was plunging into the tunnel that leads to the Grand Central Station, however, Tim unburdened himself. Following the great American custom, all the passengers in the car, except the two umpires, were crowding towards the doors, although the station was five minutes away.

No one was near, but Tim took no chances. He whispered to Benny: "I'm gonna get married!"



"Tim," Nettie said slowly, with a sad shake of her head, "I guess it's all off."

"For the love of blue blotters!" gasped Benny.

"My brother, out in Denver, has bought a bowling alley and he's gonna give me a half interest to run it for him."

"And who's the girl?"

"Nettie." There was pride in his voice.

"Nettie!" Benny spoke the word with reverence, as one would in mentioning Ty Cobb. "Great stuff, Tim. I never woulda guessed it. I suppose umpires do get married," he mused. "I've thought of it myself, sometimes. But I never had nerve enough. How'd ya ever do it?"

Tim's tanned face was beaming.

"I fixed it up with Nettie last May and she said it would be all right with her if I got outa baseball and settled down," he explained. "Bought her a ring! And, Benny"—he hesitated—"Benny, she kissed me. Nettie did! Can you imagine it? Nettie kissing me?"

Benny admitted he sure couldn't imagine it. They boarded a subway train that would take them uptown to their hotel and sat silently side by side.

Benny was again plunged in gloom. Even the idea of Tim married could not take his mind off the impending tragedy of a morning game on the next day.

"They'll ruin us," he grumbled. "They'll be after us harder than those history guys went after Lonnydus and the pass. By the way," he said, feeling suddenly inspired, "what game was that pass to that Lonnydus held?"

Tim burst out in almost uncontrollable laughter, so astonishing several self-conscious passengers that they hurriedly felt of their ties and looked at their feet, fearing that they were the objects of mirth.

"I guess," said Tim, "it was a fight ticket."

Benny gave him a dark look and resumed his air of sadness.

They left the subway at Seventy-second street and made their way to the Hotel Republic, haven of rest for umpires. No baseball players ever stay at the Republic.

LEANING against the desk was a dapper young man. He wore green spats, a checkered suit and a band around his Panama hat matched his purple cravat.

Freddie Haskell, the clerk, welcomed the umpires. He also waved a hand at the dapper young man.

"Mr. Patterson and Mr. Krueger, meet Mr. Miller," said the clerk. "He's our new house detective."

Mr. Miller scowled as he shook hands with Mr. Patterson and Mr. Krueger.

"I wish you wouldn't tell everybody I'm a detective," he complained. "What is the use of being a detective if I'm labeled?"

Haskel laughed deprecatingly. "You're just hired to catch the jazz bandits and to see that no ladies lose their jewels in the tearoom. Benny and Tim never will get in your way."

Tim, with ill-assumed indifference, picked up the mail the clerk had tossed out to him and strolled over toward the cigar counter.

"Huh!" grunted Benny.

"Umm!" said the clerk, with a rising inflection.

The detective watched Tim through half-closed eyes. Tim approached the girl at the cigar counter, a trim, wholesome-looking girl with sparkling big eyes.

"Hello, Nettie!" he said, timidly.

Nettie O'Malley carefully replaced in the case a box of two-for-a-quarter cigars and closed the slide.

"Hello," she said, indifferently. "What are you doing here?"

Several hours later the thought came to Tim that at this point he should have remarked airily: "I'm on my way to Cuba to sell fur coats." But he was no master of hotel-lobby persiflage. He was an umpire, not a traveling salesman for a cloak-and-suit house.

"Didn't you get my postal?" he inquired.

"I guess so," answered Nettie. "But I didn't read it. It looked like all the rest you send me. Picture of a hotel."

"But I had a message on this."

"You always write a message—'Wish you were here. This is where I'm stopping.' You've sent me enough pictures of the Palmer House and the Planters to make a five-reel film."

Tim's smile was gone. He swallowed hard. He could think of nothing to say. That was the trouble with Tim—he was still a lumbering country boy and his heart was so big it dominated his brain.

"I told you I was coming," he explained, finally. "And that—and that I was going to Denver—to run that bowling alley."

"Tim," Nettie said slowly, with a sad shake of her head, "I guess it's all off."

She pointed to his hand that held several letters.

"It's in there," she said. "The ring and a letter. I left them at the desk for you. I'm sorry; really, I am, Tim. I like you a lot, but I"——

She turned quickly. Her voice wavered and she began straightening out a pile of cigarette boxes that were already in perfect alignment.

Tim stood looking vaguely at the letters in his hand. Benny approached and laid a gentle Tim's shoulder.

"Come on, Tim," he said; and they went their room.

UTTERING no word, Benny hurried into the room and began washing his face noisily. dropped into a chair, his chin on his chest, slowly tore open Nettie's letter. A ring, set small diamond dropped to the floor and Tim, a man in a stupor, picked it up and shoved it the watch pocket of his trousers.

Benny was polishing his shoes with a towel Tim called to him.

"Look," Tim said. Benny took the letter. It written in a scrawly hand.

"Dear Tim: You're all right. Tim, I don't to talk to you. I'm inclosing your ring here. call it off. I can't tell you how much it hurts you. You're all right. Good luck. Nettie."

Benny handed back the letter.

"It's that new house detective," he said. " staff told me. He's no good—one of those guys that changes his shirt every day. She's no either. You're lucky to find it out."

This narrative must stick to facts. Tim did leap upon Benny and tle him. Tim was out of element. Had a questioned one of Tim's cisions there would been trouble. But this Tim's girl. He wasn't to talking about girls.

He only shook his "You're wrong, Benny," said, reproachfully. " fine girl. Is she going marry this detective?"

"Dunno. Wagstaff Miller's been takin' her the ball games."

"Why, she don't care thing about baseball. told me so lots of times never could get her out."

"Nevertheless she's on the Giants now. tango hound has got crazy. She's believin' she's been readin' in the pers about how the are framin' up on She thinks we're all Wagstaff told me about Because you're an you amount to about much in her life as his does in a left-handed er's."

Tim looked up blinked his eyes.

"Is it as bad as that?" asked Benny helplessly.

Benny nodded. " battin' double-O-nothin' her. She makes me This guy has pumped her full of baseball that throw down Charley lin himself for Gyp Blood if Gyp had a pass for two to the Grounds.

"But don't quit yet. All I know is what I from Wagstaff. Hotel clerks don't know every I'm goin' down and see Nettie myself."

Tim was utterly crushed. Gone was the spirit had made him known all over the circuit as the bravest umpire in baseball. Crumpled up in chair he was the antithesis of the man who a before, single-handed, had driven back into stands a mob of 200 Cincinnati fanatics, armed cushions and pop bottles. Absent was his manner of the diamond, missing was his gift of satire that had shriveled many a baseball foe.

He picked up a newspaper that Benny had left gave him no comfort. On the sporting page long statement intimating that if the National League umpires were not born crooks they born imbeciles.

"Crooks!" That was what Benny had said tie called all umpires. He turned the page. was news of motor-car bandits. The police on the trail of a gang of hotel robbers. A "cl had been slugged in Central Park.

Many times he had been called a crook, but before had he quite grasped the meaning of word. Nettie thought he was a crook, a man those the police were after. And really he was a baseball umpire, a very unpopular adjunct most popular sport, receiving $350 a month for ing abuse of his sincerest efforts. No matter he did on the diamond, somebody always thought was wrong and made a noise about it. Only dumb, it seemed, ever thought he was right.

As he pondered Tim gained courage. The of Nettie's judgment on umpires made him leap to his feet and pace the room. He forced a took off his red necktie and donned his usual one. He surveyed himself in the mirror, in disapproval and decided to give the red play. He would show Nettie that he didn't after all. Perhaps his action was influenced to a small degree by a dim recollection that somewhere he had heard that the way to make a girl want you was to pay no attention to her.

DOWNSTAIRS Benny was doing a Miles Standish.

He found Nettie O'Malley in a somber mood.

"Tim's all shot to pieces," he said, coming directly to the point at issue. "What's the big idea?"

"Mr. Krueger," she affirmed, "I don't know. Tim's always been a good friend of mine, and goodness knows I wouldn't hurt his feelings."

"Well?" said Benny. "Come on. But"——

"I don't know just why, but I don't like Tim the way I thought I did. He's —I can't tell you. You wouldn't understand."

"Listen, young lady. I'll tell you. I don't understand, don't I? You and Tim used to be little pals. Until a month or so ago he was plenty good enough for you. You liked him and you used to sit around and tell him about the folks back home and argue about the best way to set a hen and how to cure hams and the grip. Tim's just plain folks from a town nobody ever heard of in Nebraska, and you used to be the same sort. Now you've got filled full of this Broadway stuff and you think because Tim is no ornament in a ballroom and because he don't know the head waiter at the Plaza and don't insist on muffins with his tea he's not your kind. Am I right or not? Yes!"

"No," Nettie answered sharply. "Since you must know, I don't like umpires."

"But Tim's one of the best in baseball!"

"The better they are the worse I like them. And I have an idea that you're the best in the world."

"You're a hot one," Benny sneered. "You led Tim on, let him fix up everything to go out to Denver and run that bowling alley and then kicked him out. I suppose you're proud of your work. Do you know that Tim's upstairs in his room now, flat on the bed cryin'? That's what you've done. The gamest umpire in the business, and you've taken all the heart out of him. Knocked him cold. Made a sobbing baby out of him. Proud of your work, I guess."

Nettie was through fighting. Her nerves gave way and the corners of her mouth began to quiver. She dabbed her handkerchief in her eyes.

"I didn't mean to," she said in a quavering voice. "Honest, Mr. Krueger, I didn't know he'd take it so hard. I like Tim, honest I do. I guess—I guess he's the best friend I ever had. I'm sorry, maybe I was wrong. Let me think it over. I don't want to hurt Tim's feelings. Tell him, Mr. Krueger, tell him, I"——

She stopped suddenly, her face hardening as she looked past Benny. He turned. Tim was just stepping out of the elevator. His hat was titled back. He swung a cane jauntily and he was whistling. With a care-free air he walked over to the cigar counter and tossed down a quarter.

"Cigars, please; the same old brand," he said.

Wide-eyed, Nettie mechanically handed him out a package of 10-for-a-quarter cigars.

"Thank you," Tim said, perfunctorily, and tore it open.

"Have one?" he asked, turning to Benny.

Benny, gasping, shook his head. Tim airily lighted one, flicked at an imaginary bit of dust on his coat sleeve and, humming a tune, twirled his cane as he hurried out of the hotel.

"The nerve of him!" said Benny under his breath. "And he's got my new cane!"

NETTIE O'MALLEY was a bright girl. If she hadn't been she never would have been able to stay at the cigar counter of the Hotel Republic, where, under the constant fire of reporters, of the leading minds of commercial clubs of some of the most prosperous cities of the Middle West, in New York for the spring buying, one must keep one's wits about one. Especially if one hopes to sell cigars and still keep one's character as white as the cheeks of a bush-league pitcher the first time he faces Babe Ruth.

The patrons of the Hotel Republic used to show Nettie pictures of their children and repeat their bright patter. Nettie liked it. So you know she was all right.

Rather new to New York, Nettie unfortunately had been bitten by the villainous lobster-salad bug. Added to this she suddenly had been fired with an enthusiasm for baseball.

Mr. Roger Miller was responsible. He was what is known as an awful good dancer. Added to this, he once lived in the same apartment with Mike Donlin. These were the days of the jazz bandits, and even at the Hotel Republic a detective must know all the new steps if he hoped to be allowed to associate with the best criminals.

So Nettie had fallen for Roger. He took her to the ball games, taught her to shake the soil of Iowa from her shoes and piloted her through the most intricate trots. In the meantime he whispered in her ear romantic tales of his prowess as a thief catcher. They were excellent stories. They should have been. A. Conan Doyle conceived them. Roger was a close student of Paul Whiteman, John McGraw and Sherlock Holmes.

In only a few weeks Nettie's memories of big-hearted Tim Patterson, umpire, gradually dimmed. Once they had had much in common. Nettie's father was a farmer, Tim's a country blacksmith. But now she blushed when she remembered that she often had boasted that she could milk a cow.

"She loves you," Benny told Tim as they rode out to the Polo Grounds that afternoon on the elevated.

"No!"

"Yass!"

So Tim had one of the worst afternoons in his career. He couldn't keep his mind on the game. As the devil would have it, all his bad decisions favored the Cubs, and Nettie and Roger Miller were among the Giant fans who raged at him.

McGraw and his hired men were so insulting that Tim felt it necessary to clear the home bench, and 12 Giants, lock-stepping their way across the field to show their derision, were sent to sit on the sunny side of the fence in right field. McGraw, ordered to disperse, withdrew to the little batroom at the end of the bench and watched the remainder of the game by peeping furtively out of the tiny door.

The jeers didn't disturb Tim. He was in love and heard them not.

McGraw, of course, didn't realize this. However, even had he been conversant with all the facts he might not have withheld his vociferous complaint when Tim called a Chicago baserunner safe after even the man sitting atop the semaphore over near the elevated station could see that a quick throw from Snyder to Kelly had caught the runner off the base by three yards.

THAT evening Benny spoke with Nettie. After hearing her purple comments upon the quality of Tim's umpiring that afternoon Benny hurried to find Tim and advise him to buy his cigars outside the hotel until further notice.

"In spite of everything," Benny consoled Tim, "you'll get her yet. But keep away from her now."

Such is the makeup of an umpire that he never lets himself suspect he has erred. It's too dangerous a precedent. And it is bad form for one umpire to speak of another's mistake. So Benny refrained from explaining the true situation.

Baseball players delight in picking each other to pieces, but umpires—together they stand for a lot of things few but umpires would stand for.

"Why keep away from her?" Tim asked innocently. "You pan me for that I-don't-care-stuff I did and now you won't let me try to fix it."

"Didn't I tell you she was a bug about the Giants—and that umpires were touchy subjects with her? Well, the Giants lost this afternoon."

"So? I thought probably they did," he said, innocently. It was not extraordinary, this ignorance. Umpires often work through games and at the end are in doubt as to which club won. "She still has the idea that we're to blame for the Giants' slump? She's crazy, Benny. I'm going right down and see if I can't square it with her."

"You won't do anything of the kind. We're goin' to be here for 10 days, and there's plenty of time. Tonight we're goin' to a vaudeville show."

They sat in their seats until the trained monkeys had finished their last trick and fled into the open air only when the news weekly began to show the latest hats from Paris. Benny returned to the hotel. Tim thought he would walk around a bit.

It was long after midnight when he finally decided to turn in. He was fitting the key into the door of his room when he heard a woman scream. Someone was running toward him. He stood at the junction of four long corridors. In the dim light he saw a man swing around the corner. Tim leaped toward him.

"Get the robber!" the man yelled in a high, piercing voice. "Which way did he go?"

"I dunno," said Tim.

"You go that way and I'll go this," said the man, dashing down one of the halls, at the end of which a red light indicated a fire escape.

The man's directions were indefinite, so Tim ran toward the source of the screams. The corridors were beginning to fill with half-dressed, excited guests. The door of a nearby room was flung open and a beautiful young woman in a night gown burst out.

"A man! A man!" she cried. "He took my jewels!"

Roger Miller, the house detective, sleepy-eyed, pushed his way through the crowd.

"Which way did he go?" he asked.

Nobody seemed to know. Miller started down the hall toward the red light.

"He didn't get out there," Tim said. "A man's guarding that. He must have gone the other way."

"Who's guarding what?" Miller demanded. "This is the only fire escape he could reach without going through somebody's room."

The crowd followed him to the end of the hall. No man was there.

Tim was astonished.

"A man was chasing the thief," he explained. "He told me to go the other way and he would watch here."

The detective for a moment was speechless. Then he burst out:

"That man was the burglar," he roared. "You had him in your hands and you let him go."

The woman who had been robbed stepped forward. She peered into Tim's face.

"He let him go?" she exclaimed. "I don't believe it." She shook her finger in Tim's blank face. "Search this man. He looks like the thief."

AN hour later Tim dropped thankfully into his bed. Dragged from their sleep by the commotion, Benny, the hotel manager, and the day clerk had established in the mind of the excited woman the undoubted honesty of Tim Patterson.

Benny had informed her that the man she accused was a "professional arbiter," and she quickly apologized. Roger Miller dressed and set out to look for the thief.

Tim and Benny rose rather early the next day.

"I looked like a sucker last night," Tim muttered to Benny at breakfast. "I had that guy and let him go."

Benny agreed that the situation was most unfortunate.

"If you'd caught him you'd have shown up that detective," he mused. "Woulda made you strong with Nettie."

"I'd like to catch him," Tim wished. "I'd like to run onto him on the street and grab him and take him to the police station."

"Did you see what he looks like?"

Tim couldn't say that he did. Both admitted that, therefore, conditions were rather unfavorable for any heroic detective work on Tim's part.

TIM worked behind the bat in the morning game. Benny was on the bases. The crowd was large, for a battle between the Cubs and Giants always is worth while.

The game went into the ninth, with the score 2 to 1 in favor of the Giants. With Adams on second, Heathcote came up, pining for a hit that would tie the score and put the Cubs back in the running.

Nehf slipped a fast one over the inside corner of the plate.

"Strr-ik hun!" cried Tim.

"Gimme a chance," Heathcote growled to Tim. "That was 'way inside.

"Strr-ik tuh!" yelled Tim, for Nehf had shoved over another while Heathcote was arguing.

"You're a hot umpire," sneered Heathcote, keeping his face toward the pitcher, however.

"Swing at 'em, son," Tim advised. "Ty Cobb never led the league by keepin' his bat on his shoulder."

Heathcote did swing at the next one, whanging a sharp single to left. Adams rounded third and tried to score on the hit. Meusel, with a great throw to Snyder, nipped Adams by inches.

"Yuh rout!" cried Tim, with a hook of his right arm.

The Giant fans whooped it up as several Cub players surrounded Tim. Grimes came running toward Tim from third base coaching line.

"What did you call that?" he yelled, scandalized, as if he could not believe his ears.

Tim walked quickly down to meet him, swinging his mask in his right hand.

"You heard me, Mr. Grimes. Ask another question and out you go."

"You're a swell umpire," snarled Mr. Grimes. "Scared of McGraw, I guess. Afraid he'll get your job."

"Beat it, Mr. Grimes!" said Tim decisively.

"But I didn't ask, I only"——

"Beat it. You can go home to lunch."

As it became evident to the populace that Grimes had lost an argument, a cheer rose from the stands. As it died down, from out of the crowd back of third base came the high, piercing voice of a Cub rooter.

"O-o-oh yew robber!" he cried at Tim.

Usually an umpire takes no heed of abuse from the stands. At least he feigns indifference. But Tim involuntarily turned quickly and peered into the section whence the cry had come.

He seemed to have heard that voice before. Those words had been shouted at him many times, but that voice! That peculiar intonation and pronunciation of "robber." At Boston? No. Then he remembered. The burglar in the hall at the Hotel Republic.

The game was quickly ended. Tim stopped near the press box, hoping to recognize the figure of the man in the crowd. It was useless and he hurried to the umpires' dressing room under the stand, where he told Benny all about it.

They laid their plans and returned to the hotel for luncheon. Roger Miller was there and Tim, full of enthusiasm, told him all about it and enlisted him.

"We can catch him, sure," said Tim, anxious to make good his mistake of the night before. "Go out this afternoon. Evidently this burglar's a baseball nut from Chicago. Alexander's due to pitch against Bentley this afternoon and no bug would stay away."

"But how will I find him in that mob?" Roger asked. "You don't know what he looks like."

"A bug always sits in the same place. There's only three kinds. The young ones sit back of the catcher to watch the curves. The old ones are divided in two classes, them that sit back of third and the ones over by first. This fellow was back of third this morning, and take my word for it he'll be in the same seat this afternoon. Sit over there, wait for him to yell like I told you and then grab him."

"What if he doesn't yell 'robber'?"

"He's a bug," said Tim laconically, "and there are two umpires out there. We can't lose."

ROGER was on hand back of third base that afternoon. But not alone. He took Nettie with him, for he couldn't resist the temptation to have her there to see him in the act of catching a thief. He told her nothing of Tim's part in the affair.

Tim was umpiring the bases. It gave him more leisure and he kept an ear cocked, hoping to hear the cry of the Cub fan who robbed defenseless young ladies of their jewels and hoaxed umpires into aiding escapes.

It was a bad day for Bentley. His support in the field was miserable and the Giants weren't hitting. The Cubs led from the start. It was not the sort of game, Tim regretfully noted, that

WHAT ABOUT A NEW CAR?

By Stephen Leacock

AT the present season when all the world is out on wheels making motor trips in every conceivable direction, there is no more frequent topic of discussion than the relative merits of the various makes and designs of cars. The public, therefore, gladly welcomes expression of opinions from people of importance like myself.

But, in stating my views on the design and improvement of the motor car, let me explain at the outset that though I own a car and use it a great deal, I cannot pretend to any very technical knowledge as to why it goes and what makes it go. I understand, of course, as well as we all do, the general principle of the gasoline engine, namely, that if gasoline is put into an enclosed space and ignited under compression, it costs 20 cents a gallon.

But that is as far as I have gone.

Nor need I go further. For when I do my driving I have beside me on the front seat my friend and companion, Fred, the chauffeur. How Fred got to learn how to run the thing I don't know—I suppose if a man is young and keen and industrious and applies himself he can learn.

I HAVE heard my friends speak of learning to drive a motor car in a week; indeed I even know a man who says that he bought his car and simply stepped into it and drove right off on a 500-mile trip through the Adirondacks. Not only do I know him but everybody knows him. He is one of the most familiar forms of liar tolerated among us.

But for me it is too late. Let Fred do it.

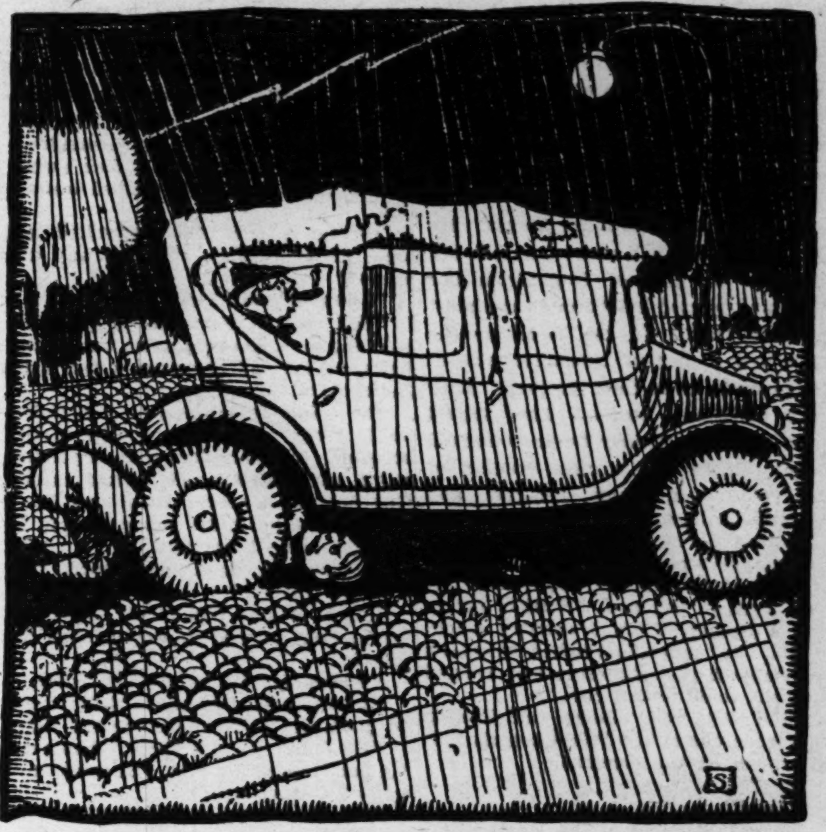
For it was my fortune not to have a car till I was well over 50, in fact nearly 51, and after 50 something of the first brightness of the mind has gone. So I have never learned. All that I can do in a technical way is to give advice that everybody has heard middle-aged men hand out to chauffeurs. "Perhaps, Fred," I say, while I watch him tinkering under the car, "perhaps one of your ignition nuts is upside down," or else—"she may have ripped out part of the warm cells of her batteries."

Remarks of this sort, if the chauffeur is a civil man, are a great help all around. Another one that I use in time of trouble is, "I'm sorry I can't offer to lend a hand, Fred."

IN reality, I'm not sorry. I rather like the sensation of sitting in the car on a drowsy afternoon and feeling Fred lift me up on a jack. There's an ease about it not found elsewhere.

Indeed, the longer my experience lasts the more I find that there is a priceless value attached to not being able to run a car and knowing nothing of the machinery. For instance, on a dark and rainy night what more agreeable than to blow out a couple of tires and then sit behind the side flaps listening to the pelting of the rain and to feel the quiet heaving of the car as Fred works underneath it.

What is more, one has the full sense of heroism and adventure just the same in relating afterwards the experience of the break-down. "Yes," I say, "we were held up in the storm and had a pretty bad time. We busted an axle bar and knocked out the casing of a couple of combustion belts! We had to jack her up and get under her; we were working on her a couple of hours."



"We had to jack her up and get under her—we were working on her a couple of hours."

I OFTEN find myself relating my motor experiences and break-downs and accidents and extraordinary and terrific exertions with a complete forgetfulness of the fact that Fred did it while I sat.

But I fear that I am drifting away from what I meant to talk about. I was only trying to show that I have had the sort of experience which fits a man to know what is a good motor and what isn't. In the light of which it is clear that my views on design and improvement are entitled to a hearing.

In a general way I will say this, as representing not only my own views but those of the vast mass of the public with whom motor car makers have to deal, namely that in designing a car the first thing that I demand is that it shall be as light as possible so as to travel easily and at the same time as heavy as possible so as to remove from the road anything that it hits.

I want it cheap, for why put money into the swollen pockets of the manufacturers, but I refuse to have anything left off it or out of it because of the cheapness. I want them all. I want a self-starter and a self-stopper and a clock and a barometer and hot and cold water—I mean all the little things that good cars have up in front.

IN general design I like four wheels, one at each corner. As to the number of seats to have the matter is a difficult one. People who have a car with two seats find it terribly annoying when there is an extra person whom they would like to take in; they need the third seat the worst way. People with cars with three seats find that they need a fourth seat the worst way. People with cars with four seats find they need the fifth seat the worst way. I know a man who has a car with 10 seats; he says that a 10-seated car is all right but the devil of it is that you can't take in an eleventh person.

On the whole, perhaps, the fewer seats the better. The plague of the extra seats is the necessity that it brings of offering lifts to casual people. I find myself as I drive downtown with Fred in the morning being perpetually plagued by having to pick up odd friends and drop them at their offices.

I think if I were designing a car I would meet the difficulty by having a trap door in the floor of the car—in the main body of it, I mean, behind where Fred and I sit. Then I could with a clear conscience pick up a friend and take him along; when he said, "Drop me at the corner of Main street," I would say, "Right oh!" press a spring and drop him.

Now that I think of it, this same improvement in design would be invaluable while driving along country roads in solving the problem of the tired pedestrian. Like other owners of cars I am often misled by sympathy into taking these people up. It is a mistake. The man at first is grateful and his gratitude is refreshing. But he soon grows tiresome. By the time he says "the motor is a wonderful convenience after all," I do wish I had the trap door.

THE only other definite improvement I could suggest is in regard to the rate and regulation of speed. The problem of high speed—how to attain it and keep it with perfect security, is one on which I have reflected deeply and which I think I may say I have solved.

Everybody knows that in reality the most comfortable rate at which to travel is about 15 miles an hour—whether this is fast or not is a relative matter. It is about the speed of a runaway horse when described as "madly tearing through the streets." In any case it is a very pleasant rate at which to move in a motor.

The only trouble with it is that it doesn't look fast enough on the speed indicator. People like to watch the indicator mounting up from 40 to 50 miles an hour and enjoy all the dare-devil feeling that goes with the furious pace. So, in my car I should like to have an extra little cog wheel inserted in the indicator so as to make it go four to one. At 15 miles an hour it would mark 60, and one would get by watching the indicator, the glorious sense of flight such as only birds, like myself, can enjoy.

At times indeed I have even thought of detaching the indicator and using it without the car. But as that might be bad for the motor car business perhaps it is well not to suggest it in this place. I fear I have suggested enough already for any one layman.

OH, YOU ROBBER!

would cause a Chicago rooter to rail at umpires.

As the game proceeded it seemed certain that the plan would fail. Perhaps the culprit had stayed away. Anyway, were he there, nothing had occurred that might cause him to protest in other than modulated tones.

In the sixth inning Tim gave Bancroft a shade the best of it on a decision at first, but there was no complaint from Chicago partisans.

In the eighth the Giants rallied and carried the score to 6 to 5 against them. In the ninth Grimes singled. On the second pitched ball this militant Cub stole second, safe by a good margin.

"Wonder you didn't call me out," said Grimes. "I only beat the throw by 20 minutes."

Tim only shrugged his shoulders.

"Yaas you did," said Frisch. "I let you have it so you could see what second base looked like. Been a long time since you were down here. If all base-runners were like you we could use a shoebox for second base and it never would wear out."

"Aw, is that so?" growled Grimes. Which in baseball is thought to be the acme of saw-toothed persiflage.

Tim planted himself in the diamond near second base, from which vantage point he could dash quickly toward first or third, depending upon whatever play came next. He wished now that he had called Grimes out at second. It would have meant little in the result of the game and it might have drawn a rise out of the thief in the stands.

On the next pitched ball Grimes, for no known reason, dashed for third. The play caught the Giants unawares. Snyder shot the ball to Jackson. The throw was high and Grimes slid under him. It was a clean steal of third. Jackson as he swung his arm down to touch the runner, dropped the ball, immediately recovering it.

"Out!" yelled Tim exultantly. Then instinctively he turned toward the stands back of third.

"O-o-h yew robber!" came the high piercing cry.

Tim's attention was immediately distracted from the stands where Roger Miller was taking decisive action. Fifteen protesting Chicago players engaged his attention. Five of these he put out of the game without a single prick of conscience. He felt that he had done his duty. Now the robber would be caught.

Of course, he had no time to explain his position to the raging Cubs, who finally calmed down and finished the contest victors over the Giants.

BENNY, bright-eyed, joined Tim at the dinner table that evening. Tim was happy, for he had learned that Miller had arrested the culprit at the Polo Grounds. Benny had more joyful news for him.

"Don't ask me how," Benny said. "I've fixed it. I don't know myself how. Nettie and a friend and you and me are goin' to a show tonight. Nettie's strong for you, and all you have to do, Tim, is to forgive and forget."

After the trip to the theater Benny and the friend were conveniently lost while Nettie and Tim strolled over to Riverside drive. They sat themselves on a bench, out of the way of passersby.

"And you really will marry me and go out to Denver?"

"Whenever you say," whispered Nettie.

"And you don't think I'm a crook because I'm an umpire?"

"I knew I loved you when you called that horrid Mr. Grimes out at third this afternoon. I've loathed him ever since he made a home run off Barnes that last game he pitched for the Giants."

It was several minutes before Tim could speak again.

"And you don't love that detective?"

"Detective, ha," laughed Nettie in derision. "He's a fine detective! Didn't you hear about his arresting that man at the Polo Grounds this afternoon?"

"Yes, the hotel burglar."

"Hotel burglar, nothing. The clerk told me just before we left the hotel. It was an innocent traveling man from Joplin, Mo., that he arrested. The real burglar was caught by the police this afternoon and he confessed."

Tim gasped.

"Did—did—er Miller tell you anything about how he happened to arrest the wrong fellow?"

He felt Nettie shake her head. "I haven't seen him since the game," she said.

Tim realized the need of immediate action.

"That detective's no good," he said. "Promise me you won't speak to him ever again—at least not until after we're married."

Nettie promised.

Tim looked at his watch.

"I wonder if there's any way to get a license tonight?" he said.

Europe's ROYAL Saleslady.

A DANGEROUS, delightful, golden-haired queen is Marie of Rumania, who "sells" her little kingdom by dint of a fascinating personality.

BY A LADY OF THE RUMANIAN COURT.

PERHAPS it is just as well for the United States that reasons of state oblige the "Lady Talleyrand" of the Balkans to delay her long anticipated visit to Washington.

It is a bit troublesome, the world in which she lives just now, what with King Boris furnishing a target for communistic bullets and the soviets snarling and snapping around the edges of Bessarabia.

It won't be this year, but sooner or later Queen Marie of Rumania will betake herself to New York, and Americans will for the first time meet a Queen who knows her business.

Her Majesty is so exceptionally handsome and so affably democratic in her manner that she disarms suspicion. But ask any of the trained diplomats of Europe who is the shrewdest schemer around the political chessboard and he will confide that there is a female Machiavelli in Rumania who can give them all cards and spades.

Not so long ago she made a sort of disguised royal progress through Europe seeking sons-in-law—that is, husbands for her beautiful daughters and loans for her beloved Rumanians.

And the press of every country to be visited warned its statesmen to beware of her beguiling charms. True, she did not make off with any prizes that trip; at least no one loaned her any millions, nor did the Prince of Wales fall into the arms of her marriageable child. But who knows how many loans she extended, what secret understandings she reached or what statesmen she undid?

In England they admitted she triumphed in a difficult situation. It is no secret that Queen Mary did not like her style and thoroughly distrusted her arts. Yet she too succumbed, or at least seemed to. When the Prince heard that his mother and the "angel without wings" from Rumania were chumming around he exclaimed:

"My hat! I wonder how long they will get on."

THEY did get on, right through the weeks Marie spent in England, even though at the state ball the gowns of the two Queens clashed and Mary was seen to eye dubiously the bizarre jeweled cross that hung to Marie's shapely waist and the Russian crown which rested on the gleaming gold of her hair.

There was a reason. Queen Mary is determined to marry the Prince of Wales respectably at any cost, and—who knows but that his fickle fancy might fall on the beautiful little daughter of Rumania's beautiful Queen? No one denies that the Queen of England is a wise woman.

One is inclined to think that all the stories of this dazzling and beautiful Queen Marie have been told, but chance has taken me to Rumania and into the court life at Bucharest quite frequently, and I learned things about her there that I have never seen printed anywhere. And it is upon the intimate and informal little incidents of my association with her that my conception of this extraordinary woman is based.

I wonder if it generally is known, for instance, that at one time the King of Rumania, weary of Marie's flirtations, threatened her with virtual banishment from the throne? Her response to this threat indicates that, even then, she was at heart the consummate diplomat the world later discovered her to be.

What do you think Queen Marie did at this crisis of her life? Weep? No. Storm? Certainly not. No. Her Majesty robed herself in all the barbaric glory of Rumanian costume, placed her royal crown on her golden head and with that sunny hair flowing unbound down her back she went to the King's chamber and knelt penitently at his feet.

Of course His Majesty could not resist her appeal. Who could? So he reached down and drew her into his arms.....

Queen Marie of Rumania, who is called "the lady Talleyrand of the Balkans." She is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria.

King Ferdinand. He has taken his wife's advice on more than one momentous occasion and joined the Allies when she delivered an ultimatum.

But a man can embrace while he does not forgive. Though held captive by her beauty the King robbed her of many prerogatives that she had enjoyed and pushed her as far as possible into the background, even going to the length of giving the control of her children to a governess.

With the serene patience of the very clever woman, Marie endured these slights and awaited the hour of her revenge.

The hour struck during the war. It happened one night while the King's subjects milled around outside his castle walls. His Majesty had been accused of holding pro-German views and the rabble roared hoarsely:

"We want war!"

Queen Marie stepped out on the balcony and answered them:

"You want war. So do I. And we will have war—in half an hour, I promise you!"

Then like an avenging goddess she swept straight into the presence of the King.

"Declare war on the Allied side in half an hour or I will proclaim a revolution with my son as King," was her inexorable ultimatum.

WHAT the King replied Queen Marie did not tell me. But it is history that within the half hour Rumania had declared war on Germany.

No wonder that von Bulow himself once declared:

"She is so damned clever in diplomacy that I am afraid she will upset our plans. Her good looks and her brains will do for us."

And von Bulow is by no means the only diplomat who feared the Rumanian charmer. There are many other members of foreign diplomatic circles who feel distinctly nervous when they see her lovely face. For not a few of them have all too vivid memories of wonderful moonlit nights in the Carpathians and on the banks of the silvery Danube, of fountains splashing softly, of the love songs of nightingales, of the clash of weird Tzigane music, and a soft voice coaxing from them secrets they would wish had been left untold.

But in her own Rumania they love and trust her. In their history she will live as the Teacher Queen—the teacher who practiced what she preached.

THEY love her too because she shares their love of gambling. Often she has told me laughingly that of all the excitements of her life the greatest thrill is the one that comes when she takes a flutter with a horse. She herself is a splendid horsewoman. She drives a horse as well as she does a car, and rides like a Diana. And at the same time her omelettes would not disgrace the chef at the Ritz. I know, because I've eaten them.

For a royal personage she is very close to her subjects. It is not difficult to obtain an audience with her. Indeed, a large portion of her time, as well as King Ferdinand's, is devoted to receiving not only visitors but any one else with proper credentials, for it is the custom of the Kings and Queens of Rumania to give their subjects advice on all sorts of matters.

The Queen smilingly told me how one old lady from the country made the arduous journey to Bucharest to ask her what she should feed her chickens. The old lady explained simply that she had heard that Her Majesty was good at raising poultry and preparing them for the table.

If the ghost of old Bismarck happened to be hovering around the palace that day his historic scowl must have grown deeper and blacker.

For it was Bismarck who once said: "That damned little golden-haired girl will cook our goose in the Balkans."

And Queen Marie did just that. ◆

INVENTION EXPECTED TO CUT AIRPLANE FATALITIES IN HALF

Among a number of spectacular developments in aviation reported from France within the last few weeks is a remarkable safety bomb invented by Captain Albert Lepinte of the French Army. Its general use, according to the inventor, would cut in half the number of fatal accidents in flying.

As described in Popular Science Monthly for July, the bomb, or rocket, is designed to counteract the phenomenon that aviators call "loss of speed," which is responsible for possibly 50 per cent of the deaths of flyers.

Airplanes are constructed to fly normally at an angle of about nine degrees from the horizontal. If this angle is increased slightly for some reason, the plane immediately begins to sink, due to loss of speed and decreased "lift." If this happens near the earth the pilot cannot stabilize his plane in time to prevent a bad landing, or possibly a fatal crash.

To permit pilots, under such conditions, to straighten out their planes, clear obstacles, and regain the power of flight, Captain Lepinte has placed a series of rockets on the sides of the plane or within the fuselage, set at angles determined by scientific calculation. These are filled with a high explosive volume of gas under extremely high pressure. The rockets are set off by electric sparks, and the gas escapes through tubes placed at various parts of the plane.

When the rockets are exploded, the volume of gas released produces a retarding or accelerating force on the plane, according to the part of the plane to which it is applied, and this suffices to move the plane into stability. Thus, the rush of gas through escape pipes beneath the plane will cause it to rise slightly, the inventor claims. In case of free falling from great heights, the invention is intended to check the speed of descent and stabilize the plane.

High Blood Pressure

though others still remain unknown. The high blood pressure is needed for the welfare of the body as changed; obviously, then, unless we can remove the changes that have made the higher pressure necessary, we might do harm by directly lowering the blood pressure by drugs.

"When the blood pressure is beginning to climb, we do well to enforce the general hygienic measures that have been described here as applicable to healthy persons who desire to keep well."

There is nothing that should alarm in the mere fact of blood pressure—it is a physiological necessity. Without the pressure created by the pumping of the heart and by the expansion and contraction of the arteries with each pulse wave, the life-sustaining blood would not circulate through the body: From heart into arteries, then into smaller arteries (arterioles) and into capillaries, when the return journey begins by way of little veins (venules) and veins back to the heart, whence it is sent through the lungs and brought back to the heart before being pumped into the arteries again.

BUT although blood pressure is necessary, and although it varies according to sex and age, also according to individuals and according to different parts of the body of the same individual and according to motions, meals, and time of day, yet it must remain within certain limits if health is to be preserved. Blood pressure, unduly high, is a signal of warning from nature.

Hypertension, as the doctors call it, is divided into three classes. Some cases are called functional, and in them the blood pressure will return to normal if the underlying causes, usually of a physical or chemical order, are removed. Other cases are called organic, and they are due to some structural change in the heart, blood vessels or other organs. In the latter cases, although the process may be prevented from growing worse, it seldom can be got rid of entirely nor, as a rule, can the patient hope to see his blood pressure return to its earlier levels and remain there.

In between these two clearly defined classes come still more cases which are intermediate, either partly functional and partly organic or in the process of changing over from the functional to the organic.

THE causes of high blood pressure still are more or less shrouded in mystery, despite the classification just given. "The functional hypertensions appear to arise in association with certain persistent mental states or with intoxications in which some known or unknown poisonous substances circulate in the blood," say Dr. Barker and Dr. Cole. "The commonest of the causes to which high blood pressure has been attributed is the abnormal 'wear and tear' of our modern life. We are proud of our American 'pep,' and of the ability of the American 'to get things done.'" The authors grant the excellences of this attitude, but call it "a vast and hideous mistake" when allowed to injure seriously the business and professional personnel of the country.

Tenseness, anxiety and fear are bad habits of mind. Anxiety and worry involve an element of fear. Fear brings with it unconscious preparations for either fight or flight, which in turn are accompanied by a rise in blood pressure in order to prepare the circulatory system for the expected strenuous work. Even though the necessity for action should not be arrived at, the preparation for it remains the same. Long continued, or often repeated, such states may result in persistent, abnormal blood pressure. Most of these cases, with proper treatment, can be brought back to normal or nearly normal.

Some other instances of high blood pressure without organic changes do not seem to depend on psychic factors only. In them the pressure increases, year by year, despite treatment. Usually they are assumed to depend upon the presence of a noxious substance, elaborated somewhere in the body, which circulates in the blood and stimulates the arterioles to contraction, either by acting upon a brain center or by acting directly on the muscles of the arterioles. To overcome this increased resistance to flow, the heart must do a larger amount of work.

TEMPORARY high blood pressure may follow the use of certain drugs. The caffeine in coffee raises the pressure and so does the nicotine in tobacco. It has not been proved that even the long-repeated use of these poisons results in more than temporary rises of blood pressure. Alcohol has been accused, also, but the proof is lacking. Workers in lead, mercury and zinc often develop high blood pressure, due, however, to organic changes in the arteries and kidneys produced by the long-continued action of these poisonous metals. Heredity, it is believed, plays an important part in some functional hypertensions.

The most important changes associated with so-called organic cases of high blood pressure are found in the walls of the blood vessels themselves—arteriosclerosis. In this affliction, the elastic elements of arteries or of arterioles are supplanted to a certain extent by a tough, strong, unyielding material and a thickening of the walls occurs, encroaching upon the space for blood. Such blood vessels cannot accommodate themselves as before to the varying pressures between heart-beat and heart-beat, nor can they assist the heart by expanding and contracting with each pulse wave.

Not only does this throw more work upon the heart, but the heart pounds along until at last, under the continued hammering of the systolic pressure, the walls of the blood vessels begin to "give way." Then ensues a dilatation of the vessel or an actual lengthening with tortuosity, sometimes to be seen in the arteries of the temple. Moreover, if the supply of blood to an organ is impeded by narrowed arteries, then the organ's functions must suffer. Eventually its structure will be affected by faulty nutrition, for when an organ functions less, it grows smaller. If this occurs in the kidneys, there is a slow impairment of kidney function; if in the brain, mental changes may become manifest, or a paralytic stroke may occur; if in the wall of the heart itself, attacks of angina pectoris or of other heart disorders. Apoplexy means trouble in a blood vessel in the brain.

AS to the causes of arteriosclerosis, little is actually known. But physicians say it is certain that heredity figures very largely, that the arteries of some of us contain a better quality of tubing than other persons possess. Poisons retained in the system as a result of impaired function of the kidneys are a potent source of damage to the arterial walls. Poisons produced in the course of acute infectious diseases and not entirely eliminated may exert a damaging influence. Poisons, such as lead, may be absorbed from the outer world. The arteries do not escape the changes of advancing age. Certain diseases predispose toward arteriosclerosis. Excessive mental or physical work seems to have an effect in that direction, and so does overeating. In many cases, no explanation can be found.

Some writers believe that the sequence is clear from simple excessive blood pressure to arteriosclerosis and to the maladies of kidney, brain and heart which mark the end of so many elderly persons' lives. Others believe that the first change is a subtle degeneration of the walls in the smaller arteries and arterioles, with a consequent rise in blood pressure. Whatever the order, they seem to be complementary.

High blood pressure is such a common affliction, and its causes still so hazy, that any important contribution to the subject will be welcomed by the general public and by the medical profession.

A Detective's Daughter Solves a Crime Mystery

world is known to have carried such an expensive snuff box. Surely such a one will be known to the young women of his class, for the man who robbed me was young and looked as though he would be known to young women."

The father agreed. Within a few hours he brought to his house, secretly, a young woman of the underworld, not a very nice or pleasant person, but one who still preserved traces of the beauty that had been hers. The father left his daughter and the girl-thief alone. Louise, as she afterwards told the Deputy Commissioner, pleaded long and hard.

At first the girl was adamant. She would take no interest in turning up one of her kind because of such a little thing as the theft of a neck chain from a girl pedestrian. Louise could not explain the significance of the snuff box. She asked only that she be told who had carried it in the underworld. After a while, things that Louise said to the other girl, and promises she made, won.

AMONG the promises was one she would not give up the thief to the police if he would bring her chain back to her. She would even return to him the snuff box he had dropped, she said. When Louise's father was called in he vouched for his daughter's promise; if the thief were sent to the house with the stolen neck chain, Louise would not turn him over to the police for such a little theft as that.

With unerring instinct the girl of the underworld went straight to a petty thief known to his intimates as Josef Leban. This thief of small things was badly frightened when he discovered that the girl he had robbed was the daughter of one of the city's most merciless detectives. He hovered between instant flight and the interview with his young victim which the latter demanded through her emissary. He decided it would be better to placate the detective.

He had sold the chain and its imitation jewel, but knew how to recover it. He took it with him when he presented himself at the house of Louise and was abashed by the prettiness with which she thanked him. As she had promised she returned to him his snuff box. At this Josef Leban marveled.

They talked long, Josef and Louise. At first the thief was uncomfortable in the house of a policeman, but he knew well enough to accept the policeman's word that because he had made his amends the promise of immunity would be faithfully kept.

Louise wanted to know, after she had served tea to her visitor and laughed gaily at his clumsy attempt to handle a tea cup properly, about young people in the underworld, especially the young men—like himself. She wanted to know how it could be that such a one as he, for example, could be so brutal, in his robberies, to such a one as—she. She showed him the scar, still purple, on her arm where he had twisted it to make her stop struggling while he took off her chain. "How can a young man, a nice young man such as you must really be at heart, Josef, do such a thing as that?" Louise asked the petty thief.

Josef didn't exactly know how such things were. Girls in his world, he said, didn't amount to much in the appreciation of chaps like himself. "They're pretty, some of them," he said, "and the best thieves get the prettiest girls, of course, and keep them. We who are not such good thieves get the rest. They get us in trouble a lot and they're in the way a lot, and they don't behave themselves unless we knock them around a bit."

It was, probably, the longest speech and clearest explanation of anything Josef ever had made. He wasn't used to talking much, Louise marveled at such a method of treating girls, and begged him to tell her more.

Josef was enjoying himself, sitting in a comfortable, home-like parlor, talking to a girl about such things, with cakes and tea, no need to look over his shoulder or watch for some better thief than he to come up, take his girl by the arm because she was pretty, and haul her away. When he shuffled to his feet and announced that he'd have to be getting back to his haunts or some of his partners would be accusing him of being busy on a "job" that he'd kept secret from them, he pulled from his pocket the snuff box and sheepishly asked Louise if she wouldn't let him give it to her as a sort of souvenir..

"It'll make me feel better about my knocking you down the other night," he assured her.

Louise thanked him with a tender smile. "But," she said, "she wouldn't take anything as nice as that from him—it must be quite the nicest and most expensive thing he had."

Josef admitted that he had nothing else, no jewels or anything of gold or silver, because things of that sort had always to be sold to a "fence" and the proceeds divided with confederates, but the snuff box, he declared, was all his own and he wished Louise would take it and not bother about thanking him because maybe he knew where he could get another about like it when he had time to go after it.

BUT Louise wouldn't be persuaded. No, she said, she had a reason, "a funny reason, maybe," for not wanting to take the sentimental gift. "Anyhow," she argued, "she would have to think about it. No, she wouldn't ask her father, or tell him about it at all, nor was it because it was stolen that she didn't know whether she'd accept it. She'd think to herself and, if Josef would like, perhaps he would come again tomorrow afternoon, or the next afternoon beyond that, and sit in the parlor again and have more tea and cakes. By that time she would have her mind made up if she could take such a gift from him. She wished he would come, she told him, "because she liked him tremendously, and he needn't be afraid."

With something of puzzlement in his eyes and his brain, Josef went back to the dives of the underworld. Probably he beat his own girl more viciously than usual, that night, for surely this one could not be so pretty and delicate and dainty as the Louise whose gentleness kept bobbing up in his brain.

The idea of his paying another call at the detective's house shocked him, and disturbed him, too, because there was something pleasant about the thought of it. So, two afternoons later, he approached the home of Louise cautiously, as thieves do, and watched it for a long time to assure himself that Louise would be home and her father would not be. Knowing what she'd learned about the ways of furtive people it is more than possible that when Louise appeared, once or twice, at her windows, to look up and down the street, she suspected that Josef might be near, and would see that she was in the house. This time Louise explained her "funny reason" for not wanting the snuff box. "She knew," she explained, "that 'his girl' whoever she might be wouldn't like him to make such a present to her, Louise, who he'd only known two days now. And it wouldn't be fair to 'his girl' for him to give the box to her, Louise, because, knowing girls, she knew that 'his girl' would have a pride in his carrying such a pretty thing."

But he had said that perhaps he could get another one. "This other one I would like very much to have—" and here the wise little Louise added, softly, "from you!"

There was another afternoon at the detective's house, and another. Josef talked of many things about the underworld and its people, and of his own big deeds—he made them sound big, and Louise cried aloud and clapped her hands, now and then, in her marvels at the seeming bigness of these deeds of Josef. Particularly she cried out in awe at the biggest thing he'd ever done, the time he, single handed, got into a "swell's" house in Grosvenor Square, in London, and made a wax impression, by a trick he knew, of the locks on a glass cabinet and then went back again, a week later, and robbed the cabinet of a lot of precious things like the snuff box.

LOUISE thought that was a brave and mighty thing to do, even if her father was a detective to whom she wouldn't, of course, tell a thing that would get Josef into trouble. She wanted to know ever so many more details and Josef, liking his tea and cakes and his pretty listener, bragged about them all. He explained how he had a job as a mechanic in a little garage just off Grosvenor Square, and how he had hit upon a way of getting through one of the barred windows in 'the swell's house.' He didn't dare move around much, so confined himself to the cabinet. When he saw that he couldn't k the glass he decided on the wax ssions of the locks, and the keys made worked splendidly. The snuff which couldn't be sold openly, said, he'd put away in safe hands "after a while" until he or a friend is in Madrid, who knew where they could find somebody with money gh, some prosperous 'fence' to buy lot and take the gems out. So far 'd only sold a handful of them, just gh to keep him in spending money 'his girl' in a dress or two.

When Louise had cried aloud several over the excitement of such a "big " she suddenly bethought herself 'uncle and aunt and a girl cousin' lived in Madrid. Some day soon, haps, she would be going there to them—she always did just about time of every year. "Couldn't she Josef's friend, in Madrid, and have let her pick out one of the boxes herself? She'd like to see such a lot of plunder, and she'd like to one of his jeweled boxes—to always remember him by. She'd never tell her father, that would be a secret between Josef and her."

"Sure!" said Josef.

AND that was how Louise recovered for the police of Scotland Yard the dozens of jeweled snuff boxes stolen that night from the house of Sir Henry Ladd.

She kept her word to Josef, and didn't tell her father. But she talked long and earnestly with the Deputy Commissioner. She made her bargain that neither Josef nor his friend must be arrested. And neither was.

Louise, accompanied by an agent of the Brussels police and met by an inspector of Scotland Yard, went to Madrid where the Spanish police already had provided her with "an uncle and aunt and a girl cousin."

She visited these "relatives" in their home for a week or more and then, one morning, went down to a little shop in one of the evil streets south from the Plaza, and found there a man who brought Josef's friend to her when he read the note Josef had given her. The shop keeper and the friend eyed Louise dubiously, for a time, but she was very pretty in her Spanish dress and mantilla, and dropped a word or two mysteriously about "Josef and me!"

The snuff boxes were in the shop keeper's safe, all but a few of them. From some of those that remained a few gems had been dug, but these damages were not serious. When Louise had made her choice and left the store, the Spanish police swooped down. By special orders of the Commissioner of the Madrid Bureau of Safety the shop keeper and Josef's friend were promptly released when they had assured the officials that they could not recover any of the boxes that had been disposed of.

Gen. Ladd bestowed a generous reward upon Louise, and she wears now the gold badge of a "special inspector" of the Brussels police.

The Strange, True Tale of a Mutiny

d to escape and in secret built selves a raft and ventured out upon past the breakers, but their hearts d them and they returned. Among r number some still clung to the ies. The wife of Tullaloo killed husband in sympathy with his opers.

Then the slaves arose. They seized guns of the mutineers. Christian was murdered in his garden. Mills, Martin, Brown and Williams all met death at the hands of the Tahitians they had betrayed. McKoy and Quintall escaped to the crags. Adams, wounded and pursued to the cliffs, made terms with the natives just as he was about to jump into the sea. Young, a favorite of the women, had been hidden safely by them.

But the triumphant natives turned upon one another; and aided by the widows of the murdered whites the four remaining Englishmen treacherously entrapped them and every brown man upon the isle was killed.

The four whites now were alone with the women and children. McKoy devised a still and from ti-root (drachoena terminalis) produced a spirit. It was more powerful than modern "bootleg." He and Quintall, his helper, passed days in drunken delirium. And McKoy, maddened by his drink one day, climbed a pinnacle above the sea and, fastening a stone to a rope about his body, jumped from the cliff.

Quintall continued drunk. Once, in his frenzy, he bit off the ear of his wife. Shortly afterward she fell—or threw herself—from a cliff where she was seeking bird's eggs; and despite the other women on the island Quintall demanded the companion of another white man for a wife. He threatened death if she refused.

Adams and Young pretended to assent. Quintall, stupidly drunk, was lured into Adams' house. Then the others set upon him with a hatchet and killed the man. Within a short time Young, worn out by hardship and dissipation, died and old John Adams was left alone of all the whites.

Think for a moment of the man. He could read, though he could not then write. His living grew at his hand, almost without labor. His companions now were women and children only. Imagine him, growing old, then, with his thoughts for company. A seaman, with a seaman's superstitions and his fears. Imagine his gloomy hut where the stains of Mathew Quintall's blood darkened the floor and threshold. Memories of England crowded to his mind and with them memories, perhaps, of a mother's teaching. In the hut of Isabelle Christian, widow of the leader of the mutiny, he found a Bible and a Book of Common Prayer. The two he took. These were something to read.

And reading awoke a reformation in the man. He determined to amend his ways. Incidentally he learned from these two volumes how to write. From the Book of Common Prayer he devised a service of worship. He assembled the women and children of his patriarchate. He taught them of God. He showed them how to pray. . . .

Twenty years passed. The children of the mutineers grew up, brown, strong, virile men and women, under the tropical sun. Then the good ship Topaz came that way from Boston, seeking water on the island. On Feb. 8, 1808, Capt. Mayhew Folger of the Topaz was surprised when from Bounty Bay there came forth boats of copper-colored rowers; for Pitcairn's Island on the charts was marked "uninhabited."

And the stanch seaman gasped when the natives hailed him from their boat in the sterling English of King James' time, offering him cocoanuts as evidence of their good will. There was a white man on the island, they said, and would he come ashore?

He did. The white man was Alexander Smith, who under that name had been one of the Bounty's mutineers. He told Folger his story. In return the Yankee captain told of Napoleon's rise, of England's wars, of America's adventure as a nation. He talked of John Adams, second President of these United States, whom he much admired.

Capt. Folger was astounded at the simple, unaffected modesty, the sincere ways, the forthright conduct of the islanders; at the beauty of the simple worship in which 35 natives joined with their patriarch.

AFTER six years in the Briton and the Tagus, Captains Staines and Pipon of the British Navy came that way. They, too, met Smith, who now called himself John Adams, a name he had taken when the Yankee left. Adams wished, even at life's risk, to return to England; but the British, though they knew him for a mutineer, felt that a better purpose would be served by leaving him there as teacher than by taking him home to hang.

Other ships came, with years between. John Buffet, left by one of them, succeeded the failing Adams as teacher and preacher. John Evans and George Hunn Nobbs, in turn, were thus left on the island and each became teacher to the little colony. By 1830 it had 70 people, all descended from the Bounty's mutineers and these three men.

Fearing their island would not support them, England transported them all to Tahiti. But the indolence, luxury, laziness and immorality of the Tahitians were repugnant to them, and the Pitcairn Islanders returned to their own home. Later England attempted to colonize them on Norfolk Island, in 1856; but after a short time, although most of them remained, two families fared back to Pitcairn. They and their descendants populate that island to this day.

In 1829 John Adams died. Ten years later an American whaler put in at Bounty Bay. Her carpenter, Levi Hayden, found Isabella, widow of Fletcher Christian, trying to read the fine print of her Bible with rheumy eyes. He offered her his own, which had larger type and received hers in exchange.

Although her name was Isabella, Fletcher Christian had called his Tahitian wife "The Mainmast"—for she was tall and straight—and that in her island pronunciation became Mai'mas', so that Hayden, misunderstanding, inscribed her name as Mary on the flyleaf of the volume. He gave it on his return home to William M. Rogers, pastor of the Mariners' Church in Boston, and he in turn to his successor, Daniel Miner Lord, whose children recently gave it to the New York Public Library.

There peacefully it reposes in snug harbor, that tiny and yellow volume which out of the chaos of blood and lust and anarchy has brought peace to so many souls.

MIDSUMMER MADNESS IN MID·MISSOURI MINDS

By GORDON HUDELSON.

As a result of a contest conducted by a Moberly newspaper for the best snake or fish story, a score of yarns, some said to be true, have been received.

In Northeast Missouri are various kinds of reptiles. One contributor tells of the "hoop" snake. Another had an experience with a "joint" snake, which shook itself to pieces and then gathered itself together again and ran off into the rocks.

The hoop snake is one that catches its tail in its mouth when it is attacked and forms a hoop. Rolling along like a boy's hoop, it travels as fast as a man can run.

While many truthful snake and fish stories were received by the Moberly newspaper, some of the stories sent in were merely for the object of entertainment, and a few of these show rare imagination. One contributor says:

"Once I decided to go fishing, so I took a team and wagon to haul the fish home. I also took a gun to shoot a woodpecker or squirrel for bait. I took a crooked pole so I could fish around the bend in the creek. When nearing the creek I saw two deer ahead of me. They were not in line, so I bent the gun barrel so as to shoot a curve, and I killed both the deer.

"When the gun was discharged I landed on my back and bounced off in the creek, and when I got up and waded out my hunting coat pockets and boots were full of fish, weighing from three to five pounds each. When I fell into the brush pile I killed 24 quail. So I had a very successful day."

But here's a story which the author emphatically declared was "the truth." While going to a spring to get a bucket of water he saw a snake hopping along on the ground. He killed the snake and upon investigation found that it had swallowed a frog. The frog had kicked its rear legs through the snake's side and was hopping away with the snake

Another resident of Moberly told this story, which, he said, was "slightly enlarged upon:"

"I was riding along the road and saw a rattlesnake imprisoned by a rock in a ditch. I got off my horse and lifted the rock off the snake, and the grateful creature followed me home.

"It stayed around the house like a watchdog, but one night I was awakened by cries and groans in the room. I turned on the light. My pet snake was coiled around a burglar's throat and its tail was out of the window rattling for the police "

Then the story of the snakes swallowing each other was told of course That's inevitable.

Another yarn was that of the snake that had the habit of eating eggs from hens' nests. The snake crawled part way through a knot hole and swallowed an egg. It couldn't crawl back through the hole and it jerked itself in two

The best fish story submitted was about the sunburned fish that was caught in the Chariton River after it had splashed all the water out of the stream in an effort to get off the line.

Here's another of the fish stories A resident of Moberly went fishing and his dog followed him Meeting with bad luck, the man laid a quarter at the feet of the dog and told him to take it and jump in the creek and get some fish.

"The dog dived into the water," said the fisherman, "and brought up two nice catfish and 15 cents in change."

FRECKLES

Don't hide them with a Veil; Remove them with Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil or waste time on lemon juice or cucumbers; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back proposition.

We recommend Othine Complexion Soap for use with Othine, also as a shampoo—it's wonderful for bobbed hair—25c a cake at all drug or department stores or by mail. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Keep Slender

Are you afraid to appear in a bathing suit? Afraid of the comments of the other bathers, afraid of the comments of the watchers who themselves would never dare to show their figures?

You need not be afraid! Marmola Tablets will make your figure slender and graceful. Thousands of men and women each year regain healthy, slender figures this way. No exercises, no diets—eat what you want and get slender!

If you have never used Marmola Tablets, try them now. Enjoy being slender again. It's a glorious feeling.

All drug stores have them—one dollar a box. Or they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid, by the Marmola Co., 1766 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

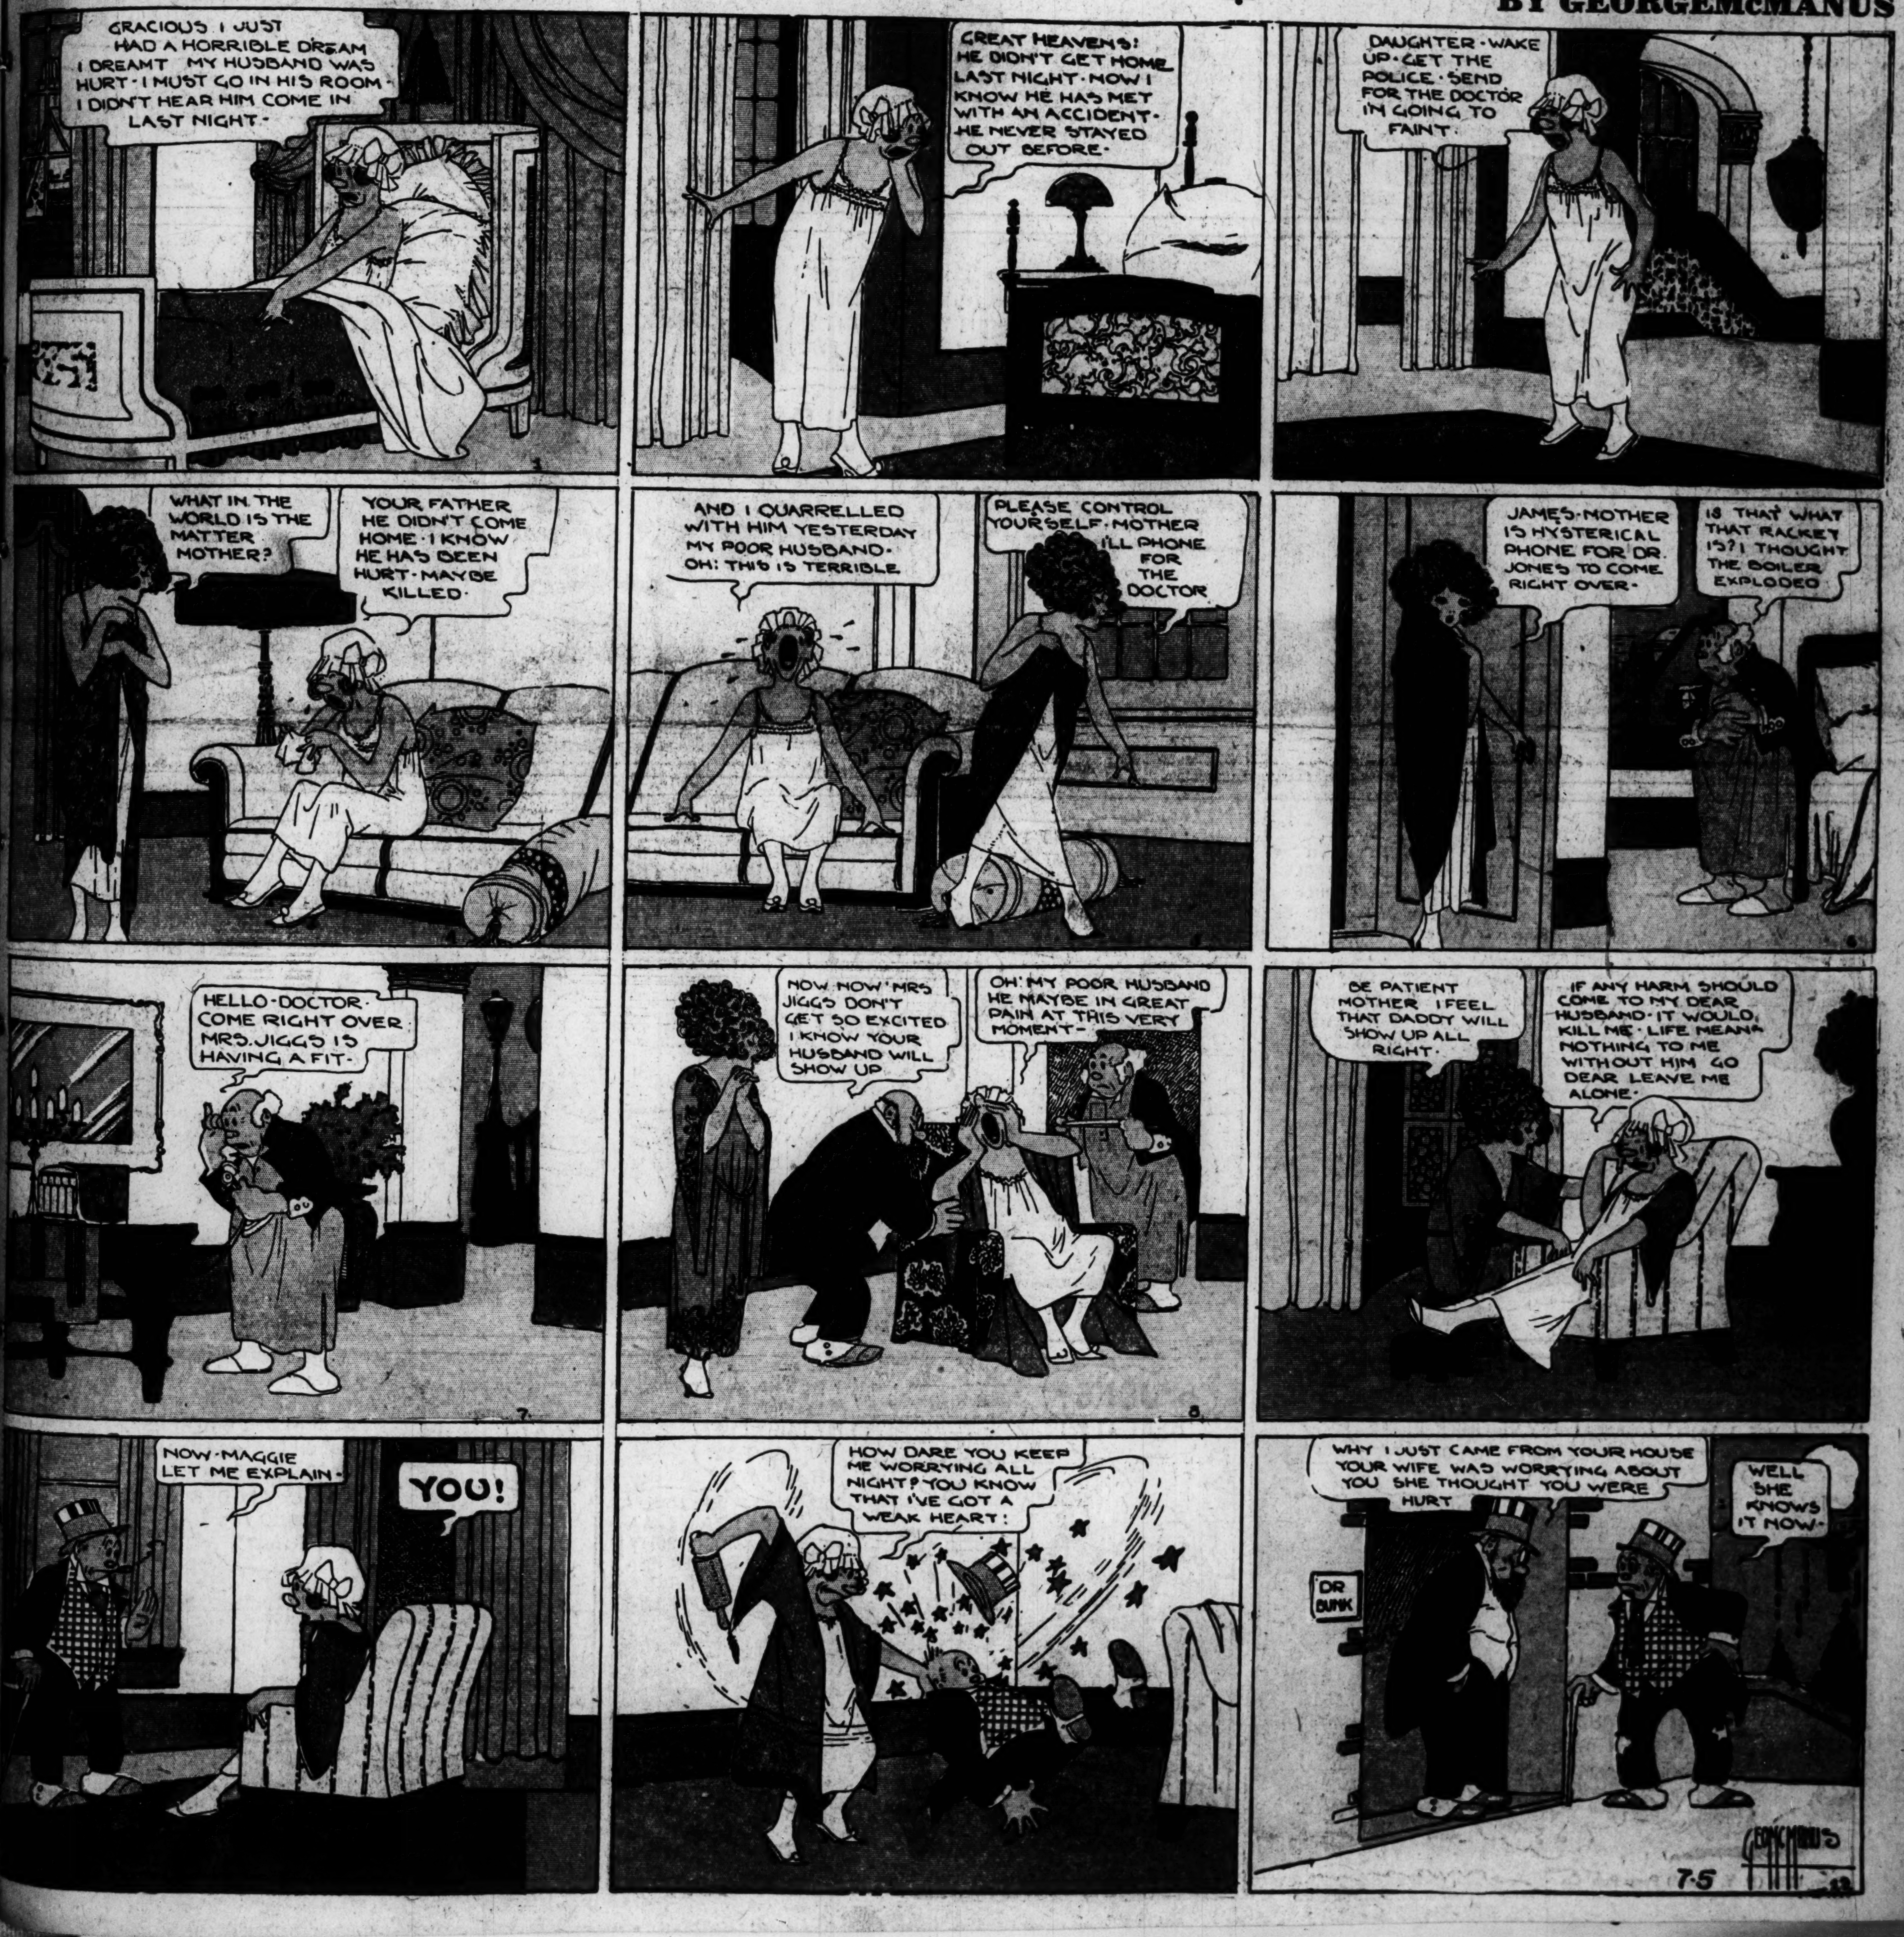
BRINGING UP FATHER

BY GEORGE McMANUS



GRACIOUS I JUST HAD A HORRIBLE DREAM I DREAMT MY HUSBAND WAS HURT - I MUST GO IN HIS ROOM - I DIDN'T HEAR HIM COME IN LAST NIGHT -
GREAT HEAVENS! HE DIDN'T GET HOME LAST NIGHT - NOW I KNOW HE HAS MET WITH AN ACCIDENT - HE NEVER STAYED OUT BEFORE -
DAUGHTER - WAKE UP - GET THE POLICE - SEND FOR THE DOCTOR I'M GOING TO FAINT.
WHAT IN THE WORLD IS THE MATTER MOTHER?
YOUR FATHER HE DIDN'T COME HOME - I KNOW HE HAS BEEN HURT - MAYBE KILLED -
AND I QUARRELLED WITH HIM YESTERDAY MY POOR HUSBAND - OH! THIS IS TERRIBLE
PLEASE CONTROL YOURSELF - MOTHER I'LL PHONE FOR THE DOCTOR
JAMES - MOTHER IS HYSTERICAL PHONE FOR DR. JONES TO COME RIGHT OVER -
IS THAT WHAT THAT RACKET IS? I THOUGHT THE BOILER EXPLODED
HELLO - DOCTOR - COME RIGHT OVER - MRS. JIGGS IS HAVING A FIT -
NOW NOW MRS JIGGS DON'T GET SO EXCITED I KNOW YOUR HUSBAND WILL SHOW UP
OH! MY POOR HUSBAND HE MAYBE IN GREAT PAIN AT THIS VERY MOMENT -
BE PATIENT MOTHER I FEEL THAT DADDY WILL SHOW UP ALL RIGHT -
IF ANY HARM SHOULD COME TO MY DEAR HUSBAND - IT WOULD KILL ME - LIFE MEANS NOTHING TO ME WITHOUT HIM GO DEAR LEAVE ME ALONE -
NOW - MAGGIE LET ME EXPLAIN -
YOU!
HOW DARE YOU KEEP ME WORRYING ALL NIGHT? YOU KNOW THAT I'VE GOT A WEAK HEART!
WHY I JUST CAME FROM YOUR HOUSE YOUR WIFE WAS WORRYING ABOUT YOU SHE THOUGHT YOU WERE HURT

BALLOT RECOUNT BEGUN IN CONTEST OVER MAYORALTY

First Step Taken to Determine Action Brought Against Mayor Miller by Democratic Opponent.

WORK TO CONTINUE UNTIL SEPTEMBER

Result Will Be Submitted to Circuit Judge Miller, Who Will Construe the Blanket Ballot Law.

A recount of the 238,526 votes cast in the last mayoralty election began in the office of the Election Board at the City Hall at 9:30 a. m. today as the first step in the determination of the contest of Mayor Miller's election, which has been brought by William L. Igoe, Democrat.

The contest centers about the Democratic allegation that votes intended for Igoe were counted for Mayor Miller and the Republican charge that fraud was committed. Chairman George Eigel of the Election Board said today that any discovery of fraud would be presented to the Circuit Attorney's office for action. The Circuit Attorney will not be represented at the Election Board office, however.

Contention of Democrats.

Igoe's contest notice asserts that the Election Board, following a ruling of former Attorney-General Barrett, instructed clerks and judges of election to count for Mayor Miller ballots which contained a cross in the circle at the head of the Republican column but with Mayor Miller's name scratched and Igoe's written in. Barrett had held that the blanket law prohibited such interlineation and that such a ballot was in reality a "straight" Republican vote. Ballots conversely marked were to be counted for Igoe, under this instruction.

It is alleged by attorneys for Igoe that Mayor Miller was "scratched" heavily in Republican strongholds and that if credit be given the apparent intent of the voter, Igoe will win by 6363 votes. The official returns gave Mayor Miller a majority of 3129.

Experienced clerks of the board opened the first box and began the recount of the votes in the presence of the special force of 30 clerks, the attorneys for Mayor Miller and Igoe and the Election Board members. After that, one box was taken to each of the eight tables where the recount proceeded with two Republican and two Democratic clerks, a stenographer and a Democratic and Republican attorney at each table.

Cost of $25,000.

A full statement of what the recount shows will be presented to attorneys for the principals at the close of each day, but they have been pledged not to divulge its contents until the close of the contest when the result will be certified to Circuit Judge Miller, who will then construe the blanket ballot law.

It is expected that the recount of the votes will not be completed until some time in September and the cost to the city will be approximately $25,000. Republicans have raised $27,000 to defend Mayor Miller's election and Democrats have a fund of $15,000 to carry forward Igoe's claim.

Since the election, April 7 last, the ballots have been stored in a vault at the Election Board office. Republicans and Democrats have maintained a force of six watchers each, who have worked eight-hour shifts. They have received $6 per day and thus far each party has spent $1620 for this work alone.

The opening of the vault is something of a ceremony, inasmuch as there are seven keys, four held by Republicans and three by Democrats. All must be used to gain access to the vault.

RICH MAN ADOPTS CADDY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 6.—George Huston, Excelsior Springs boy, who has been adopted by C. W. Coe, wealthy Chicago man, departed last night for Chicago to live with his foster father, whose name he has legally assumed.

Coe first became impressed with George about a year ago, when he was caddying for him on the Excelsior Springs golf links. Having no children or family of his own, he decided George was the type of a boy worthy of being given a chance to develop his natural ability and worth. A lawyer was engaged and, after getting the consent of George's parents, papers were filed in the Circuit Court and permission to adopt the boy was granted by Judge Hughes.
